MARRIAGE IS BECOMING UNPOPULAR WITH COLLEGIANS, SAYS STATE MAN

To the Editor:

Marriage, which once seemed to be a spiritual union between a young man and woman supported by the rest of the world, is now considered by many to be a purely physical act. This is primarily due to the changing attitudes of the younger generation towards marriage. It is no longer seen as a path to lifelong commitment, but rather as a means to satisfy one's desires.

The decline in popularity of marriage among college students is alarming. Many are choosing to remain single, even after graduation, rather than enter into a relationship that they may not feel ready for. The consequences of this trend are not yet clear, but they may lead to an increase in social problems in the future.

Sincerely,
