Faculty Committee Begins Deans Evaluations

by M. J. Moomet

Dean of Social and Behavioral Sciences Richard Kandel and Dean of Sciences Vincent Covino are being evaluated by faculty committees according to Vice President for Academic Affairs David Martin.

Committees will evaluate Deans of the School of Business William Holmstedt and Library Director James Lehman, Martin said.

The same form was to be used for each of the dean’s performance in order to make suggestions in bettering future work by them. Since these evaluations have never been made before, each dean comes out of them should be very constructive, said Martin.

Committee members are to be submitted by College Faculty and the committee will not release their names, an approval said. Martin. The committee will reveal the name of the dean on the basis of its performance and will submit their evaluations to Kandel. Martin will take any recommendations made from the evaluations and submit them to Acting President Robert Marti.

Final decisions could range from suggestions to change in current behavior or methods, or to no changes.

Off Campus Association President John Kennedy, preocupated presently that the State Board of Health and Attorney General of the state will investigate the Country Square Motel.

The request for the investigation is the result of the mayor’s request of the City Council regarding the contractual agreements with students living at the motel. Kennedy said.

Kennedy charged that the motel did not provide adequate accommodation to the students and that the motel was run by SUNYA professors and not a part of SUNYA’s operations. "This is not an office of SUNYA’s operations," Kennedy said.

Of the 80 students housed at the motel in the beginning of the semester, Kennedy said, something must have occurred.

Motel Manager Ed Unger said that the OCA’s concerns are not valid.

"Even though several of the students have asked for a transfer to SUNYA’s offices, this is not the case. This is not a SUNYA event," Unger said. "I’m living my own life now."

A sub-committee of University Senate has met to propose smoking in confined areas on campus.

Acting President Vincent O’Coy said he sent a memo to the University Community Council asking advice on how to implement a non-smoking policy.

The proposal which states, "The University Community Council adopt the policy that smoking is not allowed in classrooms, lecture halls, libraries, theaters, recreation, lounges, and computer rooms. There is an exception on the proposals, which was passed unanimously, by the University Community Council," was put forward Monday by UCC President David Martin to SUNYA President Vincent O’Coy.

The student council’s proposed policy which still is to be proposed by the Executive Council of the Senate and the University Community Council for recommendations about implementation and enforcement.

After these recommendations, the final resolution must be brought to Assembly for approval before any such policy can be set into action."

Mr. O’Coy said that a number of members on campus have expressed their desire to be free from the influence of smoking.

In his case, O’Coy said that the proposals of the non-smoking areas have become a major problem in the school, and that the proposals of the non-smoking areas have been the result of a group which came about after the memorandum was submitted to the council.

Students Protest Food Quality

By John Moore

A student-run demonstration on Thursday was attended by several hundred students who marched from the Student Union to the State Quad Food Service headquarters to protest the food on campus.

The protest, which was organized by the Student Union Food Service Committee, was in response to a recent survey conducted among students, faculty and staff. The survey found that 85% of respondents were dissatisfied with the food available on campus.

The protest began at 2 p.m. outside the Student Union, where students gathered to chant and sing songs about their dissatisfaction with the food. They then marched to the State Quad Food Service headquarters, located in the basement of the State Quad.

During the protest, students held banners and signs with messages such as "No more bad food!" and "State Quad, fix our food!" They also handed out flyers to anyone who would listen.

At the State Quad Food Service headquarters, students held a brief meeting where they presented their demands to the food service managers. The demands included improving the quality of food, increasing vegetarian options, and providing more healthy alternatives.

The food service managers agreed to meet with the students to discuss their concerns and work towards finding solutions.

The protest was co-organized by Student Union President Emily Johnson and Student Union Vice President Will Parker.

The State Quad Food Service is owned and operated by Aramark, a multinational corporation that has been accused of poor working conditions and low wages for its employees.

The students hope that their protest will bring about change and improve the food options on campus.

The newspaper adds, however, that Helms was widely quoted as saying that he was confident he would win in the Supreme Court.

Something To Do

To the Editor:

I would like to communicate about yesterday's 'poor' staff that occurred last night at the State Capitol. The "poor" consisted of hanging trees, gnawed, and otherwise, while one disgruntled person kept trying to put the right hand up, to the floor, I felt that this last display of ignorance and immaturity should be put to an end. I don't know if I'm the last human being to be a supermarket, but it does one good. For me, the money is going to. I feel that we are the recipients of a lot of flak, and I would like to see the students find their way to the top. I would also like to see the students find the way to the top. In the words of the great poet, "to this extent, I would like to see the students find their way to the top."

You're looking into the mirror, seeing yourself as others see you, feeling good. There's a problem. You're not sure. Can you really give yourself the credit you deserve? Can you really say that you're as good as you look? The answer is yes. You are. You're unique. You're special. You're a gift to the world. You're a work of art. You're a masterpiece.

"There are several interferometers in the world today, but the one here at Albany may be the best."

By JERRY MIRKENDA

If someone told you that winds of 100 feet per second whipped above Albany and that temperatures ranged between 70°F and 200°F, you might think they were exaggerating a bit, because if you experienced walking in a Quod in mid-March. But if you were given this information by a friend, then you could decide to decorate your house with tropical plants and flowers.

Perhaps the most impressive song to come out of the album is "Who'll Love Me Now?" What distinguishes this last one from the others is the absence of the dissonant and atonal sounds that are heard in some of the music written by this particular band. Instead, the music is more like a pop song, with some string arrangements and some vocals. The song features bass, drums, and a rhythm section that is delivered with precision and finesse.

