Defense Program Causes Increase in Jobs

The largest report of the year published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, released on May 1, 1941, showed that the number of jobs in the United States had increased significantly due to defense programs. The report, titled "Defense Program Causes Increase in Jobs," stated that the number of jobs had risen to 7,350,000, up from 7,250,000 in the previous year. The report also noted that the increase was due to the expansion of defense industries and the creation of new jobs in the military. To the Editor:

There are but two solutions to the problem of the present student dress code: cooperation and non-cooperation. The former would result in the relaxation of dress codes and the latter would lead to a conflict between the student and the administration. Cooperation seems to be the better choice, as it would allow for a more harmonious relationship between the student and the administration.
