Faculty Discusses Problems

Philosophical Debate on Shootout at the OK Corral

Faculty members discussed the recent shooting at the OK Corral. The debate centered around the issue of the use of violence in solving social problems.

The faculty members agreed that the use of violence is not an effective solution to social problems. They emphasized the importance of dialogue and peaceful resolution in addressing issues.

Community Interaction Encouraged

By Bob Waver

A group of faculty members have suggested that the University of Albany should encourage community interaction. They believe that this would help to foster a sense of community and promote a greater understanding of social issues.

The faculty members also suggested that the University of Albany should provide resources and opportunities for students to engage in community service. They believe that this would help to prepare students for the real world and promote a sense of civic duty.

If you're tired of using two or three separate solutions to take care of your contact lenses, here's a better one.

Lensine exclusive for property less hygiene. It has been demonstrated that Lensine is more effective than competitors.

Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine. It is a better contact lens solution for complete contact lens care.

Security Faces Criticism

Schwartz, Others Arrested; Security Faces Criticism

by Al Sears

Jack Schwartz, a University Senator, became the last student arrested in connection with the incidents of last Monday at the Library. His arrest brought the number of persons-including one faculty member-who were at the library during the incident and "wanted something done." Connally, in an attempt to allay student fears, has stated that security's major concern is not surveillance of student demonstrations, but harm to others and the potential for violence. The administration is applying pressure to arrest or transfer certain students, who might be classified as "radical." Security has made the arrests independently, without consulting any administrators.

Leadership led and led well. And the day was won. And the people had emerged, victorious. And then it was over.

Building The Consciousness

"We care for human life. Don't you, see, our allegiances are to humanity, not nationality! Don't you see! Don't you see! Please, you must see!"

Hate-filled staves answered.

Gritted teeth responded to cries of silence.

Hardened looks.

Angry.

And the war grew.

And the tensions grew.

And for the first time, the seriousness hit. Hard.

Unity emerged—a kind. There were complaints and there were disagreements. Tactics confused. Ideology seemed stunted. Knowledge was still spotty.

And there was no fear, no other unhurt. The power, illusion or not, had been flexed and flexed well.

"It was a beautiful demonstration."

In the midst of the reality of 1969, it seemed a dream. But it had happened. The consciousness—the taste of it is all about. It grew.

The following is a memo to the University Community from President Kuusisto which attempts to clarify the grading policy adopted by the Faculty for the Friday meeting.

Some questions of interpretation of the resolution passed by the Faculty May 8, on the evening of May 11, 1970 members of the Executive Committee and the University Senate recommended to me interpretations and guidelines to implement the resolution. These, I have accepted as essentially follows: 1. The phrase "students shall have the authority to..." if each student has the option, not that a class will adopt a group option. 2. Faculty are encouraged to counsel students on the implications of selecting various options, but shall not deny a student an option he has made. 3. Late attendance is not related to the right of selecting an option, though it may be a factor in determining certain ones. e.g., one option: "a." Students selecting option "a," for example, may still stand classes. 4. The plan or no credit grades provided in option "c" will be "S" and "U." An "S" grade will not be used if a student does not want it.
