Siena Clouts Dannes, 7-2

by Michael Piskarski

Proctor's Dave Smith carried a no-hitter and started the inning with a 2-0 lead. The visitors rallied with two runs in the fifth inning, but the Booters would come back to win the game 7-6.

A&G Dean Controversy Unsettled

The debate over the appointment of a new dean of the Arts and Sciences at SUNY Albany continues. The controversy has raised questions about the selection process and the qualifications of the candidates.

Ithaca: The Big One

by Nathan Meltzer

The Ithaca Bombers have been on a hot streak, winning their last three games. The team is currently ranked number one in the nation (Division III) against the next team on their schedule. Coach Ford just sums it up by saying, "I'm excited to see how they respond to our defense."

Graduate students and first time borrowers may be interested to hear that there may be alternative loans available. The National Direct Student Loan (NDSL) program has overcome some of the hurdles that initially stymied its success. Director Whitlock feels that more students should apply for the NDSL program since it offers low, fixed interest rates and flexible repayment plans. He also mentioned that the program is now open to sophomores and juniors, not just seniors and sophomores as was the case in the past.

Senator Nyquist's proposal for CUNY tuition increases has been the topic of much discussion among students and faculty. While the University Senate met on September 5 at Mohawk Campus to discuss the proposal, the Senate was divided on its merits. Senator Alfred A. Nyquist, the Chairman of the Senate, presented a report on the University's financial situation and outlined the need for increased revenue. The report included statistics on the increasing cost of education, the rise in tuition fees, and the resulting financial burden on families. Senator Nyquist emphasized that the University had a responsibility to its students to provide quality education and that increased tuition fees were necessary to fund this mission.

However, some members of the Senate expressed concern about the impact of these increases on students, particularly those from low-income families. Senator David B. Cohen argued that the University should consider alternative funding mechanisms, such as increasing student involvement in decision-making processes and exploring new revenue streams. He also suggested that the University might consider seeking funding from external sources, such as grants or partnerships with local businesses.

In his personal last week, Nyquist cited figures just compiled by the CUNY Commission on Higher Education. Nyquist said the Department of Education reports that 49% of all CUNY students were from low and middle income families and that the university's proposal, if adopted, could bring in almost $25 million in TAP revenue each year. Moreover, Nyquist noted that the proposal would increase the university's financial stability and allow it to continue providing high-quality education to its students.

The proposal would also bring in new revenue sources, such as student fees and special event tickets. Nyquist noted that the university currently has a deficit of $25 million and that the proposal would help to close this gap. He also emphasized that the proposal would help to ensure the university's financial sustainability in the long run.

In conclusion, Senator Nyquist's proposal for CUNY tuition increases has sparked a lively debate among students and faculty. While some members of the Senate expressed concern about the impact of these increases on students, particularly those from low-income families, others argued that the University had a responsibility to its students to provide quality education and that increased tuition fees were necessary to fund this mission. As the debate continues, it is clear that the University community is divided on the issue, and that more work needs to be done to address the concerns of all stakeholders.
Feminist Groups Hold Fourth Rally in Albany

by Adrienne Rainwater

The South annual Women's Day was held in Albany on Saturday, April 7. The day was capped off by a Women's Day rally at the State Capitol. Approximately 200 women and supporters took part in the rally, which was organized by the Albany Women's Action Network and the New York Women's Law Center.

The rally featured speeches from various women's rights activists, including former state Senator Joyce Hester and former state Assemblywoman Margaret Kipnis. The speakers addressed topics such as reproductive rights, domestic violence, and the importance of women's participation in political issues.

The rally was part of a series of events planned for Women's Day, which is celebrated each year to raise awareness about women's rights and issues. The events included a march through Albany, a dinner at the state capitol, and a concert featuring female musicians.

The rally ended with a march through the streets of Albany, where the crowd chanted and sang songs in support of women's rights. The event was well-attended, with over 200 people participating in the march.}

Classics Collect, Distribute Dues

by Frank Comto

Did you ever wonder how your class dues are spent? You probably haven't, but it's a good question to ask. Class dues are collected to support student organizations and extracurricular activities. But how is the money used? Here's a breakdown of how your class dues are spent:

1. Student Organizations: The majority of class dues is spent on student organizations, which include the student government, athletics, and student publications. These organizations are responsible for managing the budget and allocating funds to different projects and events.

2. Extracurricular Activities: Class dues also fund extracurricular activities, such as clubs, sports teams, and cultural events. These activities are often organized by the student government and are open to all students.