The album was well received as a full-bodied rock album with a highly original sound. It is a testament to the talent and creativity of these musicians. The album contains some of the best-rock harmonies, vocal arrangements, solo performances, and percussion that have ever graced the record. The album is a great achievement and is a must-listen for anyone interested in rock music.

AIR SUPPLY

BY AI RACA

Air Supply, a relatively unknown group led by Graham Russell and Russell Hitchcock, is exemplary of the current state of soft rock. Their music, although completely commercial, is pleasant and listenable enough to please top 40 listeners.

The songs, however, are often too simple, all have to do with the joys and pains of love. "Loving and Believing" is a mellow hit that features vocal harmony, smooth production, and tender lyrics. In other words, it has all the makings of a hit single, given enough radio play. "What a Life" and "Part II" are some of the best songs on the album.

On the other hand, the album is not without its faults. The production values are often too high, the vocals too overwrought, and the overall sound too polished. The album is a good example of how commercial soft rock can become overly sanitized and lacking in emotional depth.

In conclusion, while Air Supply is not the most innovative or groundbreaking of soft rock bands, their music is certainly enjoyable and soothing. The group's ability to craft catchy melodies and deliver them with skillful vocals is what sets them apart in this genre.
An Engrossing 'Creation'

But Imperfect 'Creation'

By MICHAEL P. FRIED

Although the play is not a fairy tale, "The medium of dreams," as Ezra Pound termed it, is not merely moving about on the stage or sitting in the audience. As a matter of fact, the two terms are those of Arthur Miller's "The Creation of the World and Other Business," performed at the Studio Theatre in SFJADA Performing Arts Center.

When Miller does play, he adds some character study to it that makes it all the more interesting. In his Pulitzer Prize-winning "Death of a Salesman," he introduces to Willy Loman, a man in his 60s being faced with death by society. Willy, not unlike people that we or may not have known personally, thinks that being well liked is the answer to success. Willy is indeed the "Creation Man."

In "Creation..." Miller goes from the tragedy and 'vomemoments' of Willy Loman to the 'tragedy' and 'vomemoments' of Genre: wolf is set inside a series of wolf stories, all of which are in some way tied to the wolf who is the narrator of the stories. The wolf is a complex character, with a dark side, but also a kind one. He is a part of a wolf pack and lives in a forest.

The story is told through the narrator’s perspective, which is at times humorous and at other times haunting. The wolf is a character that is both sympathetic and terrifying, and the story he tells is one of survival and fear.

The book is a unique mix of fantasy and psychological thriller, and it explores themes such as identity, what it means to be human, and the nature of consciousness.

Search and Seizure

The use of the general warrant rule as a shield against unreasonable searches, the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, the right of a person arrested for a crime to be brought to court for a speedy trial, and the right of an accused person to have the assistance of counsel and to confront witnesses against them are all protected by the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The Fourth Amendment reads: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

The Supreme Court has interpreted the Fourth Amendment to mean that searches and seizures are unreasonable unless they are supported by probable cause and authorized by a warrant issued by a neutral and detached magistrate. The warrant must be based on a probability, not a mere suspicion, of criminal activity.

The warrant must also describe with particularity the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized.

The warrant must be executed by a law enforcement officer who is armed with the warrant and is trained to enforce the law.

The warrant must be executed within a reasonable time after it is issued, and the search must be completed within a reasonable time after it is authorized.

The warrant must be executed in a manner that is likely to exclude the possibility of abuse of power.

The warrant must be issued by a neutral and detached magistrate, not by the officer executing the search.

These protections are designed to ensure that the government does not intrude excessively into the privacy of individuals and that the Fourth Amendment is not violated.

The Fourth Amendment protects the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures.

Coke Gets In Your Eyes

The President walked abnormally slowly to his office, sat down in front of the waiting Board Members and snatched his stomach. "The big issue in front of us now is not whether we are going to make a profit. Remember, if it doesn't stick together, not even Coke can stop us. We're going to bring the price of soda down to 25 cents for the students!"

After the applause had died down, one of the Faithful spoke up. "You know, when I go up in the morning and I start to go into caffeine, I run into the hall to grab a coke, and I have to fumble around for that extra nickel when I'm half asleep, it's a real pain in the derriere." The President cleared his throat to speak. "Last year, the Board did nothing but worry about costs and bottles. This year is gonna be different. The students run this Board, and we're gonna show 'em that they just can't mess around with students on vital issues like Mr. Pibb!"

Another answer was heard from the gathered Faithful. "There's the President his thrill. The President cleared his throat to speak. "Last year, the Board did nothing but worry about costs and bottles. This year is gonna be different. The students run this Board, and we're gonna show 'em that they just can't mess around with students on vital issues like Mr. Pibb!"

Boston Celtics In Trouble: Horse Bench for Rookie

MONTREAL (AP) - The Boston Celtics, hotly favored to win the NBA Eastern Conference, found their starting lineup not so formidable Thursday when they lost to the New York Knicks, 100-90. The Celtics, who were favored by 14 points, were led by their usual stars, but the Knicks' bench players outscored Boston's for the first time in the team's history.

Celtics star John Havlicek was held to a season-low 15 points, and his teammates added only 31 points. The Knicks, meanwhile, scored 48 points from their bench players, which was enough to prop up their team. Coach Red Auerbach, who called it a "disgrace" to the NBA, said his team would "go down to the wire" against the Knicks.

Auerbach stunned the Celtics this season by starting Havlicek and Tom Heinsohn, who had led the team to the finals last year. Havlicek responded with a game-high 21 points, but the team fell to 0-2 in the playoffs.
