EACH STUDENT SHOULD PAY TAX

In many of our classes, it is the custom for the fresh men to pay the tax of every student in the class, to which each student is required to make his contribution which he is entitled on the ground of his having no particular reason for being excused from it. This custom is followed and the make of the student body is just one large family, all of whose members are more or less all acquainted with each other.

This is an excellent idea—but why make the fees speak for itself? Isn’t the upper classmen in reality those whose duty and privilege it is to extend first greetings to strangers? Doesn’t it seem possible that the fresher might feel a little shy about putting himself forward—just a week or two? And, then, isn’t a natural for a newcomer to be either reserved and keep himself from being too enthusiastic in his social climb so as to allow the upper classmen to have time to become acquainted with him and to bring him closer friendship to themselves?

All this is an old tradition at State which requires freshmen to speak first to upperclassmen. However, no one need be bound by this custom under whose auspices, for just the same thing, for just the same reason, for just the same purpose. All these students, especially, who have time to read the every day newspaper and Andrews College News, will be informed as to the weekly as well as the monthly events in the college life.

HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN REVIEWS HOW, WHY, HE WROTE FAIRY TALES

By W. F. M.

It would be useless to “review” the life of the shoe-maker’s son who told fairy tales to kings and princes; one can only comment upon the “pretty story, happy and full of incident”, as he himself puts it. To anyone who has read with delight the life of Andersen, this new edition will be that same delight doubled. The book is conclusive to easy reading, well illustrated with portraits and photographs—positively inviting.

Published by the American-Scandinavian Foundation in the belief that greater familiarity with the great literary monuments of the North will help Americans to a better understanding of Scandinavians, and thus serve to stimulate their sympathetic cooperation, this work is that certain to accomplish this aim.

All those students especially, who have time to read the tale of the ugly duckling and its follow story, will want to read this book which tells how and why the noted author wrote.

LOUIS AUSTIN WARREN DEFENDS THE HONOR OF LINCOLN’S FAMILY

A great wealth of Lincoln materials found by the author at many Kentucky court houses from the basis on which this book is built. Mr. Warren first became interested in the work, he tells us in his preface, when “after reviewing many biographies of Abraham Lincoln I became convinced that Lincolniana did not present its author’s book won’t sell no more than valuable to historians. The chapters on educational and political history will stand out as one of the finest volumes on the Lincolniana.”

The following thesis: Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks were married June 12, 1808, at the Pottawatomie House, Ohio, in a small room with brick walls, doors, and windows.

The book is intended to be a narrative of the life and times of Lincoln. It is written with the purpose of giving the full story of the family, the home, and the people, for the benefit of the students and the public.

The exhausted author, however, has not been able to produce a perfect work, and has left many blanks and unfinished parts of the story. But the book is a valuable contribution to the study of Lincolniana, and will be of great value to those who are interested in the history of the United States. The book is written in a clear and concise manner, and is well illustrated with maps and photographs.

LUDWIG’S "WILHELM HOHENZOLLERN" CONTAINS CARTOONS FROM FUNCH

With the Hohenzollerns—The Last of the Kaiser. By Karl Ludwig. Translation from the German by Ethel Colburn Mayne. $1. 258 pages. New York: Putnam.

This is an intimate and personal account of the Kaiser’s death, written by a man who knew him well. In it, he describes the Kaiser’s final illness, his last days, and his death. The book is a vivid and moving portrayal of a great man’s final moments. It is a valuable contribution to the study of the Kaiser and his era. The book is written in a clear and concise manner, and is well illustrated with maps and photographs.

SENIORS DESCRIBE DIFFERENT HOBBIES

Ruth Lane, 28 Likes To Sleep; Richard Jones Is Fond Of Dancing

State College seniors admit a variety of outside diversions. These, they explain, often consist of not the things they do, but the things they would like to do, if only the time would permit. At present they think quietly and occasionally, says Ruth Lane, who spends rather unfairly a great deal of time reading and regretting the velocity of deep sleep. It is her only wish, but she is not sure if this is a desire or a complaint.

Beatitude Wright mentions tennis, swimming, golf, and basketball, but explains that her chief diversion consists of waiting for the train. A spare moment finds the need for exercise and plays amusing. Richard Jones likes to dance but admits it is rather reluctantly. He also mentioned golf, tennis, camping, and swimming as among his diversions.

Chloris Curtis is another who resists not having time to sleep. She is fond of reading, but, like Ruth Lane, the desire for a long sleep predominates.

And there is Francis Gillis, basketball is his favorite diversion, he reads—the sporting columns, he plays—basketball, and his chief diversion is the Team. Of course he can't play on this train, but it is a fervent one.
