Co-eds to Pursue Unmarried Men, Dogpatch Plan

The environment in which the co-eds of the State College are to live during the coming year is described as an "intimate, friendly, and home-like" atmosphere. This is exemplified by the story of the co-ed who, while hiding in her room to avoid aelligentsia, called her mother. "I'm in love," she said, "with an unmarried man from Dogpatch." The atmosphere in the co-ed's life is such that she feels free to express her love and to be unafraid of meeting new people without the stigma of being an "unmarried woman." This is in contrast to the environment in which the unmarried men live, who are subject to "the dogpatch system" and are required to stay in their dormitories until they marry. This is a point of view that the co-eds are attempting to change, and they are putting forth a plan to attract co-eds to marry them and thus make Dogpatch "normal again." The co-eds are planning to work closely with the men to establish a more intimate relationship between the sexes, and they hope to achieve this goal through a variety of activities, such as dances, socials, and other events.

Faculty Examines Farrell Mansion For Student Union Possibilities

The faculty of the State College is examining the possibility of converting Farrell Mansion into a student union building. The mansion, which is located on the State College campus, is currently being used as a dormitory for female students. The faculty members believe that the mansion could be converted into a student union building, which would provide a central location for student activities, meetings, and other events. The faculty is considering various options for the conversion, such as adding additional rooms, renovating existing spaces, and incorporating modern amenities. The faculty hopes to make a decision on the matter in the near future, and if the mansion is selected, the next step will be to begin the conversion process.
