Activities of Employees in State Monroe

THE Monroe chapter, CSEA, met for its annual banquet last week, at which time several grievances were presented. President John H. Greck announced that CSEA can bring more benefits than any other employer organization.

A nominating committee was appointed by the officers, directors and delegates for the upcoming year. The executive board was named chairman. Co-sponsors are William F. O'Brien and William Peers, of the county, and John H. Greck, state chairman, city employee.

John Green has done a wonderful job as president, but under the conditions and by-laws, which cannot be waived, the president must be in support of the policy. Bill is your respect to the new officers with greetings and thanks.

Bill Hudson, 2nd vice president, reported, an idea that is tried, an attempt to form an entertainment group within the chapter, to be voted on by those volunteering. Bill is naturally impatient to get the job started.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Al and his family. May 7, 1953.

NYC IS IN REAL EARNEST about its job reclassification project. Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri will issue a statement of the goal and method being used to attain it. The new Classification Bureau, established by President Eisenhower for inclusion of jobs that are to be filled outside of the merit system, is to be brought under the Civil Service Commission. He says only police making and confidential jobs will be included, and every employee will know whether he has a career job or not.

ONE OF THE PRIME OBJECTIVES of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks, and other AFL postal unions, is to have promotions to supervisor made competitive, instead of through political or personal pull. Weed has been received by the Federation that the Eisenhower Administration is planning to have, in fact, would want to put a real merit system in the Post Office Department, which has never had one, since it has always been a political department. The Republican National Committee, Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield, and Mayor in- deed, would be the best person to work with the Civil Service Commission toward this objective.

NEW LOOK IN U. S. ATTORNEY’S OFFICE, SOUTHERN DISTRICT

The atmosphere of the U. S. Attorney’s Office, Southern District of New York, is one of quiet efficiency. The new assistant, averaging perhaps 28 years of age, haven’t lost an aura of college enthusiasm, which expresses itself in their manner with one another, the spirited conversations about the roots of law, and the absorbed consideration of current cases.

The new boss, United States Attorney J. Edward Lumbard, is white-haired, distinguished-looking, with a self-possessed presence. He has carried a variety of youth assignments over the years, having probated and prosecuted everything from sewer scandals to murder. For a short period (1947) he was a Justice of the New York State Supreme Court, by appointment of Governor Dewey. His law firm, until his present appointment, was Donovan, Leisure, Newcomb & Irvine.

Fifty-year-old Lloyd F. MacMahon, Chief Assistant U. S. Attorney, also comes from Lumbard’s law firm. Known as a strong legal brain, McMahon was a top lawyer in his practice. During the war he served with the Navy as a seventeen-year-old.

Two of the Division Chiefs are hold-overs. Nathaniel Skolnik, head of the Civil Division, has been with the U. S. Attorney’s Office since 1944. Joseph P. Martin, Executive Assistant, is an expert on office procedures.

Arnold Bauman, new chief of the Criminal Division, was with Thomas E. Dewey in the early racket-busting days and remains with New York D. A. Franz S. Hagan as Deputy Assistant District Attorney. He was Chief Counsel to a U. S. Senate subcommittee investigating the Washington police force.

Newspaperman—Lawyer

One of the interesting new assistants—of especial interest to newspapermen—is Dominick Peluso, who left the newspaper field to assume the title Administrative Assistant United States Attorney. Only 27, Dom Peluso studied law at night while carrying a full-time job at City Hall reporter for the New York Daily News. Even so, he finished his law course in no longer a time than it takes full-time students. He took his bar exam and passed at the first crack. Before he had official notification, he got a call from the new U. S. Attorney’s office asking if he’d like a job. Peluso accepted, and his background of reporting government news, plus his law school training, seemed to be the kind of man wanted to fill an important niche.

As for public information, policy of the new administration is “to give out as much information as possible without hurting cases in progress.”

