About Newspapers . . .

"Freedom Goes Where the Newspaper Goes"—so says the slogan of the National Newspaper Week Association, which is calling on all Americans to support and celebrate their "free" press for the week of September 25-October 1.

The ranks of the press—newspapers, magazines, radio and television—have doubled in the past ten years, according to the National Newspaper Week Association, which has created the National Newspaper Week to celebrate the freedom of the press and to stimulate public interest in the press.

"Freedom goes where the newspaper goes," said the association's president, Charles B. Haines, in a speech at the National Newspaper Week Convention in Chicago.

"The press is a vital force in American life," said Haines. "It is the voice of the people, and it is the means by which the people can express their views and ideas."

The National Newspaper Week Association has created a series of special events and activities for the week of September 25-October 1, including a special edition of the Chicago Tribune, which features articles on the importance of the press and its role in American life.

The association is also encouraging people to write letters to their newspapers expressing their support for the press and to participate in other activities planned for the week.

The National Newspaper Week Association is a non-profit organization that was founded in 1917 to promote the cause of a free press and to encourage public support for the press.

The association's president, Charles B. Haines, said that the association is committed to the cause of a free press and to the importance of the press in American life.

Skidmore Tells Of Nuremberg Trials, Concentration Camps; Recommends Plan Through Language For World Cooperation

When the United States goes to Nuremberg next month, it will be armed against words. This was the theme of Dr. Charles A. Draper, professor of English, who told the State College News that the trial will be the supreme test of diplomacy and oratory. "If it fails, no other factor in the world will be able to save us," Dr. Draper said.
