College Teacher Had Engagement Party Last Week

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Wright, of Leland, Miss., to George L. Miller, of Albany, was made last week by the family of the bride at a dinner given by Miss Wright's parents at her home in Leland. George L. Miller, former resident of State College, is a graduate of the University of Illinois. He is now a teacher in the public schools of Leland, Miss.

STATE STAGE

A COMMON THIEF?

Students are accused to the disappearance of books and personal articles. Sometimes the books result from carelessness. Occasionally other reasons are alleged. Although the property of the college is often removed from their owners, it is possible to repossess it in a majority of cases. The students are reminded of the necessity of being careful with their possessions.

The significance of the situation is also highlighted by the example of the student who recently lost his books and personal effects. The student was able to repossess them within a few hours, but only after a search of the entire campus. It is believed that similar results can be achieved in the future.

The students are urged to place the responsibility for the loss of personal articles on themselves. The college will not be held responsible for any lost articles.

WILL YOU USE IT?

The vote taken by the News in a recent poll was not a complete success. The students expressed their desire for the addition of a new course of study to the curriculum. However, the results were not conclusive, and the college administration is left in the position of having to make a decision.

The administration has also acknowledged its responsibility for the decision. It has stated that the final decision will be made after further consideration of the results of the poll.

Service

A recent survey has shown that the majority of students are satisfied with the current state of affairs. However, some students have expressed concern about the lack of opportunities for service in the community. The college administration is considering ways to increase the number of service opportunities available to students.

The students are encouraged to participate in service opportunities in the community. The administration will provide information on available opportunities and will work with the students to develop plans for service.

LOOKING FORWARD

The administration has released the Spring 2014 calendar, which includes important dates and events for the upcoming semester. The calendar is available for viewing online or can be obtained from the registrar's office.

The administration encourages students to plan ahead and to take advantage of the opportunities available to them.

dr. thompson's class in debating has interesting discussions on live topics

Debating and discussion among the students have been responsible for many of the innovations at State College. This is the case because the students are encouraged to participate in the debates and discussions. Debating and discussion are essential for the development of the students' critical thinking skills. This is why Dr. Thompson, the College's debate masters, has been so successful in teaching the students to think critically. He has used various methods to encourage the students to engage in debates and discussions. He has used a variety of topics, such as politics, economics, and social issues, to encourage the students to think critically.
