Sororities Plan Formal Weekend To End Rushing

Some sororities have scheduled their formal dances for this weekend to end rush. In addition to the usual formal and semi-formal events, certain sororities will hold dances for the benefit of contributions. TUTA, Delta Zeta, Sigma Tau Gamma, and Chi Omega are among those planning benefits. TUTA is holding a dance with a "Showboat" theme, while Delta Zeta will have a "BZ Heaven" theme.

Statesmen will act as hostesses for some sororities. "Shade Downers" Defense Drill will be performed, and the opposition will be held for an elimination tournament.

Improvement...

Every year the students of State College find something to criticize, from the cafeteria to the poor quality of the math books. It is impossible to please everyone in every situation; however, they do try to make improvements. This year, the students have initiated changes in State's automobile insurance program in order to protect students and faculty.

State College is considering the establishment of a student forum in order to discuss these problems and to provide solutions for them. The forum aims to address student concerns and to encourage open dialogue among students and faculty.

Some improvements have already taken place. This semester, a Milne class is being taught every day in Room 201. In addition, the students' advisor marks the first time the organization has been held on a regular basis. The advisor, a seasoned educator, has been instrumental in guiding prospective teachers and facilitating their growth.

The students revel in questions. Dote on giving "True-False" exams. Twenty-four questions on one exam. It's a tricky business, but fun for everyone involved.

State College acknowledges the growth of the student body and the need for a forum to address their concerns. They are taking steps along these lines. A question for the Teacher Placement Bureau Student Committee: Why not turn your dial to the Psychology of Adolescents? It's a freebie.

Peds to Meet Oneonta In Role of Favorites

For the first time in a long stretch, the powerful Peds will not be in the role of underdog tonight. Instead, they will be playing host to Oneonta State tonight.

Peds, who have been lucky enough to enjoy the role of underdog for the last three years, will be looking to continue their winning streak. The Peds have been unbeaten since their loss to Kappa Delta, and they are currently sitting at the top of the standings.

Oneonta State, on the other hand, has been struggling to keep up with the Peds. They have lost their last three games, and they are currently sitting at the bottom of the standings.

But don’t count the Peds out. They are known for their strong defense and their ability to come back from behind. And with the Peds’ fans cheering them on, they are sure to put up a good fight.

So make sure to come out and support the Peds tonight. They could use all the support they can get against their tough opponents. And who knows, maybe tonight will be the night they finally get their revenge on Oneonta State.
