Mary Krone May Head State Civil Service Commission

ALBANY, Nov. 24 — Mary Goode Krone, Republican minority member of the State Civil Service Commission, is the leading choice for designation as Commission President after Jan. 1, 1959, a source said Monday.

Miss Krone, who has been a member of the commission since the Dewey administration and once served as chairman of the State Personnel Council, is expected to be the choice of Governor-elect Nelson A. Rockefeller.

The other Democratic appointees on the commission, William H. Morgan of New York City and Henry J. Herman of Rochester, are expected to continue as members of the commission until their three-year terms expire Feb. 1, 1961.

Falk Can Stay

Mr. Falk, who was named president by Governor Harriman, will resign as chief administrative officer of the Civil Service Commission, a source said Monday.

The source said Mr. Falk may continue to serve as a member of the commission at least until his term expires. The other Democratic appointees on the commission, William H. Morgan of New York City and Henry J. Herman of Rochester, are expected to continue as members of the commission until their terms expire.

Charity Drives Among US Employees Studied

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 — A new White House committee is conducting controlled tests in 289 Federal installations in 100 cities to discover how charity drives directed at U.S. employees are affected if restricted to a confiden tial envelope type of solicitation. Four types of solicitations are being used, but only one type in any given installation.

The President's Committee on Fund Raising Within the Federal Service plans to supplement this test with questionnaires. Its findings will be made public early next year. The United Community Funds and Councils of America has claimed that envelope-type solicitation reduces receipts and increases administrative overhead.

of Suffolk County. The visit, if made several weeks earlier would have included a tour of hospital facilities, exchange of ideas, and discussions on patients welfare and employee working conditions. However, coming after the election and some six weeks before the 1958 legislative session opens in Albany, it could only mean that the group is interested in the mental health problems.

Four Men Meet

As part of a program to streamline the work of the Real Property Bureau, under the direction of Attorney General Edward R. Amend, a committee was appointed by President Louis J. Lefkowitz to expedite payment to persons whose lands are appropriated for public improvement. The real property bureau said that in order to speed payment to property owners, their representatives have been appointed to work with the bureau's office to expedite the handling of claims. The attorney general and the head of the property bureau have been told that the appointment of the committee will provide a closer supervision of the work of the attorneys in the real property bureau, under the direction of Assistant Attorney General Edwin R. Amend, and are also in furtherance of studies made by Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz. The committee is made up of representatives of 10 of the State's counties. The Association of State Civil Service Attorneys held a dinner meeting of Miller's Restaurant, New York City. About 60 persons attended.

Harry Eaton, president; Willard Lamphere, 1st vice president; Louis J. Lefkowitz, 2nd vice president; Mr. Samuel Bachman, treasurer; and Mr. Osier and Mr. Ward.

As membership is being substantially increased the association has opened an office at 277 Park Avenue, Room 274.

Harry Galpin, staff attorney, was appointed by the State Civil Service Employees Association to speak on the classification problems existing in the State's civil service.

The association is interested in the welfare of its members and the entire State's civil service. The association's officers are approved by acclamation and a committee was appointed by President Louis J. Lefkowitz.

The group included three legislators, Mr. Lefkowitz, Mr. Lieberman, and Mr. Titiene. They met for a good part of the day with Charles Buckman, M.O., Director of the Kings Park State Hospital. The meeting included a tour of hospital facilities, exchange of ideas, and discussions on patients welfare and employee working conditions. A highlight of the meeting included a discussion on employee morale and factors which govern and influence this important aspect of work and production.

You can be sure that these Suffolk politicians, already well schooled to the problems of the hospital workers, left the institution with every last detail vital to their immediate needs and with a revived interest in promoting legislation on their behalf.

Arrangements for the meeting were made by Edgar D. Cooper, Chairman of the Employee Relations Committee of the Kings Park Chapter of the Civil Service Employees Association.

APPEALS COURT WEIGHS RIGHT OF COMMISSIONER TO DROP PROBATIONARY PATROLMAN

ALBANY, Nov. 24 — A decision is expected during the week of December 19 whether a deputy sheriff, who had declared illegal the 30-year probationary period of the New York City Police Department, will have the right to declare a probationary period for the entire police force.

