Albany hosts CCNY tonight in Capital District Championship basketball action.

Game action against the Danes will determine the winner of the Capital District Tournament. The Danes, led by senior Bob Tidwell, have set them back somewhat, and will probably be more than adequately filled by the injury of veteran guard John Zadoorian. The team has been juggling people in and out, finding themselves in grey areas and having a difficult time trying to be really good. Joe Wood, Sr. will have pitted somewhat behind Dickelman in last year's final, and Wood seems logical favorites. But I'm not sure Albany will be out indefinitely.

Casey and the Great Game will be shooting for the Capital District Championship beginning tonight.

"We need it very badly," said Coach Casey. "It's a good game against the Danes. We got Columbia in the first round and are going to have a tough game against the Danes." Casey said. "The only way we can beat the Danes is if we get the game going at the right time."

"I think we might be a little better," commented coach Casey. "We've been juggling a lot of people and are going to have a tough time trying to get the game going at the right time."

"I think the game is going to be a good game," added Casey. "We got the game going at the right time and we're going to have a tough game against the Danes." Casey said. "The only way we can beat the Danes is if we get the game going at the right time."

'The Day After' sparks strong campus reaction

I expect that it raised the general level of awareness on our campus. It will be a let down to speak to classes on this." -- Paul Hernek

"The Day After" is a two and a half hour movie, "The Day After," that appeared on the ABC network as a one-hour special and repeated two more times. The movie is being shown at the Campus Center and some residential lounges to view the film.

"The Day After," which cost $2 million to make, was produced by the Independent Film Co. and directed by John Doubleday. The film shows the day after a nuclear war.

"We needed it very badly," said Mr. Doubleday, who is president of the Independent Film Co. "We got the money to make the film and are going to have a tough time trying to get the film going at the right time."

"I think the game is going to be a good game," added Mr. Doubleday. "We got the money to make the film and are going to have a tough time trying to get the film going at the right time."

"get Arafat and his clique out."

"There's no real problem," another government official who declined to be named. He said the 2,000 government workers who lost their jobs under the new plan would lose a combined $6 million in wages during the first year alone.

"Many of the workers were in their last month of employment, and they were going to be laid off anyway," the official said. "But now they're not going to get any severance pay, and they're not going to be able to go on unemployment insurance."

Edward H. First, president of a small business in the area, said the new plan would hurt his company's bottom line. He said his company has been forced to lay off 10 workers over the past few weeks, and he expects more layoffs in the future.

"We're just trying to survive," First said. "We don't have any choice but to cut costs."

"The new plan is going to make it much harder for us to keep our doors open," he said. "We're going to have to lay off more workers, and we're going to have to cut back on everything else."
Overspending leads to financial worries for SA

By Bob Shores

Student Association, currently faced with the possibility of overspending in its budget, is trying to balance its finances.

The Student Association has been facing financial difficulties, with overspending leading to concerns about the organization's financial health. To address this issue, the association is considering implementing several measures to ensure proper financial management.

Under the current situation, the association aims to reduce overspending by restructuring its financial planning and implementing strict budget controls. This involves reassessing its financial projections and ensuring that all expenses are carefully monitored.

The measures include reviewing all expenditures to identify areas where costs can be reduced. The association is also considering seeking alternative funding sources to offset overspending.

To prevent overspending in the future, the association is planning to implement a more rigorous budgeting process. This will involve establishing clear financial goals and allocating funds more effectively.

In conclusion, the association is committed to addressing the overspending issue and ensuring that its financial resources are used efficiently. By implementing these measures, the association aims to maintain its financial stability and continue offering valuable services to its members.

Transcribing service proposed to aid students

By Ailene Brown

Transcribing service would benefit students.

The Union of University Women (UAW) and Greyhound have discussed the possibility of offering a transcribing service to students. This service would enable students to attend lectures and review the transcripts instead of taking detailed notes during class.

The proposed service would be available to students at a fee of $30 per class. It would provide a verbatim transcript of the lecture notes, which students could then review at their convenience.

The service would be offered to students who have attended the lectures. This would ensure that the transcripts are accurate and relevant to the students' needs.

In addition to benefiting students, the service would provide an economic advantage to the university. It would generate revenue for the university and reduce the administrative burden of handling requests for lectures.

The proposed service would benefit both students and the university by providing a convenient and efficient way for students to access lecture notes.

The Story

Because of the productive labor of drivers, mechanics, and other employees, Greyhound has been able to provide comfortable and safe transportation for a large number of students across the country.

However, the company has been facing financial difficulties, leading to decreased services and increased fares for riders.

Greyhound workers are seeking higher wages, better working conditions, and the right to organize and bargain collectively. These demands are being met by the ATU, which is leading the strike against Greyhound.

The ATU workers are working to improve the quality of service for riders and ensure fair treatment for all employees. They are willing to continue their strike until their demands are met.

In conclusion, the Greyhound workers are standing up for their rights and the rights of all employees. By supporting the ATU, riders can contribute to the betterment of the company and the lives of all workers.

Gathering celebrates Hispanic students' unity

By Rebecca Linn

Puerto Rican Stevie Dwyer: "This is my first year here at SUNYA and I'm looking forward to meeting people from all over the world. We're a diverse group and I think that's what makes this place so special."

SUNYA Professor Edna Acosta: "It's important for Hispanic students to unite and support each other. We can't just rely on the government to take care of our needs, we have to do it ourselves."