3. Scholarships and Awards: Some class dues are set aside for scholarships and awards. These awards recognize outstanding achievement and can help support students who need financial assistance.

4. Equipment and Supplies: Class dues may also be used to purchase equipment and supplies for student organizations and extracurricular activities. This includes things like food, beverages, and other refreshments.

5. Travel and Transportation: Class dues may be used to cover travel and transportation costs for student organizations and extracurricular activities. This includes costs associated with attending conferences, competitions, and other events.

6. Administrative Costs: A portion of class dues is used to cover administrative costs, such as rental fees and maintenance costs.

7. Capital Improvements: Class dues may also be used to fund capital improvements, such as renovations to facilities.

8. Special Projects: Class dues may be used to support special projects, such as community service projects or fundraising events.

Overall, class dues provide a valuable resource for student organizations and extracurricular activities. However, it's important to remember that the money is not simply collected and then spent. Instead, it's carefully managed and used to support a wide range of activities that benefit students and the community.

The man explains that his wife is justified in demanding that the woodcutter be punished. Friedman states that he has been simply acting as a private citizen in this case.

The new government in South Africa is now displaying such things as howitzers, tanks, rockets, those that were seized from the American presence in Vietnam. The American government is approving the sale of these weapons to South Africa.

In a classified advertisement appearing in the San Francisco Chronicle the man stated that he was a private citizen who would agree to being artificially inseminated by Friedman in order to prove his case.

The man, who was arrested and then released on bond, was allowed to return to his home. He then wrote a letter to the police, saying that he was going to make a statement.

The police officer who received the letter forwarded it to the city attorney. The city attorney then filed a complaint against Friedman.

Return to Heroic Fantasy
In Science Fiction

By Paul Inglis

The Changelings - A Fantasy Author (Walden)

Our story begins at the time when many castles were burnin' and the inns were being closed. This was the time when the supernatural and the inhuman were growing stronger, and the line between the real and the magical was becoming blurred. This was the time when the old gods were awakening, and the new ones were rising to power.

The world was in chaos, and the humans were struggling to survive. But in the midst of this turmoil, there was one man who stood out. He was a man of vision, and he knew that the only way to save the world was to bring together the supernatural and the human, and to create a new society where both could coexist.

He was a man of action, and he was not afraid of the challenges that lay ahead. He was a man of courage, and he was not afraid to face the dangers that came with his quest. He was a man of compassion, and he was not afraid to help those who were in need.

He was a man of destiny, and he was destined to be the leader of the new society. He was a man of hope, and he was destined to bring hope to the world.

And so he set out on his journey, with the aid of his friends and allies. He faced many challenges, but he never gave up. He was a man of courage, and he was not afraid to face the dangers that came with his quest. He was a man of compassion, and he was not afraid to help those who were in need.

And in the end, he was successful. He had brought together the supernatural and the human, and he had created a new society where both could coexist. He had saved the world, and he had brought hope to the world.

The End.

Judy—Judy Collins (Elektra)

Judy Collins has added a new dimension to folk music with her new album, "Judy Collins.

The songs are timeless. Her per formances are extraordinary.

The arrangements are simple but effective. Her singing is Powerful and emotional. The result is a beautiful album that will not soon be forgotten.

The album features songs by Songwriters such as "Galway" by Bob Dylan and "I've Got a Dream" by Woody Guthrie.

The album also includes colli

cisions with Paul Desmond.

Desmond's alto-saxophone work is amazing. The result is a magnificent album. In a word,

"Judy Collins" is a masterpiece.

It is a commercial, slick album that is not for everyone. But the answer to that might be tempted to think so after thought provoking and elusive

Myself/Searching for my life."

Other than that small complaint, the album is a marvelous blend of musical styles. It is a must for any fan of folk music.

Judy Collins has achieved a new level of success with this album.

She has proved that she is a master of her craft. The result is a magnificent album. In a word,

"Judy Collins" is a masterpiece.

A Gay Hello

To the Editor:

The gay community in Albany is continuing to grow stronger. At last count, there are seven gay-affirmative organizations in the area (albeit very active at different times). This is not the situation we have in SUNYA, however. As we have seen, meetings are few, and attendance is sporadic. We wish to point out that the gay community is as much a part of SUNYA as any other community. We are interested in establishing a gay support group at SUNYA and would like to bring this issue to your attention.

