GIRL DEBATERS WIN FROM ST. LAWRENCE

Private Hydro-Electric Attack Nets Home Team Victory; Vote is 3-0

Attacking the privacy of hydro-electric power in the United States as an essential money making machine subject to political corruption, the name was echoed from a 3-0 policy decision from the University of St. Lawrence at Chazy, N. Y., last night.

In pointing out the high rate charged to private corporations by Charles, Humphries, '21, first speaker for the affirmative, argued that "the way is open for people now paying twice as much under the present system as would be under government control...."

Ralph E. Schneider, '21, who spoke for the State College, warned that the government would save five or three times as much money because government control would do away with private management.

After Mr. Bigiln, '21, captain and third speaker of the affirmative, asserted that this plan would be more practical, he opened the debate for the negative, stressing the idea of individuality and man of ability under government control.

H. H. C. Jackson, '21, who spoke for the negative, asserted that a democracy would work, while Mr. C. M. Brown, '21, captain of the negative, maintained that this plan would be impractical.

Both sides returned, opened the debate for the negative, stressing the idea of individuality and man of ability under government control.

GIRL DEBATERS WIN FROM ST. LAWRENCE

AGAIN, the Albany State College debate team added laurels to its laurels by winning the debate on the proposition, "The Present System of Education Should be Abolished and the New System of Education Should be Adopted." The affirmative won the debate by a vote of 3 to 0.

WHY AN INTERSORORITY COUNCIL?

Two questions which the members of sororities at State College ask are: Is there a need for an intersorority council? Does the present intersorority council fulfill the need adequately and in the best manner possible.

Perhaps the general student opinion, as well as the opinion of some of the more active members, would say, "Yes," to the first question. And although the Student Association would probably say, "Yes" to the first question, and perhaps to the second as well, there are several arguments which have been used to support the idea that there is no need for an intersorority council, and that the present one is not fulfilling the need adequately.

Some of these arguments are as follows:

1. The Student Association has not been able to determine what the need is and what the council can do to fulfill it.

2. The present council is too large to be effective, and too many sororities, which are not interested in the council, are represented in it.

3. The council is too much under the control of the Student Association, and is not independent enough to be effective.

4. The council is not strong enough to have any real effect on the Sorority system here.

5. The council is not strong enough to have any real effect on the Sorority system here.

6. The council is not strong enough to have any real effect on the Sorority system here.

7. The council is not strong enough to have any real effect on the Sorority system here.

8. The council is not strong enough to have any real effect on the Sorority system here.

We do not mean to say that the Student Association has not been able to determine what the need is and what the council can do to fulfill it. We believe that it is capable of doing this, and that it is doing its best to do so. We do not mean to say that the council is too large to be effective, and too many sororities, which are not interested in the council, are represented in it. We believe that it is not too large to be effective, and that the sororities which are not interested in the council can be represented by their delegates. We do not mean to say that the council is too much under the control of the Student Association, and is not independent enough to be effective. We believe that it is independent enough to be effective, and that it is doing its best to be independent.

We do not mean to say that the council is not strong enough to have any real effect on the Sorority system here. We believe that it is strong enough to have a real effect on the Sorority system here, and that it is doing its best to do so.

NEWS IN NATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

Membership in Organization To Further Journalism, Announced Today

Affiliation of the State College News with 138 other student publications in the United States is announced today when the News board announces its membership in the Association of Student Press Association as a charter member. The national association is a cooperative organization established for the purpose of furthering the interests of all forms of collegiate and scholastic journalism. The association which was formerly known as the Central Scholastic Press Association, assumes its original name when it expanded to include transfer students.

The association was incorporated recently. The News was at one time a member of the Central association and received all "All American" highest possible honor ratings, two years ago in a contest sponsored by the association.

Gives Yearly Analysis

University, college, junior college, secondary school, and private school newspapers now have the privilege of submitting their yearly analysis, with the aid of a comprehensive coverage bureau, which is now being operated by the News.

The national organization today announced the establishment of a national school paper, magazine and annuals association, effective immediately. The association, which was formerly known as the Central Scholastic Press Association, now accepts names of any student publications in the United States.

Most Business Letters Incorrect, Research Shows;
Stenographers Are Improving In Accuracy And Form

In a Business School in a large American city, 30 business letters were typed by stenographers. Two-thirds of these contained errors. The most frequent errors were sentence structure, punctuation, and spelling. While the results are alarming, the stenographers are improving in accuracy and form. The report concludes that stenographers should be given more training in these areas.

Juniors Give Ring Contract to Kanske

Representative from Company To Take Measurements
In Two Weeks

The contract for the junior-rings has been awarded to the Warranted Blank Company. In approximately two weeks, a representative from the company will take measurements for the rings, according to Nancy Gilbert, chairman of the junior ring committee. There will be three different styles of rings offered to the juniors: heavy, medium, and light pennyweight. These are offered in rose, green, and yellow gold. The size and design of the ring are the same for every junior class. This is a fixed standard of the college. The design of the ring, however, is not a different pattern.

Names of the rings will be 80 for the full-weight rings, 87 for the medium-weight rings, and 88 for the weightless rings. A poster will be placed on the main bulletin board to give an opportunity for those who wish rings to sign up for them, Mrs. Gilbert announced today. The order forms of the ring come with Junior, Women's, Modern, and Junior Fashions.

Teacher Training Institutions Confer Chairman to the State College

Steps toward greater coöperation and cooperation in scholastic press activities in various training institutions were taken at a conference of normal school and teachers college deans in New York City last weekend.

The deans, meeting at the 5th annual convention of the National Scholastic Press association, voted to make their section of the association more representative.

William M. Frensch, 22, editor in chief of the State College press, and one of the five State College deans to the conference, was named chairman of the teacher training publications committee for a year. He was instructed to conduct a series of discussions by mail with other normal school and teacher training institutions throughout the state, with the aim of getting more such institutions to participate in the national meetings.

Wrest Program

Another movement which the division hopes to make is the providing of special programs for teacher training associations each year. Through one such program, a meeting and a dinner were conducted for normal school and teachers college deans at the conference, this year, the editors and staff members of normal school and teachers college publications could be taken to the meetings of greater worth in understanding institutional traditions.

Frensch is the first student editor to be chairman of the section of the division of his school. He is a member of the Philadelphia Normal School and is a member of the Pennsyltania Student publication.
