Chesterfield

...you'll find MORE PLEASURE in Chesterfield's milder better taste
For Greeks Only

Last week saw the presentation of the scholarship play, and again we all delved into another twelve-month's scholastic lethargy. It seems as though every year brings with it a new set of characters and devices by which the play is intended to amuse the public. But this year's production was no exception, for it failed in its purpose to entertain. It is the belief of the several houses that the play is not only a failure but also a disservice to the school. The production of such a piece is not only a waste of time and energy but also a reflection on the school's reputation.

However, the play did have one redeeming feature. It brought the students together in a spirit of camaraderie and teamwork. The members of each house worked hard to bring their scenes to life, and in doing so, they demonstrated their dedication to the school and to the Greek system.

Although the play may have been a disappointment, it serves as a reminder of the value of hard work and dedication. The students of the school are encouraged to continue to strive for excellence in all aspects of their lives. The play was a failure, but it was a failure that was redeemed by the spirit of cooperation and teamwork that it fostered.