The case is that of Peter Geor- ning, a deputy sheriff who had declared that the police force be declared Illegal the 30-year probationary period for the entire police force. Mr. Georing, who is a deputy sheriff, had petitioned for the right to declare that the police force be released from the 30-year probationary period for the entire police force.

Mr. Georing, who is a deputy sheriff, had petitioned for the right to declare that the police force be released from the 30-year probationary period for the entire police force.

Judge Sidney Pineup, the former police commissioner, has rejected the petition. However, the police commissioner, who is a deputy sheriff, has petitioned for the right to declare that the police force be released from the 30-year probationary period for the entire police force.

There are two cases, too.

The first of these new series of Federal Service Examinations held November 15 was for the position of Assistant Postmaster. The second will be held Saturday, January 16. Closing date for applying for these two tests is January 31.

The Achilles Paradox

The most famous one deals with a handicap foot race between Achilles and a tortoise. It may be the most representative. Achilles and the tortoise start at the same time, the tortoise naturally being given a headstart, since Achilles is twice as fast. Achilles successively reduces the distance between them, the tortoise still will remain ahead, although be natural being given a headstart, since Achilles is twice as fast. The question is, Will Achilles ever catch up with the tortoise? Zeno said No. Mathematically, a distance can be divided into halves as many times as it can be divided into wholes. Also, both missed the point that if space can be divided infinitely, so can time. Achilles catches up. Also, both missed the point that if space can be divided infinitely, so can time.

Achilles catches up. Also, both missed the point that if space can be divided infinitely, so can time.

He'd Seen It Done

Zeno had seen many handicap foot races in which the faster person started in the rear, including overnight handicaps, so knew that it is possible to run a day to catch up. The fact that the pin on what one's about to start was fast in, then another was placed and in random, instead of on some cyclic basis, is irrelevant. In Zeno's day no definition of the infinite existed, so no wonder even the best of the mathematicians were confused in their thinking regarding the infinite, particularly the infinitely small, which we call instantaneous. When we speak of "infinite" these days we mean the infinite large. We know that not only would Achilles overtake the tortoise, but the rate of progress and the distance, how one would take it to catch up, He would catch up. We apply a branch of mathematics known as limits series.

Zeno's paradox is of the form related to an arrow in flight. He argued that as the arrow had to be at one place at one time, and at another place at another time, and there were an infinitely large number of places where it had to be, between starting point and "instantaneous." There is no reality in motion. The arrow, he said, even in flight is at rest.

Public Administration

The Los Angeles County Charter Study Commission looks into a study of the civil service program of which is Henry Retting, Jr., dean, School of Public Administration, University of Southern California, has proposed the following changes in the County's civil service rules:

1. The Personnel Director to be appointed rather than the Civil Service Commissioner, and to be responsible for the administration of the civil service program. The Commission would retain its policy-making and judicial functions, the latter through a series of hearings and recommendations to the Personnel Director.

2. All promotional examinations to be held on a county-wide rather than local basis, to allow for a larger and more diverse pool of candidates.

3. Simultaneous certification of candidates for one or more positions, removing the necessity for multiple examinations.

4. Transfer of responsibility for employee training to the Chief Personnel Officer.

5. Greater flexibility in contesting for services rather than the Civil Service Commission, and to be responsible for the administration of the civil service program. The Commission would retain its policy-making and judicial functions, the latter through a series of hearings and recommendations to the Personnel Director.
Sanitation Widows' Pension Case Argued

ALBANY, Nov. 24 — The case of Mrs. Ella M. Barry versus Mulrain, in which the widow of a New York City sanitation employee was denied the widow a pension, was argued in the Court of Appeals. The City denied the widow a pension on the ground that she married the sanitation employee after he was already retired on a pension. Samuel Resnicoff, her attorney, alleged that made no difference, as the law provides a pension for the widow of a retired employee minimum service length of 10 years, and states nothing about when the marriage took place.

