NYC Opens Exams For Jobs as Teacher

The NYC Board of Education has opened exams for licenses and teaching certificates (men and women). The following positions will be filled:

- (1) high school graduation and one year of experience in teaching, or (2) a two-year degree in education, or (3) a combination of (1) and (2). Fee $1. (Friday, November 7).

ALBANY, Oct. 13 — J. Edward Conaway, president of the State Civil Service Commission, has announced adoption on a trial basis of a simplified procedure for prequalifying job applications. The new procedure will be used in lieu of the usual examination format. The new examination will be based on the ability to answer questions related to the position.

Hereafter, every agency seeking new employees will have to give a description of the exact duties and activities of the person who will fill the position.

New System

Under the new system, the titles covered, the agency requests, and the new jobs merely list the position and certificate that its duties and requirements conform to the standards. This eliminates the detailed description, cuts down paper work and time of processing.

John E. Ford

The more efficient method was worked out jointly by the Civil Service Department and the State Education Department with a view to improving all requests for the creation of new positions.

Art Show
Head Lauds Art Show

ALBANY, Oct. 13 — E. Edward Conway, President of the New York State Civil Service Commission, in a letter to Joseph Rothman, Chairman of the Art Show Committee of the Civil Service Employees Association, commended the organization for its efforts to stimulate an interest in art among the public employees. The Second Annual Art Show of the Civil Service Employees Association will be held at the New York State Institute of History and Art from October 15 through November 15, 1952. The event was held at the United States Civil Service Commission.

The examination was sent to all junior tax examiners in the Department of Labor, which, in this particular case, did not effect the departmental machinery so as to make the grievance worth-while. The grievance thus has taken more than a year to process. The departmental machinery follows a 13% wage adjustment. The steel industry settled for a wage increase, but it looks as if the miners will be obtaining an even greater increase.

In the electrical machinery industry, there is a lot of talk about a wage adjustment that would amount to about 6%. The rubber industry settled for a 1% an hour boost, and the oil industry secured Wage Stabilization Board approval for a 1½% an hour adjustment. These and other large industrial areas constitute a major upward wage adjustment that will undoubtedly be reflected throughout the economy in the near future.

Jobs

Civil Service Employees Association

- The expected depressing reflection of the recent steel strikes did not result as anticipated by most economists.
- The expected increase in a lagged business activity that followed the end of the steel strike. As yet, there is not yet enough evidence in statistics showing the impact of the $1.5 an hour wage adjustment in the steel industry.
- It is interesting to note that the coal industry is making substantial progress in wage settlement. While final contracts have not been written with the northern mine owners as yet, it is indicated that agreements will be signed without union representatives stating that they'll include a $1.90 per day wage boost. This amounts to about 18% wage adjustment. The steel industry settled for a wage increase, but it looks as if the miners will be obtaining an even greater increase.
- In the electrical machinery industry, there is a lot of talk about a wage adjustment that would amount to about 6%. The rubber industry settled for a 1% an hour boost, and the oil industry secured Wage Stabilization Board approval for a 1½% an hour adjustment. - No compensatory time off was being granted.
- There was no attempt on the part of the union to change the departmental machinery which, in this particular case, did not effect the departmental machinery so as to make the grievance worth-while.
- The grievance thus has taken more than a year to process.

Pride of New York

This shining beauty was tops in 1900.

Today, Con Edison taxes helps buy and maintain the finest fire-fighting equipment for New York. Actually, by out of every dollar you pay for electricity and gas goes for city taxes alone. Con Edison's total tax bill in 1961 was $104,000,000.
Syracuse, Oct. 15—Civil service men in public park work on city, county, and State levels met in Institute of New York State, State Department of Parks, Recreation, and Conservation, such as has been in existence throughout this century. Next September State College of Forestry was scheduled to open in Ithaca, New York, and many forestry college students are expected to attend.

The formal organization of the New York State Parks, Recreation, and Conservation Board was arranged at a meeting here. The board was created by the Legislature to work out the details of the organization.

The aim of the conference, and one of the main purposes of the organization, is to improve outdoor recreation for the public. The idea is to encourage parks and recreation departments to work together.

The agenda included panels on recreation management, public relations, maintenance problems, and the development of supervisors in park work.

By Civil Service Men

The participants agreed that both professional and semi-professional recreation jobs exist, and are increasing in numbers as outdoor recreation is recognized. One of the aims of the conference was to improve outdoor recreation for the public.

The aim of the conference, and the organization, is to change ideas, ideas, and experience to improve park planning.

The speakers included panels on recreation programming, public relations, maintenance problems, and the development of supervisors in park work.

The Fragility of Federal Employment

One again the fragility of Federal employment becomes apparent with the announcement that more than 2,000 civil servants in the Veterans Administration are to be dismissed, in line with an army of others.

Question: Is it not time that Congress, so quick to cut funds imposed by Congress. The extent of reduction-in-force dismissals is so heavy in many of the Federal agencies. The abilities, and internal experience of employees facing dismissal ought to be used by the government in filling other available positions, before outside recruiting is undertaken. In this connection, re-examination of civil service regulations is in order; some of them are frightfully rigid, preventing quick adaptability to a new situation like that of the VA dismissals. The employees to be dismissed: In what other units of government can they be employed? Is it possible, with slight re-training, to put them on other jobs? What secondary abilities have they which will make them appropriate for other available positions?

Question: Shall Congress consider the feasibility of paying employees in reduction-in-force actions? Not a revolutionary plan, the proposal of severance pay is an established custom in enlightened segments of private industry.

Question: Is there any chance the VA will be still a terrible thing, even when works for the government.

NYC Plans To Curb Job Declinations

Sweeping changes in its rule regarding declarations of job offers are planned by the NYC Civil Service Commission, but it will wait public reaction to the proposals before taking any action.

Declinations, a mixture of job refusals and resignations, are a source of overpayment since the name remains on the employment list until the person receives a job. The commissioners were considering a proposal to limit the name to 2 years.

The plan would come into effect immediately upon adoption. The staff might be divided, but the name would be removed from the list after a short time period, for example 18 months. In that way, the Commission feels it will sharply reduce the time span between examination and appointment, and save itself the present cumbersome work of putting names back on lists and taking them off again. In some instances, eligibles have made as many as 14 declinations and have had their names restored to the list every 2 years.

The Commission wants to get rid of the nuisance of dealing with eligibles who, when they took the exams, never had any intention of taking the job.

The declination Reasons

Declinations would be accepted under the following circumstances:
1. Change in residence: location 1; pay too low; 2; job only temporary or part time (limit the exam was specifically held for filling such types of jobs); 4; nature of the duties; 5. offer is a job in a different title than the one for which the exam was held.

In each case of declaration the eligible certifies his reason, removes the name from the list, and instead of being paid for the period of time he failed to report for work, he is granted a period of unemployment insurance.

Persons who, after appointment, resign during their probation period, or are let out, cannot have their names as readily restored to the list, since they, too, would have to work until all other eligibles were canvassed, and would have to present strong reasons for restoration even then.

The proposal will be presented in the departmental versions of the newspapers, and will be presented in the departmental versions of the newspapers.

The new plan includes premiums for all, and is expected to sharply reduce the time span between examination and appointment, and save itself the present cumbersome work of putting names back on lists and taking them off again.
