STATE CLOSES SEASON WITH VICTORY

St. Stephen’s Falls Before Purple and Gold

State closed its season at Annandale Friday night with a victory over St. Stephen’s. The score was 35-24.

State forced to the front at the start and was never headed. Caravan and Johnson were the big men for State, the former caching six baskets from the field, the latter scoring three field goals from the field and a free shot and reaching field goal.

From the Stephen’s Coffin and White played the best game.

This winds up the season for State with a record of seven victories and six defeats which is a fine record when the class of the teams played is considered.

CONCERNING OUR ORCHESTRA

"Only six members in the orchestra?"

Yes, but it was fine — not much noise, though.

"The trouble is that there ought to be more instruments."

Is this universal criticism? No, but it's not very encouraging either. However, I believe it was the nature of the comments heard after last Friday's musical assembly. While nothing has been said against the quality of our orchestra, numerous members have been criticized as to its quantity. When it comes to a matter of numbers, it seems up to the college as a whole. While it is the director of the orchestra who determines quality and standard, there is no reason for our musically-inclined students to take it up for the training. After some diligent and faithful practicing you, too, might belong to this band or select little group. Can it be that you are not willing to come to rehearsals? Don't wait to be coaxed. We say coaxed, because you have already the instruments and an instrument department in your name. Everyone knows it is not lack of musical talent that is our drawback. There are at least fifty people in college who have instruments and are able to play them, but who have not volunteered them to our college orchestra. What good is your violin, mandolin, guitar, or any other instrument in your case — all locked up? The public relations extension is extended to the entire college to bring your musical instruments and come to the next orchestra rehearsal. The music department of college has shown wonderful growth during the past season and especially for the past month, and monthly musical assemblies. Are we students going to help in making these wonderful improvements one of the best in college? Under such an able direction, is this the best we can do for the orchestra? There is a bright future ahead for this new department. Let's be able to look back and feel that we have done our bit further the ideals set before us.

ALSO ESTABLISH AN INTERCOLLEGIATE MAGAZINE

Barbara, St. Hlojcek, Smith, Vassar, and Wellesley colleges have planned an intercollegiate magazine which will be published once a year. This magazine will contain the best literary efforts from the combined literary boards of all these colleges. The first issue appeared this month, and the greater quantity and variety of subject matter, and the interest evidenced by the novelty of the magazine show the value of continuing its publication.

To the Editor of Slate College News:

Why must the college colors and ring be changed? There are but few college traditions at State College, and if every graduating class attempts to change what few there are, how are we to know our college — even ten years hence? What is so lacking in the present a new idea in color, or a new idea for the ring — is that sufficient reason for such a radical change? Such behavior puts us in the same class with high and normal schools. The ring one standardized some three or four years ago.

If, during this period of universal interest and desire for change someone wants to start something new, let him devise some way of which the athletic field may become a reality before the rest of us who were earlier contributors to the fund are dusty back. Help to make the utmost so that Slate College is fast developing into a college. When traditions must be changed in a "snazzy-pants" fashion, then let us cease to refer to it as a college. If we're going to act like children, let us call it a school. S. C. T. has a fine start as a college, who spoil a perfectly good tradition for so small a reason as those advanced? Let's stick to our colors and our ring.

THE POLITICAL SCIENCE CLUB

Only one year ago, a group of students interested in public and political administration and politics — pertaining to such, exhibited this interest by organizing a Political Science Club in Slate College. If it is true that all good things die, all is well, but broad-minded State College students would have better and therefore look with hopeful eyes to a revival of this interest.

I have with great pride the Political Science Club was organized last year by the class of '20, for it was chiefly through its efforts that the organization succeeded. Are we as students now to give up the ideals of the class of '20? Was it their efforts in vain? No, for there are still in college those whose initiative has already brought the organization Clearinghouse. Juniors, yes, charter members of the club, are striving to take an example of their sister class. They hope that all interested in political science will join the club. History majors and minors, here's an opportunity to get some practical knowledge.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

With the close of the basketball season the Athletic Council, comprised of the students of State College, has asked "News" to publish the following communication:

Dr. C. Edward Jones,
Superintendent of Albany Public Schools,

My dear Dr. Jones:

In behalf of the Athletic Council and student body of New York State College for Teachers, I wish to thank you for the generous cooperation that we received from the students and employees of the Albany public schools during the season, and especially for the use of the high school gymnasium for our contests.

Sincerely yours,
F. B. SNAVELY,
Athletic Director.

TRAITIONS

Perhaps some will say that we are like the Loos who played sale and ly say telling me to sew something after he said that he never started to do it, when we start to talk about traditions again. But we are not going to propose that old tradition be kept — the supporters of the Purple and Gold have shown that they will — only that new traditions be made. Furthermore, we believe that the saying, "One can't change iron in the blot," though old and tired, is too true to be thrown in the waste-paper basket.

So may we suggest that perhaps while we are standing so firmly behind our colors and ring there are some other things which would make fine college traditions. For example, what about a really traditional? Anna Mater, as was suggested recently in chapel, has been reported that at Alumni meetings the song leader Dr. Ash used to ask for the Anna Mater because it brings forth such a variety of tunes. Again and again what about making a real tradition out of that resolution to leave books and papers outside of chapel? We have noticed that students are starting to fall in this already. Almost, not wanting, not too true to be thrown in the waste-paper basket.

able to distinguish between a creditable entertainment and a deliberately staged comic—and for the latter, at any rate, there is a decided difference between a heartily bright and the feminine "heh heh" because one of the boys looks embarrassed.

What ever you do, do you people who always see something to make fun of in others? Do you ever ever try to sing or did you ever realize how funny you might look if you did? There's very few, most embarrassed, most unsuccessful performers who have the nerve and willingness to get up on the platform and try something for his college is better than you are. Everybody in college ought to turn around and laugh—laugh at you, you look so foolish, sitting there with no expression on your face and not knowing how to do anything but laugh—at others.

INTERCOLLEGATES

The program for the coming week at Schenectady Polytechnic Institute, Troy, is not so varied as it has been the custom during the past indoor season. STUDENT ASSEMBLY

The audience chanted loudly for the chorus that made the song so real and the whole student body united in singing "Gaudamusigitur," which was probably the best song of the evening. We feel sure that St. Stephen's is and is going to be a "living college," and the next time we give a concert we hope that no fear of incompetency will prevent the college orchestra from taking part.

Student assembly was most heartily enjoyed by all present, and it is hoped that more assemblies will be given over to musical evenings.

OUTDOOR BASEBALL

The first tilt will take place April 23 at old field Park with St. Stephen's as the visitors.

Last year St. Stephen's defeated St. Stephen's in the first game of the season, but it is known that St. Stephen's has excelled material this year, and this year's team is a second or third time will be the duty of the cheer leader.