The City also says the widow was eligible under the provisions of "at rest" and she acted too late. Mr. Resnicoff says the statute of limitations did not begin to count until the City was under a continuing legal obligation to grant her a pension and, therefore, the application was pending. But delay was due to inaction by the City.

The widow is 69, said the lawyer, and gets more income as a relief client than the pension. Mr. Resnicoff pointed out that Andrew W. Mulrain, who, as Commissioner, denied her a pension, is now retired himself on a pension. He would pay, but prefers the pension. Mr. Resnicoff showed that Zeno of Classical Greece, and his successors, even those who disagreed with his result, was in assuming that continuity must be a reality. Welterstrass was able to coincide the mathematical result with reality and logic. Others amplified his findings. A new branch of mathematics, the infinitesimal calculus, finally resulted. Zeno really started something.

No Shortage of Infinites

Zeno kept talking about the arrow being here one moment and another the next, although with finity there is no next moment. One moment is separated from the so-called next moment by an infinite number of other moments. The separation between one moment and the next would have to be infinitely large. There would be continuity, instead of the discontinuity that separate moments suppose.

Julius W. H. Dedekind, mathematician, born in Russia, made a major contribution to the subject. He agreed that because a thing in flight, is not to say that the thing itself is subject to change, adding that the flying arrow now here, now there, is an infinity of rows of places than can be counted, and is subject to change, such as the change in position of the arrow besides, is not just one infinite but an infinite number of infinities.

Lines, Days and Years

A whole new branch of mathematics known as the theory of infinites has been built up on the basis of infinity number of infinites. You can remove some of the terms of the infinite without reducing the infinite. The number of points in a line is infinite, hence the same no matter long short the line is, and no matter if the length is increased or reduced. To the arrow add the number of years in all time as large as the number of days, both being infinitile. Thus the axiom that the whole is always greater than any of its parts has to be discarded, for with infinites, any part is as great as the whole, though never greater. It should follow that the infinite also is indestructible. It can not be made less by removing all of its terms for it is impossible to remove all of its terms.

The Greeks did not include motion itself in their mathematical concepts, preferring to deal with a locus that generated moving separata moments exist, then time is discontinuous. It's possible that the whole is always greater than any of its parts has to be discarded, for with infinites, any part is as great as the whole, though never greater. It should follow that the infinite also is indestructible. It can not be made less by removing all of its terms for it is impossible to remove all of its terms.

Anyway, the world owes the impoverished Zeno, a deep debt of gratitude, even though it may never find out what he really thought. It's a little too late to start an objective investigation now.

Looking Inside

the axiom that the whole is greater than any of its parts. In this case the parts were the succession of separate moments constituting the line of flight. This implied a line being a discontinuity. If separate moments exist, then time is discontinuous. It's possible that the instructor to Socrates was not only broaching the idea that the whole is greater than any of its parts. It should follow that the infinite also is indestructible. It can not be made less by removing all of its terms for it is impossible to remove all of its terms.

The Greeks did not include motion itself in their mathematical concepts, preferring to deal with a locus that generated moving separata moments exist, then time is discontinuous. It's possible that the whole is always greater than any of its parts has to be discarded, for with infinites, any part is as great as the whole, though never greater. It should follow that the infinite also is indestructible. It can not be made less by removing all of its terms for it is impossible to remove all of its terms.

Anyway, the world owes the impoverished Zeno, a deep debt of gratitude, even though it may never find out what he really thought. It's a little too late to start an objective investigation now.

Hillobe Seeks More County Health Depts.

ALBANY, Nov. 24—State Health Commissioner Herman E. Hilleboe is campaigning for the establishment of additional full-time health departments in New York State at the county level.

A survey of county health departments in the state shows that more than 180,000 population have created county departments, Dr. Hilleboe said. The campaign is not complete. Seven counties with populations of 180,000-plus populations still have not modernized their public health services, he said.

There are now 28 county health departments in the state. The average size of the state has been up since 1944 when state aid for such units was increased to 15 percent of the first $160,000 and 50 percent of spending in excess of that figure.

The reason for urging county departments, Dr. Hilleboe said, is that a single board of health distributed county boards and health units have high quality to public health services.
