Let's Dance

Seven o'clock marks the opening of the spring social scene. Which reminded us of the fact that dancing is probably Eaton's most popular extra-curricular activity. Dancing in the Commons at present has a certain degree, provided a recreational outlet for some students, but we do not think the interest has the same extent as a few years ago. The living room has been taken over by chairs with an adequate space between the students' feet, and music is heard from the upper floor. The music is not always pleasant, but it does provide a certain amount of relaxation.

On Friday afternoons, the emptiness of the Commons is quite apparent. The doors to the living room are usually open during this period, and the social scene is quite lively.

Social seasons, whether for sociable activity or for aesthetic tension to discover, are unique in their own way. The social season is one of the most important aspects of college life, providing opportunities for social interaction and personal growth.

Soiree tonif is a social function held for the enjoyment of the students. These events are organized by the student body and are often sponsored by different groups or organizations. They are designed to provide a fun and friendly atmosphere where students can socialize and meet new people.

The Soiree tonif is an example of a social season event that takes place inside the college. It is typically a dance that is organized by the student body and is open to all members of the college community. These events are often sponsored by different groups or organizations and are designed to provide a fun and friendly atmosphere where students can socialize and meet new people.

These events are typically held at night, and the music is often provided by a live band. The atmosphere is typically lively and energetic, with students dancing and enjoying each other's company.

The Soiree tonif is not the only social season event held at the college. There are many other events that are organized throughout the year, each with its own unique theme and purpose. These events provide opportunities for students to engage in various social activities and to meet new people from different backgrounds.

On Friday, students can participate in a social event where they can enjoy dancing till I.

Weather Impedes Spring Practice
Of Baseball Nine

Captain Quattrocchi's Squad

Baseball: Pay Scherer, captain; Jack "Jackie" Hamilton, assistant captain; Norman Beach, captain of the reserve nine.

As usual, the most interesting feature of the scheduled Spring practice was the rain that drenched it. The weather proved a decided disadvantage, particularly around the Class of 1940 field, where the rubber was less than perfect.

It was back to the old "watered-down" field, where the ground was assigned to the most hardy students. The two or three inches of water that soaked the field only made things more difficult for those who were up against the task of lining the diamond. The game was badly delayed.
