Is The Struggle Settled?

WASHINGTON—All is not rose-colored when it comes to the issue of the South Dakota's national park, with some citizens still opposed. "We need to have a discussion," said a local resident. "I've heard some people say it's a waste of money," she added.

"...and let the people know that the war is not a conflict of good versus evil."

The trouble is, many Vietnam veterans believe that the war is not a conflict of good versus evil. They feel that it is a conflict of ignorance versus enlightenment. "I've seen enough," said a veteran. "I'm ready to leave this place."

Benezet not on "edge"

By the Editor

I would like to take this opportunity to thank Dr. Mut Nastasi for his article regarding President Reagan's participation in his "intercollegiate debate". However, I believe it was necessary to point out that Benezet was not "on edge" during that debate. While Benezet did look nervous at one point, the reason is that he was actually quite comfortable with his performance. Benezet has always been known for his knowledgeable and engaging speeches, and his audience appreciated his efforts.

On Security: "There Definitely is a Problem of Stereotypes."

I've been seeing a lot of these lately. I decided to do some research and found that there is a definite problem of stereotypes in the law enforcement community. I think it's important to address this issue because it affects the way people are treated and perceived by law enforcement officers.

Stereotypes are a constant problem in law enforcement. They can have a negative impact on the way officers interact with the public. Officers who hold stereotypes about certain groups of people may be less likely to treat them fairly, and may be more likely to use excessive force.

I recently spoke with a police officer who told me about a recent incident where he was called to a scene involving a young black man. The officer had a preconceived notion that the young man was violent and dangerous, which led him to respond in a more aggressive manner than he would have if he had known the young man to be non-violent.

This is a common problem in law enforcement. Officers who hold stereotypes about certain groups of people may be more likely to use excessive force, and may be less likely to treat them fairly. This is a serious problem that needs to be addressed.

There are a number of things that can be done to address this issue. One thing is to provide training for police officers on how to recognize and overcome stereotypes. This training can help officers to better understand the people they are interacting with, and can help them to respond more fairly.

Another thing that can be done is to make sure that the police force is diverse and representative of the community it serves. This can help to ensure that officers are familiar with the people they are interacting with, and can help to reduce the risk of stereotypes.

I hope that these steps will be taken to address the problem of stereotypes in law enforcement. We need to do everything we can to ensure that our police officers are fair and just, and that they are able to serve the community they are sworn to protect.

Soccer—A Disappointing Season Revisited

The soccer season ended last spring after Albany lost in the championship game of the NCAA Tournament. The team, led by coach Bill Gordon, had high hopes for the season, but ultimately fell short of expectations.

Back in September, the team faced tough competition in the first games of the season. However, the team quickly fell behind, with a series of losses that continued throughout the year. The team finished the season with a disappointing record.

The biggest disappointment came in the form of a lack of offensive aggression. The team struggled to convert possession into goals, and rarely found the back of the net. This was particularly evident in the second half of the year, when the team's offensive play significantly decreased.

Defensively, the team was much more solid, with a strong backline and a reliable goalkeeper. However, the team's inability to score goals hindered their overall performance. The team's inability to put pressure on the opponent's defense also contributed to their struggles.

The team was hopeful that the season would improve with the addition of several new players, but in the end, the team failed to live up to expectations. The disappointing season ended, and the team has set their sights on a better performance next year.
Two Students Slain In La.; Guard Quells Violence

Combined News Services

A university campus was once again the scene of violence and death as two students were killed yesterday morning at Southern University in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. Several others were injured.

One of the slain men was identified as Denver A. Smith, 22, of New Roads. The other remained unidentified.

A coroner's report confirmed that both had been shot. One student also suffered a cracked skull.

Contrary to early reports, both men were killed by either friendly or charged bolts of lead fire.

An area state of emergency was declared in Baton Rouge by Louisiana Governor Edwin Edwards after Sheriff Al Amiss ordered stepped up purchases of guns and ammunition in the area.

The state of emergency extended throughout East Baton Rouge Parish County and the governor gave the mayor power to set a curfew of 7 p.m. in the city of Baton Rouge was also proclaimed.

A curfew was reportedly in effect on the campus last night. Police and guardsmen remained on university grounds.

Earlier in the day, the governor had ordered the National Guard onto the university after the registrar's office was set on fire.

All students, except those living in dormitories, were ordered home.

The student deaths climaxed a bloody, ten minute confrontation between sheriff deputies and student protesters who were occupying the administration building of the predominantly black campus.

They were ordered to move, as some 2,000 students looked on from the outside. When five minutes expired, the police moved in with bashed dogs at their side and armed with rifles, shotguns and pistols. They fired into the building and the students fought back by hurling fragmentation bombs.

Three guardsmen were killed and two young black men lay dead.

"Two have been shot and there may be more if necessary," said Baton Rouge Mayor W. W. Dumas. "We are going to take back over the administration building at any cost."

But the conquerers left with little resistance shortly before noon, filming out with their hands over their heads past a puddle of blood on the sidewalk in front of the building. Sheriff Amiss of East Baton Rouge denied his men were responsible for the shootings.

"We didn't use anything but tear gas," he said.