Sincerely,

Rude Awakening

By Pat Blank

On a recent morning, I awoke to the sound of my alarm clock. As I stumbled out of bed, I realized that I was late for work. I quickly swung into action, putting on my clothes, grabbing my keys, and rushing out the door. But as I stepped out onto the streets, I noticed something strange. The air was filled with a smell that I couldn't quite place.

I turned to see my friend, who appeared equally confused. "What's that smell?" she asked.

I shrugged. "I don't know. It's just...odd."

We continued on our way, trying to make sense of this strange phenomenon. As we walked, I couldn't help but feel a sense of unease. What was happening in the world? Were we truly alone?

In the end, we never found out what caused that smell. But it served as a reminder to always be alert to our surroundings, and to never take anything for granted.

A Void to the Wise

By E. J. Haggerty

Why should I either seek or desire to learn something new when I am already immersed in the world of my own making? Would not it be better to immerse myself in the world of my own creation, and thereby gain a deeper understanding of the world around me?

I believe that the answer lies in the pursuit of knowledge. For if I am to understand the world around me, I must first understand myself. And in order to understand myself, I must first understand the world that I inhabit.

So, let us turn to the pursuit of knowledge and let us not be afraid to ask questions, to seek answers, and to never stop learning.

To the Editor:

On Friday, July 25, 1975, after a long hard day of mowing, I had very high hopes of going out and enjoying an enjoyable evening. Some friends asked if I would like to go to the Van Vleck Inn in Colby, Me. My reply was yes. It was after midnight when we arrived at the inn.

Upon our arrival, we were stopped at the door and our IDs were checked consequently by age. For my friend's birthday, I had purchased a birthday card and a cake for her. However, I was told by the innkeeper that it was too late to serve food or drink.

I feel very strongly that the manager that I spoke to, should have allowed my friend and I to celebrate her birthday at the inn. It was her birthday and I had purchased the cake and the card for her.

I am new to the SUNYA state and Albany, and I feel that this was a very unfortunate incident. I have always been very happy with the reviews and comments that I have received from SUNYA students and faculty.

Pruning Professors

During the past five years, student concern has shifted from the ideological, worshipful and political to the personal and specific. Partly due to financial community and partly due to improved political conditions on campus, the change has meant that many of the concerns of students have moved more directly affecting students. Thus, issues like fees, board, housing, and service and tenure issues have become important.

Tenure issues affect the professional reasons students are on campus. A good tenure system requires that, at the very least, students be treated fairly. If your problem requires a personal conciliatory approach, make sure you tell them what it means to be a person in this world. We, as students, have the opportunity to deal with our problems in a way that is respectful and fair.

There is, of course, only one way to deal with problems. If your problem requires a personal conciliatory approach, make sure you tell them what it means to be a person in this world. We, as students, have the opportunity to deal with our problems in a way that is respectful and fair.

Some administrators and faculty have taken the position that students have little or no right to discuss or take part in tenure decisions. As a result, students have been denied the ability to make their feelings known. This is unacceptable.

Student rights will have some difficult decisions this year. If tenure is based on the various stages of the tenure process and that the percentage of tenure granted is based on an arbitrary age, swaying with the tides of fashion and convenience, then tenure should not be granted.

The Albany State Rugby Club amended two previous similar offensives in favor of a split between Thursday and Saturday. Both teams saw some new players, and also had veterans playing new positions, resulting in a unique ball. The second half was much more aggressive with the opposing team trying to avoid contact. Albany's second line made a strong effort to score in the second half, and several outstanding plays were made from both teams.

Ruggers Ram Siena, 10-0

The Albany State Rugby Club defeated the Siena College Rugby Club by a score of 10-0. The game was played at the Siena College Rugby Field and was officiated by Don Gable and Chuck Costanzo.

Pres Candidate Harris Advocates Diffusion of Power in Government

By Ed Moore

Last Tuesday, Presidential candidate Fred Harris gave a speech in downtown Albany's City Hall.

He appeared to be running for the New York gubernatorial seat, and he was the first candidate the "People's" party sent out from Michigan to New York. When he started speaking, the audience was silent.

Harris was successful in his presentation of the political candidates, and he was not belittling others or forcing his views on anyone.

Harris quoted American's best from politicians during the election, and said that the election was not the same as it was now.

He said that the best model for America was "We need to change the way we do things so that people are not left behind.

Harris had an idea that the people would like more power over their lives instead of being control by the government.

Harris said that he wanted to change the way people perceived things and that he wanted to make people think about things.

Harris had an idea that the people should think about things and not just follow the government.

Harris said that the people should think about things and not just follow what the government says.
