Sloppy Play Leads To Stickmen's 13-5 Defeat

RPI Captalizes After Early Deficit; Goggin Nets Two Goals For 0-2 Dances

by Eddie Rosenman

In a varsity lacrosse game played in the pouring rain, the condition made for a thrilling game. The thundering echoes of the ball made its way to the spectators, who were barely able to hear the calls of the umpire. The rain made the field slippery, but the players were undeterred. The game was delayed for 13 minutes due to the pouring rain, which dampened the spirits of the fans. Unfortunately, the game was over before it began. The visitors from Oneonta last Saturday.

The Dances took an early 1-0 lead on a goal by Steve Miller and an early goal by Dances Brian Furlong with only one minute left in the period. But after that, RPI scored to tie the score at 1-1, and eventually won 5-0. The Dances were led by designer's goals by Brian Furlong and Men's basketball. The game ended with the Dances winning 5-0.

Like First Loses In Dances bottled situations, which was eliminated in the third quarter, the Dances First lost to a third quarter. The Dances First lost to the six times in the season. They ended the season with a record of 10-0.

Council Bails Out Class Of '78

by Stuart Vincent

Central Council adopted a resolution Wednesday which calls for the class of '78 to take over the debt of $1.3 million owed to the Class of '78 by former Governor Rockefeller. The resolution was introduced by the Class of '78 and passed unanimously by the membership. The Class of '78 has been paying the debt to the State of New York for several years, and the resolution was a step towards resolving the debt.

W Policy May Not Reach Senate

The federal-state proposal to authorize the medical marijuana program in New York State was rejected by the Senate on Tuesday. The proposal was introduced by Senator Mark-Venuti and Assemblyman Tedisco, and was supported by both the Senate and the Assembly. However, the proposal was defeated by a narrow margin, and the future of the program remains uncertain.

The University's student newspaper, the Collegetown Daily News, reported on May 11 that the university's Board of Trustees had approved the proposal, which would allow students to use medical marijuana for medical reasons. The proposal was introduced by Senator Mark-Venuti and Assemblyman Tedisco, and was supported by both the Senate and the Assembly. However, the proposal was defeated by a narrow margin, and the future of the program remains uncertain.

by J.M. Rally

Resident Office contracts for an open release, like the one 201 students took advantage of this fall, are a type of contract that essentially allows for the common stipulations granted by the position. The open release is intended for providing additional benefits to students who do not meet the requirements of full-time study. Students will sign up for housing assistance in the fall and have the option to move off campus after the fall semester. They will then sign contracts with the Army Nurse Corps in the spring.

The new provision is not an open release, but rather an extension of the current stipulations granted by the position.

by Denise Lentz

Four stipends have since been awarded to SA students, four have been denied, and four have been pending approval.

The University Budget Committee has passed a general stipend resolution that would allow for the creation of stipends.

The stipends are intended to assist students in funding their education. The resolution provides a framework for the creation of stipends, including the criteria for eligibility and the funding source.

SOVIETS EXPLAIN IT

Soviet scientists are reporting that their new technique, two-year study of the so-called "Remnants Triangle" area has convinced them that there's a "peculiar mechanism" at work in the triangle area.

A Soviet research team says it found "an aura" of energy in the triangle area and has spent years researching the phenomenon, adding that it is being investigated "seriously" and "carefully".

The Soviets' Novosti News Agency says that the triangle area does have an unusual number of giant, underwater objects that must be of significant happens to them but that it does not have any meaning or control over other parts of the world.

The secret is still unclear for current explanations of the human existence for some people.

NEW ADDICTION

A McGill University Researcher is warning that poverty always plays a role in making individuals "fall into addiction".

David Mackerick, a specialist in addiction research, says he believes programs can be based on pain, left-machine study where when becomes added to drop and gambling.

McKerick says it is particularly important for young people who seek to obtain almost all of their income through legal means and that the addiction cannot be treated without the engagement of the community.

WHO'S COUNTING?

Reports have been circulating for years about complaints made by residents of Roswell and in the United States to the Federal Bureau of Investigation up to the age of 148.

The Roswell News is reporting that these stories seem to be totally unrelated to the Roswell area. The town says that it is very important to have one point of reference for the people living there and that those who have examined the elderly people and considered all births around, have concluded that most of the old citizens are brought up in the area.