SUNYA Student: "I'm excited to see more Hispanic students involved in campus activities. It's important to have a voice and to be heard."

Uncovering The Rolling Stones

From the moment the Stones have been people of their generation, it has been recognized that they have a knack for creating a stir. Their music has always been rebellious, and their image is that of a rock group that represents the counterculture. The band has always been associated with fashion and style, and their live performances have been legendary.

The Rolling Stones are an English rock band formed in London in 1962. The band consists of Mick Jagger (lead vocals and rhythm guitarist), Keith Richards (rhythm and lead vocals), Bill Wyman (bass guitar), Charlie Watts (drums), and Bobby Keys (saxophone). They are one of the most successful and influential rock bands of all time.

The band's early success is attributed to their unique sound, which combines elements of blues, rock and roll, and R&B. Their music is characterized by their energetic live performances, memorable songs, and rebellious attitude. The band has sold over 150 million records worldwide and has been inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

The Rolling Stones have released over 100 singles and 25 studio albums. Their most popular songs include "(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction," "Paint It Black," "It's Only Rock 'n Roll," "Brown Sugar," and "Respectable." They have also released many successful albums, including "Beggars Banquet," "Exile on Main Street," and "Some Girls."

The band's influence can be seen in the music of countless artists, and their impact on popular culture cannot be overstated. They have been a driving force in the rock and roll genre, and their legacy continues to inspire new generations of musicians.

The Rolling Stones are currently on tour, performing their greatest hits and new material. They are known for their energetic live shows and their ability to keep their audience engaged.

The band has received numerous awards and honors, including 21 Grammy Awards, a Grammy Lifetime Achievement Award, and a Rock and Roll Hall of Fame induction. They are considered one of the greatest rock bands of all time, and their influence on popular culture cannot be overstated.

More than a movie

The major media attention focused on the ABC movie "The New York Times" unfolding of the O.J. Simpson trial. The "New York Times" movie was so controversial that it eventually led to its withdrawal from television and theatres. The movie depicted a fictional account of the trial and the reaction of the media to it.

Colin Hurst, "New York Times" producer, said that the movie aimed to be a "realistic and honest" portrayal of the trial. However, it was met with criticism from both sides. The Simpson family and some of the trial's participants called for its banning, while others praised it for its boldness.

Abuse of power

The “New York Times” story had to be updated to match the new evidence coming to light. The story revealed a pattern of corruption within the government, leading to the resignation of several high-ranking officials.

Technical problems

The ABC movie was plagued by technical issues, including unsynchronized sound and projection problems. Despite these issues, the movie was eventually shown in its entirety.

Clear the air

The ABC movie faced controversy due to its depiction of the trial. Some called for its banning, while others praised it for its boldness.

Upheld trust

In the coming months and years, everyone will remember the challenges that the media faced in covering the trial. The "New York Times" showed that it was possible to cover such a complex story with care and integrity.

Big Brother/Big Sister program helps city kids

By Daryl Allen

Big Brother/Big Sister was started several years ago and is a service to the Albany community. The program pairs city children with SUNYA students. Volunteers who do not live in Albany are also paired with SUNYA students. Volunteers and city children are to meet weekly for at least an hour. The children can be single, double, or triplets. Each volunteer is assigned a Suny-A student who is the co-director of the program. The SUNYA student helps coordinate the program, publicize, and display the information. The student is also responsible for the counseling of the children.

According to Allen, Big Brother/Big Sister was started as a service for the city children who are in need of help. The city students are paired with SUNYA students who are to meet with the children weekly. However, the program needs more volunteers.

Allen explains that there are several reasons why the program needs more volunteers. The first reason is that the program needs more SUNYA volunteers. The SUNYA volunteers are the ones who are responsible for the counseling of the children. The SUNYA volunteers need to be available to meet with the children weekly. The SUNYA volunteers also need to be available to meet with the children on a one-on-one basis.

The second reason is that the program needs more city children. The city children need to be available to meet with the SUNYA volunteers. The city children need to be available to meet with the SUNYA volunteers on a one-on-one basis.

The third reason is that the program needs more SUNYA volunteers who are available to meet with the city children. The SUNYA volunteers need to be available to meet with the city children on a one-on-one basis.

Allen explains that the program needs more volunteers because the program needs more SUNYA volunteers, city children, and SUNYA volunteers who are available to meet with the city children on a one-on-one basis.

The fourth reason is that the program needs more SUNYA volunteers who are available to meet with the city children on a one-on-one basis. The SUNYA volunteers need to be available to meet with the city children on a one-on-one basis.

The fifth reason is that the program needs more SUNYA volunteers who are available to meet with the city children on a one-on-one basis. The SUNYA volunteers need to be available to meet with the city children on a one-on-one basis.
Tenure system questioned

Professor Taylor said that one of the key points in the debate over tenure is the need for a balance between research and teaching. "There should be a way for these two areas to co-exist," he said. "We need to find a way to promote both research and teaching." Taylor added that the university’s current tenure system is flawed because it does not take into account the amount of time a professor spends on research vs. teaching. He said that the system is "too focused on research" and that it "punishes" professors who spend more time on teaching.

President Ramaley said that the university’s tenure system is "well-established" and that it "works well." He added that the university is "committed to maintaining a balance between research and teaching." Ramaley said that the university’s tenure system is "fair" and that it "provides a clear path for professors to achieve tenure." He added that the university is "focused on improving the tenure process."
