Danes meet Rochester in the ECACs tonight

By Marc Hazel

The Albany State Great Danes may not have started an invasion in the NCAA, but they have certainly provided the quality to make a run at the ECAC tourney this year.

The Danes ended the regular season with a 77-57 victory over Hamilton last night to capture the ECAC championship, and to clinch the outright conference title for the first time since 1973.

The Danes, who finished the season with a 16-3 record, are the top seed in this year's tournament, and will face third-seeded Rochester in the opening round tonight at 8:00 p.m.

By Alan D'Andrea

The J.V. Danes, who were 16-1 in the regular season and helped to send the Danes to the ECAC Tourney, lost by a score of 64-62 to Hudson Valley Community College in the final game of the season.

The Danes ended the season with a 13-6 record, after going 6-0 in the first semester due to academic ineligibility and having their sights on the Continentals, they will first meet Rochester in the ECACs tonight.

UUP evaluates effects of proposed budget cuts

By John Fox

The Albany Student Press Corporation has decided to reduce its operating budget by 20% this year due to the cuts in state funds.

The newspaper, which is published twice a week, will continue to operate on a reduced budget, but some changes may be necessary in the future.

The decision was made after careful consideration of the financial situation and the needs of the students.

US involvement in South Korea could initiate a nuclear war
By Larry Nuss

International students and workers at SUNYA are concerned with the situation in South Korea. A forum, "International Jobs: Where They Are and How to Get Them," will be held Thursday by the International Studies Forum, which is cooperating with the Career Center of SUNYA. The forum is expected to provide international students with information about careers and job opportunities.

One student commented that SUNYA's career center is not very helpful.

"In the past," Easter said, "The US has been taking a more proactive role in the situation. However, there is no clear policy and no clear plan.""Easter described US military and economic actions in South Korea and the implications of nuclear proliferation.

Easter advocated an end to US support and encouragement for South Korea's nuclear program. He said, "The US should pull out of South Korea and have nothing to do with the situation." Easter said that the US should remove its nuclear weapons from South Korea, not only to prevent a nuclear war but also to ensure peace in the region. He stressed the importance of peaceful solutions and the need for international cooperation and understanding.

Easter also pointed out that students in the class were not able to purchase tickets for the concert and that their tickets were lost, underlining the issue of the list system. As one student said, "The list system is unfair and needs improvement." He recommended the establishment of a more efficient ticketing system and a way to ensure fair distribution of tickets to students.

According to Easter, students were allowed to stand and socialize during the concert. However, the students had no idea what was going on and were frustrated. He criticized the lack of communication and transparency in the planning process.

Easter said, "This concert is a perfect example of how international students are treated in the US. The US should take a more active role in promoting education and cultural exchange, not just in South Korea but in other regions as well." Easter expressed his hope for a brighter future and a stronger cooperation among countries.

Easter also pointed out that the situation in South Korea is a perfect illustration of the importance of international cooperation and understanding. He said, "The US should work towards promoting peace and understanding in the region and not just focus on its own interests." Easter emphasized the need for a more peaceful and cooperative approach in the resolution of international disputes.

Easter's comments were met with a mixed reaction from the students. Some students agreed with Easter and echoed his concerns about the US role in South Korea, while others criticized his approach and called for more constructive solutions. The forum was a lively and engaging discussion, providing students with an opportunity to share their thoughts and engage in a meaningful conversation about international jobs and the situation in South Korea.

Easter concluded his remarks by expressing his hope for a better future and a more peaceful world. He said, "We should work towards promoting understanding and cooperation among countries and not just focus on our own interests." Easter stressed the importance of international cooperation and understanding and encouraged students to take an active role in promoting peace and understanding in the region.

The threats stoop low

In a recent issue in the Albany Student Press, a letter was written which I believe merits attention. It expressed the fear that the situation in the Middle East could lead to war. This is a valid concern, and one that should not be ignored. However, the letter went on to express a fear that the response to this situation could be worse than the problem itself. This is a dangerous sentiment, and one that should be addressed.

