Five Teams Make '66-'67 AMIA League One Tough

By Gene Glenn

The AMIA League's basketball season kicked off on Monday night. Five strong teams will vie for league supremacy. In an 18-game schedule, each team will have six home and six away games. No team will play each other more than once. Interleague games will be played on alternate Mondays.

SUNY-Cobleskill, which moved from Division II to Division I this year, is expected to be a strong team. The team includes several experienced players from last year, and the addition of a new star, Bill Smith, is expected to boost its performance.

Amherst College is also a team to watch. The team has won the last three league championships and is expected to continue its dominance.

University of Buffalo is a strong team, with several players returning from last year's championship team. The team is expected to be a serious contender for the league title.

SUNY-Buffalo is another strong team, with several experienced players returning from last year. The team is expected to be a strong contender for the league championship.

The University of Rochester is a team to watch, with several experienced players returning from last year. The team is expected to be a strong contender for the league championship.

The winners of the league will be determined by the final standings, with the top two teams advancing to the league championship game. The season begins on Monday night with a game between SUNY-Cobleskill and Amherst College.
Council Criticized

Last year a conflict arose over the scheduling of concerts at the Field House, and at the weekend of April 7, 1967, the conflict was between the scheduling of Page Hall and the Clancey Brothers Concert. The former had been planned for the Field House, but the latter was scheduled for Page Hall.

As Student Affairs prohibited the scheduling of two such concerts on the same weekend, it was decided that the Con- temporary Musical Foundation and the Clancey Brothers Concert should sponsor a joint musical event. However, it appears that the Washington Avenue students will not be available for concerts at that time. Consequently it was agreed upon that the Council should look into the possibility of sponsoring a concert at the Field House.

At present the Council has not taken any definite steps in this direction, but has decided to pursue a Clancy Broth- ers concert in Page Hall, in addition to the above arguments. Consequently the above agreement would go on the record.

However, it appears that there is a possibility of the above agreement, but it is not clear whether or not the above agreement will be pursued.

We feel that the legal blackmail of this matter is not the most important issue. These students are pursuing their moral obligation to protest what they believe is right.

Our Position

In the two separate statements of the University this University has expressed itself to the "improvement of the civil liberties" of the students who were arrested for protesting near an Albany polling place on Election Day. BUFFALO ENCOUNTER FOGGED OUT, CAGERS VIE WITH POTSDAM VICTORIES

By Mike Connerty

A fog bound plane forced cancellation of Saturday night's basketball tilt with the University of Buffalo, dampening the Gage's spirit somewhat as this was one of the most anticipated games of the year.

The game was scheduled for 6:45 before the varsity game tonight. The game would be played in front of a crowd that expected a real good show. Despite this, the game was not played, and the fans were left to wonder what could have been.

The cancellation forced changes in the schedule. The next planned game is against Niagara University, but the schedule is still subject to change.

The cancellation also affected the team's morale. The players were disappointed but also realistic. They knew that the game would be rescheduled, and they continued to focus on their remaining games.

The team's record this Thursday when they host Plattsburgh at 7:30 p.m. The team is currently 13-3 and looking to improve their record.

The cancellation has also impacted the fans. They were left wondering what could have been and what might happen in the future.

The team and fans have to wait for the rescheduled game, but they remain optimistic and focused on the remaining games of the season.
