Democracy In Action

As this year's budget meeting is a few days away, there is an unprecedented amount of activity going on. The representatives of the Inter-Group Council, under the leadership of Elizabeth O'Neil and Dorothea Smith, have been hard at work preparing for the meeting. Their goal is to ensure that the student body has a voice in the budget process.

The council is concerned about the lack of representation of students in the decision-making process. They argue that the current system, where the budget is decided by the faculty alone, does not adequately reflect the needs and wishes of the student body. The representatives believe that students should have a say in how their money is being spent.

The council has been working on a resolution that would give students a say in the budget process. They have been meeting with faculty members and students to discuss the issue and gather support for their resolution. The council hopes that their efforts will result in a more inclusive and equitable budget process for the State College.

Easy Does It...

One of the benefits of being a student is the ability to set your own pace. This can be both a blessing and a curse. On one hand, you have the freedom to choose how much work you want to do and how much time you want to spend on your studies. On the other hand, it can be easy to get overwhelmed by the amount of work that needs to be done.

The key to easy does it is to break down the work into manageable pieces. You can start by making a list of all the tasks that need to be done. Then, prioritize them based on their importance and urgency. Once you have a plan, you can begin to tackle each task one at a time.

Remember, it's okay to take breaks. Sometimes, taking a short break can actually help you to be more productive. So, don't be afraid to take a walk or do something else to relax. The important thing is to keep moving forward and make progress on your work.