Selective blindness

The student body of this university is the largest in the world, and yet it seems to lack a sense of responsibility and accountability. The recent events in the Middle East have brought attention to the issue of selective blindness, and it is concerning to see how little our university has addressed this issue. The Albany Student Press has done a commendable job in bringing this to light, but the student body as a whole needs to take responsibility for this.

Cultural antagonism

The editorial on page 3 discusses cultural antagonism. It is important to recognize that cultural differences are a natural part of the world, and that understanding and respecting these differences is crucial for promoting peace and understanding. The editorial provides some examples of cultural antagonism, and it is important to recognize that these issues are not unique to this university.

Liddy-Leary farce

The editorial on page 4 discusses the Liddy-Leary debate. It is important to recognize that this debate was a failed attempt to promote dialogue and understanding. The debate was poorly organized, and the participants did not engage in meaningful discussion. The editorial provides some examples of the shortcomings of this debate, and it is important to recognize that these issues are not unique to this university.

A question of culture

The editorial on page 5 discusses the issue of cultural relativism. It is important to recognize that cultural relativism is a complex issue, and that understanding cultural differences is crucial for promoting peace and understanding. The editorial provides some examples of cultural relativism, and it is important to recognize that these issues are not unique to this university.
Pan-Africanism seeks worldwide black unity

By Aileen Brown

Pan-Africanism is a quest for the identity and homeland by the dispersed African peoples who were in the Caribbean and in North and South America."

Pan-Africanism, continued Molotsi, saw itself as the foundation of a worldwide movement that is and will continue to be necessary for the liberation of the people of Africa. Molotsi also stressed the importance of understanding the African heritage, culture, and society. He emphasized the need for political and economic struggle, and the unity of the African people.

Pan-Africanism, he said, is "a combination of getting rid of colonialism, racism, and imperialism, and working out a way to unite all the African peoples."

He cited examples of successful Pan-African movements, such as the struggle for independence in South Africa, and the fight for liberation in the Congo. These movements, he said, were successful because they were based on a common African identity and a sense of unity.

Molotsi also discussed the role of education in Pan-Africanism, and the importance of educating the African people about their history and culture. He said that education was the key to unlocking the potential of the African people and to achieving their ultimate freedom.

He also emphasized the importance of economic development, and the need for the African countries to work together to achieve economic prosperity.

Molotsi concluded by calling for the unity of the African peoples, and the need for a Pan-African consciousness. He said that only through unity and cooperation can the African peoples achieve their ultimate freedom.

Pan-Africanism is a worldwide movement that is necessary for the liberation of the African peoples. It is a movement of the African people, for the African people, and by the African people. It is a movement of unity, of cooperation, and of struggle. It is a movement that is necessary for the future of Africa and the world.

Albany indoor tracksters compete in Cortland

By Teri Karsay

The Albany State women's indoor track team finished fourth at the SUNYAC Indoor Championships held in Cortland, N.Y., this past weekend.

"It was a very successful weekend," said Coach Richard Riggins. "We had a lot of good performances, and overall, we did very well." The team scored 108 points to place fourth, behind SUNY Cortland, Binghamton, and New Paltz.

Sophomore Marc Mercurio broke the school record in the 600-meter run, finishing with a time of 1:25.18. Mercurio had previously held the record with a time of 1:27.00.

Riggins won his heat and placed second in the 400-meter dash with a time of 51.9 seconds. Freshman Ian Clements just missed qualifying for States in the 3000-meter run, finishing with a time of 9:41.5.

On the men's side, the team placed third with 104 points. Senior Eric Newton set a personal best in the 3200-meter run, finishing with a time of 8:59.84. The team's time of 13:06.50 in the 4x800-meter relay was also a personal best for the team.

"Our performance was outstanding," said Coach John Henihan. "We had a lot of personal bests and a lot of good performances." The Danes showed improvement throughout the season and were more pleased than displeased with their performance.

"We are a very young team," added Henihan. "We have a lot of potential, and we are working hard to improve. The team is improving every meet, and we are looking forward to next season."
