Today marks the beginning of a new year for State College Student Association and all of its officers in elected capacities.

As you go about your daily business and see the faces of your friends, take a moment to think about the office bearing that person. It is not easy to be an officer, but it is a rewarding job. If you have faith in your representatives, you should be interested in what they are doing.

Because your representatives have been elected by you, you have the responsibility to tell them how you feel about their actions. If you think they are doing a good job, tell them. If you think they should do something different, tell them. This is the only way they can know how you feel.

Bolstering the SA officers is the Student Senate, two classes in which you have an automatic interest. The Senate is made up of people in which you have faith and are interested in their actions. It is significant that so many people have faith in these four assemblies that remain, your intelligent, experienced, competent and, above all, dedicated officers.

Budget hearings are only the beginning of the student officers' work. They will be doing their best to see that your intelligent, experienced, competent and, above all, dedicated officers.
