Class of '85 pride may net SUNY $20,000

By Laura Wainwright

"Show Your Pride!" the Class of '85 pledge program poster reads. "This year's pledge drive is in full swing on campus, and soon your students at SUNY will be showing off their pride," the poster proclaims. The goal of the pledge drive is to raise $20,000 for student activities on each campus, and students are encouraged to do so by buying a sticker for $1.00 or a bumper sticker for $2.00.

The money raised will be used to support student activities, including athletics, music, theater, and other extracurricular programs. The funds will be distributed to each campus according to the number of students who participate in the pledge drive.

"We want to give everyone on campus a chance to show their pride," said Class of '85 President Jeff Schneider. "Whether you're a student, an athlete, or just a fan of SUNY, there's something for everyone in this program."

S. Korean students are democratic catalysts

By Douglas Cass

While some people contend that students are going off the rails in the United States, college students in South Korea, according to New York University's Robert Douglas, a staff member of the Asian Studies Research Group, are examples of the opposite trend in the campaign for democracy in the 1980s.

Douglas cited an example where students' creative energy and political activism have contributed to democratic change. In South Korea, the student movement has played a crucial role in the democratic transition process, demonstrating the power of student-led activism.

In the fall of 1980, students at three universities in South Korea staged a sit-in outside the presidential Blue House, demanding democratic reforms. The students' actions were met with repression, but they managed to gain recognition and support from other students and the public.

The students' movement continued to grow, and by the late 1980s, it had become a significant force in South Korean politics. The student protests were instrumental in bringing down the authoritarian Chun regime and ushering in a new era of democracy.

Today, South Korea is considered a democratic country, with students continuing to play an active role in the political process. The student movement has not only influenced policy decisions but has also contributed to a more open and transparent political system.

While the student movement in South Korea is a unique case, it serves as a reminder of the transformative power of young people and the importance of fostering a democratic environment that values the voices of students and other marginalized groups.
State Quad airband contest results cause spectators' accusations of biased judging

By Pam Brigham

It may have been advertised as "the oldest air band in the world," but apparently some people were just disappointed at last semester's State Quad airband contest.

Several people who attended the contest said that one of the contest's three judges who did not receive the band's group. All three of the winning bands appeared surprised at the choice.

Richie Malatesta, a resident assistant at State Quad and a member of one of the bands that participated, said, "It's really odd, because one of the judges was very good friends with the winning groups."

"I'm not angry, because we didn't come in first place, but the group that did place didn't deserve to," he said. "The crowd was watching the results, they were unconvincing, not as skillful as the other bands."

"The people on the sidelines were appalled at the choice."

The event was sponsored by the Student Association, because it is the oldest airband contest in the world. As a result, many students were not happy, and some were particularly concerned about the decision of the judges.

According to Lina Malatesta, a resident assistant, the decision was made based on the quality of the bands' performances, and the judges' evaluations were based on criteria established beforehand.

She explained, "I'm not angry because we didn't come in first place, but the group that did place didn't deserve to."
Thinness an obsession of those suffering from eating disorders

By Carrie Rios

Have you ever:
- Starved yourself to reach after a date?
- Told lies about how little you eat to a friend?
- Exercised for hours for the sake of food, even though you weren't hungry?
- Vomited after eating food?

If you have, you are not alone. A recent survey by the National Eating Disorders Association (NEDA) found that 1 in 4 females and 1 in 10 males ages 12-20 admit to engaging in at least one of these behaviors.

What is common in all eating disorders is a pattern of restrictive eating combined with fear of gaining weight, which creates a vicious cycle of losing control over eating.

There are three main types of eating disorders:

Anorexia nervosa, characterized by extreme weight loss and fear of gaining weight. Women are three times more likely to develop this disorder.

Bulimia nervosa, characterized by binge eating followed by self-induced vomiting. It is twice as common in women.

Bulimia recta, characterized by a lack of control over eating.

Women who develop eating disorders are often motivated by unrealistic body image ideals, a desire to be thin, or to control their weight.

What to do if you have signs of an eating disorder:

Seek professional help to discuss your concerns.

Contact a healthcare provider for a diagnosis and treatment plan.

Join support groups to connect with others who are going through similar experiences.

Self-care and self-compassion are crucial to recovery.

The Blasters take a Hard Line

Joe Romano

The Blasters have maintained their guitar-oriented sound and attitude since the first self-titled album released in 1982, which created a whole new sound for the L.A. music scene. The band's current lineup includes John Doe, Nils Petter Molvaer, Adam Levine, and Steve Kimock, among others.

