Page Promises . .

The vacation mood has hit us all. Most of us are marking off the days to that "happy hour" when we will be able to get away from school and the constant routine that surrounds our daily lives. However, let's not begin this vacation too early. Let's save some time to savor the very important events that are taking place tomorrow at 10 a.m. in the Page Hall Rotunda. It is tradition for Harvard to hold a Cornucopia convocation, and the wise students who attend will be able to gain important admission to the prestigious university. In addition, it may be your advantage to get a look at the other candidates for AA offers as they are introduced.

We have been witness to the influx of students and parents who have come to the university to see the great athletes and their parties have much to offer. We must all agree that Harvard is one of the great universities and is definitely a place to be proud of. It is a place where one can learn from the best and make friends with the best.

THE Profession . .

We are all aware of the Board of Regents recent decision to decrease the requirements for teacher certification. Along with this decision comes the urge to see major fields, the liberal arts schools, and the state's educational agencies. This latter requirement has raised the ire of many liberal arts professors, who believe that the Master's degree in their major field is necessary to be a good teacher. This movement is a step in the right direction and shows the importance of liberal arts education.

It would seem that the liberal arts schools place more emphasis on the importance of discipline than the vocational schools. The discipline teaches the students how to think, write, and analyze, while the vocational schools teach the students how to do a particular job.

One of the most important aspects of the liberal arts education is the ability to think for oneself. This is not something that can be taught in a classroom, but rather it is something that one must learn through experience. It is important for the students to be able to think for themselves, as it is the only way they will be able to survive in the world.

Now it is time to get back to school and learn the material that you missed during the vacation. Good luck!