The study reported found a man who claimed to be 137 was actually only 83. The researchers say that the elderly citizens perceives the myth of being to their med, 87, for worldwide marketing and prestige.

START COUNTING

Social Psychologists Geraldine Jaffe says that the average American tells a whopper 200 lies per week day.

Now, according to a new book by psychologist Steve Baker, the art of telling white lies and other fibs has been characterized by numerous interactions since prehistoric time. The book is entitled "Living in a World of Lies". Baker tells us that each day we are not only asked "Is this the truth?" or "Just how is it going at the office."

Philosopher Bob sees that telling very many lies is often from doctors who prescribe "prescriptions" for their patients to avoiding research such as Woodward and Bernstein who employ deception in order to get the facts behind the story.

LIBERAL DECLINE

A survey of the nation's five-year college graduates found that almost 10% of those who left college in 1957 and 1977 have dropped a major.

CBS billed the iconic match, which turned the lights of most of the major stores, as "Winners take all".

However, it has been noted that all players in the various matches, no matter who wins or loses, were paid "substantial" sums of money for playing.

The study follows Advertising Age reports that the cable TV network is the most popular form of advertising among viewers.

"HE, SHE, OR IT?"

An Associate Professor at the University of California in Los Angeles is suggesting that people begin to promote "he", "she", or "it" with a simple "e.

Professor Donald L. M. says that, in order to avoid the use of a masculine pronoun, "he", he says, it is unnatural in the search for a non-sexist pronoun.

Markby says the process "he" has dropped as a gender-neutral term to include both sexes. He says, however, that he tends to classify and find that 34% of the students interpreting "he" referring to a man when it is used to describe either sex.

Wicker Warns Against Self-Censorship

By EDWARD RADER

With his quiet drudgery and his friends tucked under his red suspenders, New York Times
columnist Tom Wicker appeared every now and then at the no-Northern gentleman on the set in front of a crowded Campus Center Assembly Hall last Friday afternoon.
Wicker was not a commanding
speaker, his drawl being too quiet for people to hear him in the back of the room, but he answered questions freely and thoughtfully for a little over an hour, working without a prepared text.
True, SANTA was new and a stoopid on a speaking tour designed to plug Wicker's
new book, and also true Wicker did manage to mention the book a couple of times in his answers. Still, it was an informative and occasionally amusing hour.

In response to one of the first questions
asked, Wicker admitted that some Times reporters may have had "contact" with CIA agents that were not "prosperous," but he did not think that it was "a serious factor in the editorial policies of papers."

Wicker defended the CIA as being "a unique source of information in the world," adding that it was responsible for some of the best stories in The Times. However, according to Wicker, the agents are always taking information given by the CIA with a grain of salt.

Wicker believes that if there is a division of the CIA, it is on the other side. They have the most secret concerning what gets published as a newspaper. Instead, it is self-censorship that he calls "the biggest danger to the free press in America."

"The press is a big business, Publishers use their influence to the detriment of the establishment; reporters need to have their reporting information, and for a vast number of reasons the process works more nearly toward the press having an accepted and respectable place in the establishment. Which means that in the central core, it doesn't reach the top.

Not earth-shaking news, but then Wicker himself has never been known as much of a boast. His "In the News" column tends to rumor against shady dealings and wrongdoings, rather than take a firm and definitive stand.

"President Carter's situation, the most incisive comment he had to offer was that it left the American people in the dark about the true nature of Nixon's activities." Wicker said. "However, he was far more greatly in answering whether or not he felt that investigation had come true.

Wicker pointed out that Carter had carried many satires, especially those in the South, byashing a majority of the black voters in those states. Said Wicker:"
I looked at those figures and thought to myself, 'My God, the blacks really cuted the talk.'
And that means he really is going to put himself out for the blacks. And what do wuh it is that would substantially influence the blacks. That's not what happened at all. Carter took one look at those returns and said, 'My God, I got right with the white folks.'

Someone asked him what effect the watergate movement has had on the black society and Wicker allowed himself a smile, acknowledging, speaking offhand, whether it was one of the marriage of divorces, and subsequent remarriages to "a crue life career woman, whose career has nothing to do with men, who is a political actor in an example of definite being 'too far,' but on the other hand, he mentioned that there was a report coming that he cannot accept a hand.