The atmosphere of the U. S. Attorney’s Office, Southern District, covers the counties of New York, Bronx, Dutchess, Greene, Orange, Putnam, Rockland, Sullivan, Ulster and Westchester.

The conference also adopted a resolution calling for more active participation in the development of activity by organizations of public employees.

Commenting on the interest in employee-employer relations shown, Mr. McDonough said:

“This recognition by operating officials of the organized civil service employees and their capacity to contribute to the efficiency and integrity of government, when invited to participate in the making of laws and rules relating to employment policies and practices, is most promising. It is within the human element in government that the moral and ethical standards that control human actions are vital to the success of the enterprise, which they serve.”

McDonough is Chief of the Civil Division.

Sample Questions to Help One Pass Exams

Figure 1

Using the block of letters (marked square), as the basis of operation, turn it in different positions, to produce the correct answer. Only one of the answers (A, B, C, D) can be correct.

A similar example. The standard may require a larger number and different direction of rotation this time. See explanation in the text.

Problems in spatial relations occur in civil service exams. What are spatial relations problems? They are questions that test one's ability to visualize graphical representations, to fit pieces together by mental process (without resort to actually cutting pieces as in jigsaw puzzles). They test for one aspect of keenness of perception.

Here are four questions in spatial relations that are circulated by the U.S. Civil Service Commission as study preparation for exams for Government jobs.

Questions

1. In Fig. 1 there is a cube. The designer or symbols on each of three visible sides of the cube are shown in the standard. This is the cube that is to be used for basis of comparison. At right are four drawings of cubes, lettered A, B, C, or D. Decide which of the four cubes (A, B, C or D) is the same as the standard.

Method. The mental operation to be performed is to turn the standard cube in any direction or directions necessary to produce one of the results, A, B, C or D. And only one of these results is possible, by rotation of the standard.

It may be necessary to turn the standard both over and around, or manipulate further.

Look at A. If the standard is moved left on its base, clockwise, the cross will be brought to the front elevation, as shown in A. But while the cross is now at front, and if no other turning of the standard backward one turn, that will bring the small cross to the top, because it would be at front, as shown in A. The diagram would appear from the view, because it would be at front, as shown in A. This is wrong. Now try B. If the standard is moved right on its base, clockwise, the cross will be brought to the front elevation, as shown in B. But while the cross is now at front, and if no other turning of the standard backward one turn, that will bring the large cross to the top, because it would be at front, as shown in B. This is correct. Next turn, say, making the left turn that brings the cross on top? The same operation provides a new base, the hidden side left, which remains hidden, and brings the triangle one turn to the right, the same as shown.

Answer, B.

More of the Same

2. Here again we have the standard at left, in Fig. 2, and must select A, B, C, or D as the answer. It's practically the same problem as No. 1. We see that in A the cross is on top, so we move the standard in a sort of backward trick, to put the cross on top. Now the formerly hidden base becomes the front elevation. As at front, as shown in B.

Answer, B.

Pointing Something Different

3. This question is a little different from the previous ones. It will be noticed that only two solutions are shown in A, B, C, and D, of Fig. 2. Decide which one of the four pictures, A, B, C, or D, could be produced by putting together of the pieces shown in the square marked GQ. There must be no open space left, and no overlap. The GI must be perfect. Again the trials will disclose that rotation of 180 degrees (halfway around a circle), in either direction, almost instantaneously solves the problem. The suggested design of the left-hand piece border is such a plausible receiver, and produces a flat-topped rebus, with shifting sides.

Answer, D.

Armory Employees Set Plans for New Better Conditions

Armory employees of New York State are going to make the biggest drive yet to improve their working conditions, and increase their pay rates. This was announced at the Armory Conference held Tuesday morning in New York City.

Chapter President Robert Parker, speaking on behalf of the Armory Employees, said: "A new and vigorous drive is now being launched to secure better conditions for all the employees of the armory. We are determined to make this the biggest drive yet to improve our working conditions, and increase our pay rates. We are confident that with the support of the statewide membership we will be able to achieve our goals."