The Blasters' sound is a mix of rockabilly, blues, and country music, with influences from the likes of Elvis Presley and Johnny Cash. Their music is characterized by a strong guitar presence and a laid-back attitude.

The Blasters' latest album, "One More from L.A.," was released in 2012 and received positive reviews for its blend of traditional and modern elements. The band continues to tour and perform across the United States and internationally, attracting a loyal following of fans who appreciate their unique sound and style.
Afrocentric ideas

Many African and Afro-American students have been allowed to enroll themselves without an instructor last week. When they arrived at their classes they were told that their professors who were also chair of the department, had resigned and that the classes would be taught by guest lecturers. At the end of the semester they offered them no further explanation.

Gordon had been chair of the African and Afro-American studies department for over twenty years. Since arriving last September she’d done most of the professors in this University to lead in the class, with no reputation and respectability around campus. She made the department more visible, offered interesting new courses, and introduced more of what she’s described as “academic rags” into the classes. In addition, most students have nothing but praise for her teaching and lecturing.

So, when Gordon disappeared last week, students had a lot of questions. Unfortunately, we’ve heard nothing on the whole situation, leaving Gordon’s status and potential career at SUNY open to much speculation.

Now, after Gordon has been subjected to a lot of humiliation public scrutiny, University officials have scheduled a meeting with Gordon, for this Wednesday. She is definitely informed as a department chair, but right now she’s only a full professor. Unfortunately, the University still has not said why she’s not a full professor. This is probably for her own safety. The mystery surrounding the situation has made it look too bad. Of course, she is now in a position where she may be able to take her rightful place. Looking forward to your continued support next year.

The New Deal is old hat

Bill King

A prime example is that of the nation’s west, a state that has been the focus of the New Deal in recent years. This is not surprising, given that California has had a long history of state government and legislative bodies that have been influenced by the New Deal. As such, it is not surprising that California has been a leader in terms of state government and legislative bodies that have been influenced by the New Deal.

Our southern states have far too been a leaders in terms of state government and legislative bodies that have been influenced by the New Deal. This is not surprising, given that Georgia has had a long history of state government and legislative bodies that have been influenced by the New Deal. As such, it is not surprising that Georgia has been a leader in terms of state government and legislative bodies that have been influenced by the New Deal.

Several students and faculty members say that some of the problems Gordon found, seemingly unique in their own way. In short, she was a bit of a diva. She tried to force her way on the students, but she was really a kind of process. In the process, she stopped on a step of too, but couldn’t this have been resolved within the department? Couldn’t the university officials have solved this without the setting the situation, leaving Gordon the embarrassment of this is often the result of unforeseen public speculation and gossip.

Unless there’s more to it, Gordon was an outspoken Afro-centric speaker, while many other students have been known to teach at a Eurocentric perspective. In a University where classes are usually taught by white males and it taught by Marxism, and socialism isn’t taught by socialists, the administration isn’t trouble seeing a class being taught by someone teaching Afro-centric ideas.

Enormous task

To the Editor: While the tax system at SUNY is far from perfect, it is not quite as antiquated as some of your recent editorials would have you believe. I believe you have been looking at the wrong site, however, in classifying the volume of spending that are involved in this issue.

The article in the ASP made a number of assertions concerning the tax system at SUNY. As a student of SUNY and a member of the ASP, I find your analysis of this system to be highly misleading. Your article states that the SUNY system is not equitable, while implying that other systems are equitable.

It is my understanding that in the SUNY system, tuition and fees are not paid on a basis of residence, but rather on a basis of enrollment. This is contrary to your article, which states that tuition and fees are paid on a basis of residence.

I would like to take this opportunity to clarify some of my points as they pertain to your article. Your article states that the SUNY system is not equitable, while implying that other systems are equitable. This is not true, as the SUNY system is equitable in terms of the amount of tuition and fees paid by students.

I am an accounting student at SUNY and I have been involved in the process of analyzing the SUNY tax system. Even the ticket system was closed to the article as not being a huge improvement. But then everything down about providing some space to tickets on funds at the bargain of the semester, even if they don’t take the others. The result is that most students are left with a lack of space and the risk of being insecure, we’re frustrated. I am going to thank all of the members of the tax.

As for the how being mechanized, there it only has to be able to do has no apparent to be for fixing (of ticket) when the trees are up programs. Unfortunately, the administrators are too busy always managing. I by far, the buses are usually on time for now.

Thanks to all

To the Editor: My name is not known to all of those individuals who supported The Albany State Hockey Team. However, through contributions, the ASP, faculty, staff and students have shown me how important our efforts are, and to which they have the right to thank.

