The Possible Effect of Automation

Recently the Federal Civil Service Commission initiated a survey to learn the facts on the possible effects of "automation" on national and local public sector organizations and their employees. Some of the problems to be explored are the effects of the greater use of electronic machines on recruitment and personnel training programs. The Commission also invited the employee organizations to participate with them on the project. "Automation" has become a word in wide use in recent months. It is in itself a word which has carried a great deal of comment and misunderstanding. There is nothing really mystical or new about "automation." It is simply an extension and logical development of our modern and vast expanding technology. It is in general the application of the principles of electronics to our machines which speeds up their processes and simplifies their operations. The electrical brain or "Univac" and the high speed calculators now being produced for American industry are examples.

The Effect on Industry

Many industrial corporations are experimenting with these new masters and as a result of this automation industry is laying out the application of electronics to its assembly line, and the General Electric Company in its service departments.

Unquestionably, a widespread use of these devices will cause some disruption in the labor market. When the first machines for word processing were introduced in England in the 16th century, there were all kinds of labor problems -- some of which involved violence. But today, a new industrial revolution of the kind we are facing need not necessarily be as violent.

We have the experience of history behind us, as well as the need for the greater productive capacity for the nation. Our population is growing. There will be more work for those who are trained to use these new machines. In fact, at our present rates of production -- without these new machines -- labor and machinery would not be able to keep pace with the consumer need.

A Continuous Process

Thus "automation" will serve to increase the numbers of available job opportunities. This trend will continue and new work will be available in other areas where new services will be needed. This process has been going on in this country for the past century and a half, and has never really ended. Today's "new work" will be the free work in those areas which the new machines are laying out.

It is only a matter of time when the processes will be applied to the government service in New York State. At this time there are many machines which are exploiting the application of high speed machinery to their operations. The use will not be as speedily adopted as some workers might wish.

We must also be aware of the limitations of automation. There is nothing new about it. It is simply an extension of the principles of electronics to our machines which speeds up their processes and simplifies their operations. There is nothing really mystical or new about "automation." It is simply an extension and logical development of our modern and vast expanding technology. Housing Supplymen State Reasons for Pay Must Rise

Housing supplymen, who are in complete charge of storerooms, submitted a plea for increased pay to the New York City Housing Authority.

They pointed out that their pay is much less than that received by stockmen and assistant stockmen in private industry. The authorities quoted a survey made by the Port of New York Authority regarding industry pay.

On behalf of the employees, Henry Feinstein, president, Local 277, Teamsters, submitted a table of pay comparisons. This showed that stockmen get $2.16 an hour, weighted average, $2.17 an hour median, while assistant stockmen get $1.83 and $1.89, on the respective reckoning bases.

The figures were taken from the Port Authority report.

Comparison With Industry

The Housing Authority supplymen, said Mr. Feinstein, should be compared with stockmen in private industry. Top pay for the Housing Authority stockmen this year is $3,500, $1.71 an hour. With the July 1, 1954 increment, their top salary will become $1,750 an hour, and the weighted average, in our opinion, will not be more than $1.65 an hour for 1955-57. This is 18 cents an hour below the pay of assistant stockmen in private industry.

Mr. Feinstein remarked that the survey figures coincide with those of Local 917, Teamsters, and Local 258, United Auto Workers, both AFL-CIO groups whose members deal with automobile parts.

Transit Authority Rates

The Transit Authority rates were agreed to by Mr. Feinstein as $2.15 an hour for stock assistants, and $2.17 to $2.35 for stockmen.

"Compare this," he invited, "to the housing authority pay, which for 1956-57 will be $1.56 to $1.73 for supplymen."

The Career and Salary Plan has the following grades for three relevant life years. He added: "assistant stockman, $3,000 to $3,500; stockman, $3,500 to $4,000; and housing supplymen, $4,000 to $5,000."

He said that the duties of the supplyman are as responsible as those of a stockman.

Responsibilities

"We coincide that many stockmen supervise assistants, on a regular basis," he added, "while supplymen supervise on an irregular basis but stockmen have stevedores over them to assume major responsibilities."

Mr. Feinstein addressed his remarks to Warren Mason, executive director, and Joseph Rechtel, personnel director.

FEDERAL DECISIONS

Supreme Court of U.S.

In In re Slochower, petitioner, a professor at Brooklyn College, was dismissed after claiming the protection of Section 903 of the Malini self-incrimination is equivalent to compulsion.

He appealed, and the Supreme Court ordered a rehearing on Section 903 of the Administrative Code. The New York Court of Appeals held that the declaration of the right of an individual against self-incrimination is equivalent to a restatement. The United States Supreme Court, on rehearing, agreed and held that Section 903, as applied by the New York Court, violated his constitutional clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Fidler and Newman v. Schechter.

Petitioners were part of a group of employees in the Department of Hospitals who took a promotion examination for senior physical therapist. They were dismissed after failing the oral test.

They now contend that the oral test is unnecessary to determine an employee's qualifications, and that such function may be performed by the doctors who conducted the oral examinations.

The court (Hecht, J.) held that it is well established that the civil service commission has the power and function to fix fair and reasonable standards by which applicants may be tested and that such function may be subject to review by the courts.

Mr. Fidler and Mr. Newman have received preferential treatment by the doctor's committee.

Which the oral examinations were conducted or concerning the examinations themselves. The petition was dismissed.

Previti v. Schechter. Petitioner was dismissed from a temporary position of twinnerman on November 17, 1952. He started this proceeding on November 21, 1953.

The court (Hecht, J.) held that he is entitled to seek reinstatement.

The court also found that there was nothing irregular or improper about the manner in which the oral examinations were conducted or concerning the examinations themselves. The petition was dismissed.

It read:
"I have enjoyed my years as President of the Organization and appreciate the cooperation and support that has been given to me. I am quite thankful for all the gifts."

The following instructions highlight the importance of proper equipment and procedures in handling fire department operations.

The diagram illustrates the two types of firemen, with one for high pressure and another for low pressure. The high pressure firemen wear protective clothing and use equipment like the fireman's helmet and boots, while the low pressure firemen use standard fire protection gear.

The text emphasizes the importance of using the right equipment for the job and the need for regular maintenance to ensure the safety and efficiency of fire department operations.

The study material for May 26 Fireman Test includes questions on the correct use of tools and equipment, as well as the importance of adhering to safety protocols when using them.

The text highlights the importance of staying current with the latest information and techniques to ensure that firemen are prepared for all types of emergencies.

COUNSEL'S REPORT
An exciting and fruitful session of the New York State Legislature is behind us. During the days the State's wakening body sits in Albany, the CSEA members are working hard. The Association worked with great energy and skill to promote the passage of bills which we believe are of the greatest benefit to the State's public employees. To date, the LEADER has reported on legislative action as it affects the CSEA activities, and their results. John J. Kelly, Jr., CSEA, has given us a clear and instructive in this issue a comprehensive discussion of some detail the retirement measures which were before the legislature and which were voted upon.

Chapter 941 of the Laws of 1957 provides for a grant of $3,833,829 to the State Police Retirement System for the year beginning the first day of July, 1957. The Association supported this bill and the Governor having to do with the Employee Retirement System - Eleventh. This installment to discuss in some detail the retirement measures which were before the legislature and which were voted upon.
