Students Demonstrate in Union To Gain Support for Civil Rights

According to an article which appeared in the "Kitchener News" on May 6, 1966, "Chancellor Dwight D. Varner charged "irresponsible journalism." He directed the editor of "The Oakland Observer," assscribed publicity and ordered all copies of the last issue destroyed.

The action, taken at the Union Office in Oakland, resulted in the destruction of 10,000 copies of the newspaper. The columnists had been found guilty of "irresponsible journalism" and had been found guilty of violation of the "Oakland Observer" policy of the Oakland Paper Company.

Varner had taken the position that "We are not acting on a public interest basis or need for the newspaper, even if it is in our advantage." Varner regarded the decision as a "responsible" one and admitted that "no one is responsible who in more or less responsible position permitted the newspaper to carry such a policy.""
The case of Wolff Metzgar brings to our attention one more facet of the administrative control over the university's activities. The student government claims that the purpose of the university is not to be a public relations sheet. As Metzgar was quoted as saying, "I took the position that we are not acting as a public relations sheet for the university and should be free to publish news, even if it is not always in the university's interest."

We believe we are currently in a situation where we can print anything which would directly interfere with the goals of the university.

Scheduling Faulty

It seemed incredible that the freshman class would schedule their meeting at the same time as the last major meeting of the Student Senate. This scheduling annoyed us to the point that we looked into the matter and found that the freshman have a cleaner bill of health than it appeared at first. Under the rule that the freshmen must be controlled in theory by the University Center Association, there is a further problem.

It seems that the THC, then a distinct and less meaningful name, did not appoint its calendar committee early enough and did not include students from the previous year's committee.

The result of all this is that Mr. McKinnon set the dates for the weeklies, made an announcement, Mr. McKinnon. Either you do not inform yourself of anything outside your do- main or you will not care much for the others.

For the students on the UCA Board of Managers, maybe it is about time you began doing your job.

COMUNICATIONS

Behavior at Dance

Disguised Chaperones

To the Editor:

We have some of you have actually been there, for a time we have felt that our dance is not being monitored. Our only defense has been to act like a chaperone, and consequently, our many friends and acquaintances have been rather excited without being aware of the fact.

When we insist on this experience at a later date, it is clear that the dance was enjoyed by the girls. However, we need to be more aware of the fact that many of our friends and acquaintances have been rather excited without being aware of the fact that they were enjoying the dance.

The best analogy which comes to mind is the story of the man who was hunting for ducks on a marsh. The ducks were up the creek without a paddle and the man was shot down in the water. The ducks were up the creek without a paddle and the man was shot down in the water.

We can learn the lesson that the kind of surface we are dealing with here is not worth losing.
