Congress Worries Federal Workers

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Federal economy, as a policy of the outgoing Congress, is bound to affect U. S. employees, especially those who work under appropriations that are openly economistic.

The employee organizations have made a study of possibilities and recognize that they will be keenly aware of any attempt to prevent the enactment of measures that will do injustice to government operations and the morale of employees. They realize that reductions in force will take place, but they want these to be restricted to the minimum and based on rational appraisals.

The committee situation is as follows:

Representative John Taber will be chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, a key spot, and will handle a reduction of the Federal rolls by 1,000,000 more employees.

Senator Joseph H. Ball, of Missouri, will be an independent member, if not chairman, of the Senate Appropriations Committee. He is co-author of the no-strike principle of merit and fitness in public employment and to advance the interests of civil service employees everywhere throughout the State.

Throughout the months following a meeting on June 31, 1946, when delegates from many county and city groups met at the Dewitt Clinton Hotel, cited the great need for an independent association of public workers and expressed complete confidence in the type of organization exemplified in the Association of State Civil Service Employees, the members of the State Association discussed exactly the expansion which is now a fact. Delegates took action at two important meetings of the State Association, held on June 23 and October 15.

New Members Welcome

With the approval of reorganization of the State Association by the Board of Standards and Appeals of the Labor Department and the incorporation under the new name, Association headquarters has moved rapidly to perfect the machinery to inform civil service employees of 57 counties, 66 cities, 625 incorporated villages.

ALBANY, Dec. 31—The Civil Service Employees Association, Inc., now fully launched as a State-wide civil service employees group and accepting in its membership workers in State, county, city, town, village and district units is already engaged in a vigorous campaign to carry out the objectives of the association "to extend the principle of merit and fitness in public employment and to advance the interests of civil service employees throughout the State."

Central Determination on Rights on Reinstatement After Ordinary Disability

Competitive class employees who are reinstated from ordinary disability or from retirement for ordinary disability, after having been charge thereof, may be entitled to a part of the salary or to the full reinstatement of the position. The purpose of this section is to provide a 20 percent salary to those who are rehired from the retirement for the same position, at the same rate of pay.

Details of the Case

The recent decision of the Court of Appeals in the case of New York State v. Fitzgerald, et al., is applicable to the facts of this case. In the case of New York State v. ANNUS MIRABILIS

1947 is a year of destiny. It may be a year of performance and progress, or it may be a year of unparalleled disaster. The result is up to all of us. We shall determine whether we shall serve our people, the world, or whether we shall serve only our own self-interest. We shall determine to be just and humanitarian and to stress the importance of the rule of law and the rule of good conscience, of outward political dogma, of ancient outmoded customs.

Government Must Keep Things Moving

Government is a great traffic policeman. It has the primary function of protecting life and limb and the property of its citizens. It must be kept operating smoothly and efficiently. Slow-rolling government is always slow and inefficient. Broad many-lane highways to maximum government of the county.

State City Pensions
And Social Security

THE trustees and administrators of the State and City retirement systems are working openly opposed to the introduction of the principles of Social Security. Their opposition is not due to the difficulty of reconciling conflicting theories fully to the state retirement systems. Their opposition is to the introduction of the principles of Social Security, with its practice of mild redistribution of contributions by employees. On the other hand, the State Retirement Systems, with their responsibility for the pensions of public employees, would not mind gaining benefits from those in the upper brackets, but in the upper brackets if a given system is to work it is difficult to superimpose the Social Security system on the current system.

NYC System More Liberal

The NYC Retirement System, and some of the other plans in the field as well, are taking a position that, although they are to be increased, would involve relatively large extra contributions by employees. On the other hand, the State Retirement Systems on the other hand, are taking a position that, although they are to be increased, would involve relatively large extra contributions by employees. Thus, the problem is not so much about the type of benefit that you can get in government service, but about the type of system that you can get.

The problem is due to the fact that the Social Security System is a system of redistribution of contributions by employees. On the other hand, the State Retirement Systems are working to maintain the existing system of pensioning on a basis of individual retirement income, as well as under the actuarial public pension system. The problem is that the Social Security System is a system of redistribution of contributions by employees, while the State Retirement Systems are working to maintain the existing system of pensioning on a basis of individual retirement income.

U.S. REPORTS ON SHIFT IN EMPLOYMENT

Special to The LEADER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—During September, 1945, 30,000 additional Federal employees were added to pay rolls of Federal agencies. The numbers for September were the same as those for August, the second highest in the history of the U.S. Civil Service Commission. The highest number of new employees added in a month was about 157,000 employees were separated from full-time positions in the civil service in the U.S. in September. This number was more than twice the number (72,000) added of the 2,124,100 Federal civilian workers in the continental United States at the end of September, comparing with the previous month, were full employed in full-time positions.

Reduction Figures

A net reduction of 450,000 full-time employees between September, 1945, and September, 1944, has been accomplished with a considerable turnover of personnel. During this period more people have been separated from full-time positions than were hired, with the exception of one period. The turnover between August 2 and September 2, for every 100 employees on the Federal payroll, the various Federal agencies operated an average of 7 persons per month, at the same time that their average number of positions increased. A separation rate of 4 per cent, for September, 1944, was below the average of 1.8 per cent during the last year. The separation rate for September, 1945, was below the highest for any month since October, 1944.

Disabled Veterans
Plan Law Program
To Correct Inequities

Approximately 200 disabled veterans and members of their families took part in the second annual meeting of the Disabled Veterans and Civil Service, sponsored by Civil Service Chapter 71. Discussion was made of the possibilities of extending the benefits of the law to all disabled veterans in civil service.

The formula concerned itself with the necessity of amending the law to include all disabled veterans in civil service.

The forum concluded that legislation is necessary to extend the benefits of the law to all disabled veterans in civil service.

ECONOMIC PRESSURE SHIFTS VETS FROM SCHOOL TO JOB UNDER VOCATIONAL PROGRAM

The City College Vocational Administration, recognizing the need for the 10,000 men who will return from the Army for the 1945-46 academic year, has launched a national campaign to make vocational schools for the returning veteran, according to Dr. Louis Long, Director of Vocational Administration.

The case of the 10,000 vet-en, Gov. BRADFORD from New York, presents a typical example of the type of work the U.S. is doing, Dr. Long asserts. A former first lieutenant in the Army, Gov. Bradford is also a registered nurse, the only returned veteran to be appointed to the post of Vocational Administration, and is a graduate of the old New York City Vocational Administration.

According to the college's Army Hall, 1560 Arm-ny Ave., New York, approximately 4000 units have been in use in various hospitals. Having completed a total of 83 veterans' cases of training, the college, as of July 1, 1944, the unit is to be used by the army for the duration, while the veterans are on their department.

A major part of the staff, a former training officer for the Medical Corps, has been working with the veterans during the training program, maintaining a staff of 20 City College trained men and women in the counseling department.

Aid to the Returned Veteran

Aid to the returned veteran is to be given in the form of a free vocational counseling service, according to Dr. Long. The counseling will be given free of charge to the veteran who wishes to study for a vocational degree at any of the New York City Vocational Administration schools.

THE RETURNED VETERAN

A returned veteran, according to Dr. Louis Long, of the type of work the U.S. is doing, will be given a free vocational counseling service, according to Dr. Long. The counseling will be given free of charge to the veteran who wishes to study for a vocational degree at any of the New York City Vocational Administration schools.