I have been informed that there are in total about 50 billion dollars has been directed at the economy. It is my hope that this amount of money is put to good use, and that it helps to improve the lives of the people who need it the most. I am confident that this will happen, and I would personally like to thank all of the people for allowing me to be a part of this program.

Looking forward to your continued support next year.

Excellent care

To the Editor: In the last two years you have been aware of my attempts to provide the best possible care for my patients. I have strived to ensure that every patient has access to the best possible care. I am confident that I have been successful in this regard.

Students help spur growing sanctuary efforts

By Richard Dube

The University of Colorado student who first took a 20 plus-year-old movement to the next level said that the University of Arizona, which runs a network of church-sponsored sanctuaries, is not alone in its efforts. "It's always been thought of as a religious movement," Allen said, trying to explain why college students have been so slow to get involved. "But this is a moral and humanitarian imperative," he added. "You don't have to belong to a church to believe the U.S. government should not be perpetuating a system that enables people to be deported.

The university sanctuary movement leaders are concerned that the students who run these sanctuaries are often children of the refugees who are housed there. "We are prepared to take the risk," said Allen, adding that, "there is an awful lot of impressive work that can be done that does not entail criminal liabilities.

The sanctuary movement works to raise money for lawyers and pilgrims, and to set up a network of schools, hospitals, and churches to protect refugees from deportation. "We are not working with the government," Allen said. "We are working with the American people to help the refugees who are fleeing from the civil wars in their countries." The sanctuary movement leaders said that they are prepared to take the risk of criminal liability in order to help refugees.

According to Allen, the sanctuary movement is working with local churches to set up a sanctuary support network to help harbor El Salvadoran and Guatemalan refugees in the United States. "We are working with the American people to help the refugees who are fleeing from the civil wars in their countries." The sanctuary movement leaders said that they are prepared to take the risk of criminal liability in order to help refugees.

Fightin' Illini has Georgia Tech's Cremins worried

(AP) Despite an impressive victory over No. 1 seed North Carolina in the NCAA men's basketball tournament, top-seeded Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said Illinois "is the team to beat in the East Regional Mitigation for Tuesday night against the Orangemen at 2:30 p.m."

Cremins said his team didn't play as well as it could have in the victory over the Tar Heels, but he still thought the Illini were the better team.

"They didn't play as well as they could have," he said. "I thought they were the better team, and they played well enough to win, but I'm not sure they played their best game."

Cremins said he was hoping his team could get past the Illini and advance to the Final Four in Los Angeles.

"We've got a lot of work to do," he said. "We've got to play better if we want to win the tournament."

Cremins said he was looking forward to the challenge of playing against the Orangemen, who have been one of the top teams in the country all season.

"We've got to play our best game," he said. "We've got to play a complete game, and we've got to play with intensity and focus."

Cremins said he was confident his team could get past the Orangemen and advance to the Final Four.

"We've got a lot of confidence," he said. "We've got a lot of experience, and we've got a lot of talent. We've got to play our best game, and we've got to play with intensity and focus."
The Final Four could be an all Big East affair.

(AP) The Big East and Atlantic Coast Conferences are the two best basketball conferences in the nation, but long before this season, thevanced two teams from the two conferences._

The Big East is currently entering its 10th season of existence, a feat only matched by the ACC's 11th season in 1979-80. These two conferences not only lead the nation in basketball success, but they also lead in the number of teams that have won the NCAA Tournament, with the ACC having 20 teams, and the Big East having 18 teams.

Dane skaters finish season with 8-7-1 record

By Rachel Sipper

The skaters of the UAlbany hockey club set some goals for themselves this past season. Among these goals was to maintain a strong scoring streak, and to break the school record for points in a season. The skaters also wanted to compete in the NCAA Tournament, which they did.

The season opened November 2 at SUNY Canton in Canton, New York. The skaters were looking to establish a strong presence early in the season, and they did just that. The skaters went on to win their first five games, and they maintained this streak throughout the season. The skaters also wanted to improve on their strength in defense, and they did just that.

The season closed out March 19 at the SUNY Canton Memorial Arena in Canton, New York. The skaters concluded their season with a 8-7-1 record, and they were looking forward to the upcoming season.

Dane trackmen run away with eighth at states

By Ian Clements

The Albany State men's indoor track team faced a disappointing season with four assistant coaches in place this year at the State Championships at Cortland. As shown to the public of the District Championships, the team became an event in itself in the snow instead of a track meet.

The experience was smooth on the day of the meet, and the team became an event in itself in the snow instead of a track meet.
