How the stars got started

Alan Ladd

I won a Hollywood contest to play a 16-year-old boy in a movie.

I went to making movies after I'd been a smoke-jumper for a year. Now I'm a movie star.

I started smoking camels
because so many of my friends did. Once I started,
I knew what drugs were for.
For mildness and flavor,
you can't beat 'em!

for Mildness and Flavor.

IS THAT NOT?

I don't know about you, but I think that our President, Mr. Dobson, and other administrators are not doing all they can to improve our campus life. It seems to me that they are more interested in maintaining the status quo than in actually trying to make things better for the students.

I recently attended a meeting where the President was discussing the future of the college. He said that we should be proud of our tradition, but also that we should be open to new ideas. However, I didn't see much evidence of this in his actions.

For example, our campus buildings are old and run-down. The facilities are inadequate, and the security is nonexistent. Yet, when I spoke up at the meeting, no one seemed to care. No one asked if I had any suggestions for improving these conditions. It's as if they're afraid of change.

I think that the administration should be more receptive to student input. Our opinions should be taken seriously, and our suggestions should be considered. After all, we are the ones who benefit from these facilities, and we should have a say in how they are run.

I'm not saying that we should tear down the buildings and start from scratch. However, some basic improvements could be made, such as adding more study rooms, improving the lighting, and ensuring that the doors are always locked. These are simple things that could be done without breaking the bank.

I'm not sure if the administration will ever listen to us, but I will continue to speak up and try to make a difference. If nothing else, I hope that my voice will be heard.

What are your thoughts on this? Do you think that the administration should be more receptive to student input? Do you agree with me that the facilities need some improvements? Let me know your thoughts in the comments!
