A RayView of Sports

The AMIA intramural basketball leagues have been operating for almost two months now, and we feel that certain faults have arisen in the functioning of these leagues that must be corrected if next year's season is to be successful.

Before we examine these faults, we must admit that some of the league's malfunctions are directly attributable to the skill of the coaches. During the season a team would be charged with a scheduling error on the part of AMIA officials.

One example of such an error was the schedule for the two-session basketball league. The schedule was set up on the bulletin board of the AMIA offices, but when the teams arrived for practice they found that the bulletin board was not available for use. The AMIA officials were not available to explain the situation, and the teams were forced to find a new location for their practice sessions.

Another example of a scheduling error was the scheduling of the basketball league. The league was scheduled to start on the second day of the semester, but the AMIA officials did not have the necessary equipment ready for the start of the season. The teams were forced to practice on their own, and the AMIA officials were not available to help them.

In order to correct these faults, we recommend that the AMIA officials:

1. Set up a schedule for the basketball league that is available to the teams.
2. Provide the necessary equipment for the teams to use.
3. Be available to help the teams during the season.

We believe that these changes will result in a more successful season for the AMIA intramural basketball leagues.

Manager Woodward: Valuable Handyman

by the Student

AN IMPROVEMENT in the AMIA intramural basketball leagues was noted during the second session of the season. The AMIA officials were more available and more helpful during this session than in the first session.

Manager Woodward, who has been the manager of the AMIA intramural basketball leagues for the past two years, is a valuable member of the AMIA staff. He has been able to help the teams with their scheduling and with other problems that have arisen during the season.

We believe that the AMIA officials should continue to provide this level of service to the teams.

Demonstrations Reveal Injustice

A demonstration was held Sunday in Albany as part of a nationwide protest of the brutal slaying of the Reverend Martin Luther King. The participation in the march produced staggering figures.

Many spokesmen call these protest marches the most significant and will have lasting effects upon the political situation. But on the contrary, they do accomplish something and successfully change the conditions. A demonstration brings an issue into the public eye.

To cite an example, in 1955, Mrs. Rosa Parks, a Negro, decided not to give up her seat to a white man on a segregated bus in Birmingham. This incident enraged the South who called for a boycott of the buses in Birmingham. They also planned demonstrations against the practice. The result was the sit-in movement.

These Marches which have been staged have had great influence on public opinion and, in turn, on the governmental move. The march on Washington in the summer of 1963 played an influential part in the passage of the Civil Rights Act.

These demonstrations are a necessity when the ruling majority refuses to recognize the rights and interests of a minority. They will only cease when these rights and interests are given to this minority. The leaders taking part in the protests, came into national prominence.

The flight of Negroes from the southern states to the North was known only by a minority of people in the nation until they started demonstrating. Now who does not know about Martin Luther King, Bayard Rustin, NAACP, etc.?

Inherent in a lover's lane, dark and, as such, can only be solved by what these students do in private thinking.

The possibility of a "publish or perish" via the ASP is open. From 7-11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday nights.