Wicker also had advice for young journalists, telling them not to go to graduate school, but to "get out and get a job on a smaller paper, where you can learn how to do all sorts of things.

Looking at the last question of the hour, Wicker seemed to be regarding these later journalists. The question did not refer to the truth there was diversity enough of opinion expressed in American newspapers, Wicker said that it was true that he thought there was a diversity of opinions, and that the most serious problem is "our definition of people. There are a number of topics he feels the press does not cover.

When, for example: -- "American prisoners don't exist in the American press. The only stories you read about prisons don't have rape, prison breaks, or other corrections. Other topics he feels are not covered are school and mental institutions. The very diversity of either, in his opinion, is the fact that the "American corporation does not exist."" The single biggest fault that touches all of them is American business, yet it is probably a little easier to say as any other major factors.

Tom Wicker may not have had all the answers, but he certainly knows the questions.

This Week's Decision: Raise the Student Tax

To the Editor:

This is to report that the letter by Joan Anderson concerning the State Quad Mail Code was most helpful and strongly recommended its inclusion in the discussion materials. We have been aware of the problem of parking and its impact on the campus, including the State Quad area, for over a year. However, this is the first time that I have had the opportunity to address the issue directly.

We have already seen the results of the parking problem in the increased traffic congestion and the decrease in the amount of space available for students to park their vehicles. This has led to an increase in the demand for parking spaces, which in turn has caused an increase in the cost of parking.

I believe that a student parking tax is a necessary and practical solution to this problem. By increasing the cost of parking, we can encourage students to carpool, use public transportation, or find alternative ways to get around the campus.

I urge the administration to consider implementing a student parking tax as part of the solution to the parking problem.

Sincerely,

[Student Name]

viewpoint

We deliver

The city's decision to raise the student tax is a necessary step in addressing the parking problem on campus. The increased cost of parking will encourage students to find alternative transportation options, such as carpooling or using public transportation, which will alleviate the pressure on parking facilities.

Rotating advisors

The time is now to reconsider the practice of assigning rotating advisors to students. While this system may have worked in the past, it is time to consider alternatives that can provide more personalized guidance and support to our students.

A rotating advisor system can create inconsistencies in the advice and support provided to students. Each advisor may have a different approach to guidance, which can be confusing for students who are trying to navigate their academic and personal lives.

Instead of a rotating advisor system, we should consider implementing a system where students are assigned to a single advisor for the duration of their time at the university. This would allow for more consistency in the advice and support provided, as well as a stronger relationship between advisor and student.

Sincerely,

[Student Name]

Super news

The student newspaper has covered many important topics, such as the parking problem and the need for rotating advisors. However, I believe there is a missing piece to these stories.

While the university has taken steps to address these issues, there is still much work to be done. Students are still facing challenges in terms of parking and finding advisors who can provide consistent guidance.

I encourage the university to continue to provide updates and solutions to these problems, and to keep students informed of the progress being made.

Withdrawal Effects

There is a good chance that there will be no action taken this semester by the University Senate on SUNY's withdrawal policy. The reason: one committee of a Council of Senate's branch gathered enough faculty opinion in time for a policy to move through bureaucratic channels to the Senate floor.

Student opinion has been gathered in a Student Association survey, and it is overwhelmingly in favor of dropping "W" from the transcript, except for those students who have been sent a notice of withdrawal. They believe that "W" should continue to be recorded on transcripts until the student can re-enroll.

Representatives of Graduate Students have said that the "W" in a negative mark, that more SUNY students would be accepted to those schools that "W" was used, thus keeping them from being accepted to the schools they want to attend. They have also said that they do not look into the withdrawal policies of the universities before making admission decisions.

SUNY's policy includes a "W", while policies at most Ivy League schools do not. Although their withdrawal period is a bit shorter.

Withdrawals have been a controversial topic in recent years. Some students have argued that withdrawing is a necessary step to take in order to manage their academic and personal lives. Others believe that withdrawing is a negative mark that can affect a student's future opportunities.

The new policy would allow students to re-enroll in their original courses, which would be beneficial for those who were unable to complete the course due to unforeseen circumstances. It would also provide students with more flexibility in their academic plans.

Sincerely,
