Demonstration gooduness

To the Editor,

I have sought a context for these demonstrations, for the students of the University of Albany have been very active this fall, participating in a wide range of activities and events. However, I believe that the current demonstrations are not justified.

One of the main issues that has been raised is the perceived lack of representation of the University in the state government. This is a legitimate concern, and the students are rightfully concerned about their voices being heard. However, the methods that they have chosen to express their concerns are not productive or constructive.

In particular, I am concerned about the potential for violence and disorder that these demonstrations may spark. It is essential that we maintain a peaceful and respectful environment on our campus.

I urge all students and members of the community to consider the implications of their actions and to work towards finding a solution that is fair and just for all.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Pathos People

The Pathos People are a group of students who are fighting for their rights and the rights of others. They believe that the University community is basically a democracy, and that the students have the right to participate in the decision-making process.

Their slogan, "Pathos People," is a play on words. It means "to appeal to the emotions" or "to move others to action." The Pathos People believe that the University community should be governed by the students, and that the interests of the students should be at the forefront of any decision-making process.

They are calling for greater transparency and accountability in the decision-making process, and for a more inclusive and representative process. They believe that the University community should be engaged in the decision-making process, and that the students should have a voice in the decision-making process.

Conservatives call for end of mandatory tax

By Glenn Newman

The Young Conservatives of the Albany College Republicans, a political group on campus, have called for the end of the mandatory tax, a policy that requires students to pay a fee to support the Student Activities Fund.

The group, which includes members of the College Republicans, said that the mandatory tax is unfair and unnecessary. They argue that the funds generated by the tax should be used to support the activities of the Student Government, and that the mandatory tax is a violation of the students' rights.

"We believe that the mandatory tax is an unjust policy," said Adam Johnson, a member of the Young Conservatives and a student at the Albany College Republicans.

"The mandatory tax is a violation of the students' rights," he added. "It is unfair to require students to pay for activities that they do not support."

The group is calling for an end to the mandatory tax and for a more fair and equitable system of funding for the Student Activities Fund.

"We believe that the mandatory tax is a violation of the students' rights," said Johnson. "It is unfair to require students to pay for activities that they do not support."

ROYAL HUNT OF THE SUN: superior acting stifled by overlong script and weak characterization

By Richie Mather

ROYAL HUNT OF THE SUN, the latest film version of the story of the Conquest of Peru by the Spanish under Pizarro, is a disappointment. It is well produced, with a large budget and a good cast, but it fails to capture the drama and tension of the original story.

The script is overly long and adds unnecessary exposition, which distracts from the action. The pacing is slow and the dialogue is stiff, making it difficult to maintain interest. The acting is competent but lacks depth, particularly in the portrayal of Atahuallpa, the Inca ruler.

The story revolves around the meeting between Atahuallpa and Pizarro, but it is not handled effectively. The relationship between the two is never fully developed, and the buildup to the confrontation is too predictable.

The film also suffers from a lack of focus, with scenes that meander and do not contribute to the overall narrative. The production values are high, with impressive sets and costumes, but they do not compensate for the weak writing.

In summary, ROYAL HUNT OF THE SUN is a visually interesting film but ultimately fails to deliver the dramatic impact of the original story. It is a disappointment for fans of the Conquest of Peru and a lesson in the importance of a strong script in film adaptation.

by Mike Schnellrock

On Tuesday afternoon, the STB Destroyers (APU, perfect season with a 15-0 mark), thrashed the APA Engineers, 15-0, in the final game of the afternoon. Andy Egol and John Thayer, both sophomores, played a key role in the STB victory. Thayer is a key player in the Destroyers' success, and his efforts on the field were noticed by the coaching staff. Egol, on the other hand, scored two goals and added one assist in the game. His performance was a testament to the Destroyers' talent and depth. The Destroyers' defense held the APA attack in check throughout the game, allowing only three shots on goal. The Destroyers' offensive game was marked by quick transitions and sharp passing, leading to multiple scoring opportunities. The game concluded with the Destroyers' brilliant play, securing their perfect season and solidifying their place as one of the top teams in the league.
