ROCKefeller Pay Bill WINS LEGISLATURE'S OK

Effective Date Delayed Until May 1 Payroll

By PAUL KYER

ALBANY, March 20—A strong stand by Governor Rockefeller in behalf of the Administration bill to increase State salaries, saved the measure in the Legislature last week.

At Leader press time, it was learned that the salary bill was on the floor of the Legislature. Its passage was assured when legislative leaders publicly announced their support of the measure and final approval will be given this week.

The bill was in danger of being shelved as legislation, reflecting the concern in some areas in the State over unemployment, the desire for more State aid locally and elsewhere, and the need to raise money for those items by cutting Governor Rockefeller's proposals.

This Governor, carrying out his promise to act toward placing the State's workers on a par with their counterparts in private industry, resisted any pressures, however, to reduce his original recommendations.

In effect, the Legislature did take a bite out of the recommended amounts for salary increases — $37,500,000 — by making the effective date of the new pay scales May 1 instead of April 1. The estimated $2,500,000 saved by the later effective date will, according to rumors here, be used to increase State aid to education.

“Mixed Emotions”, say Felly

The Civil Service Employees Association, which fought long and hard in the State to preserve the Governor's pay bill intact, viewed final passage of the bill with mixed emotions.

In a press statement, Joseph P. Polito, Employees Association president, said:

“The victory in the case went to Harry W. Albright Jr., who represented Alfred H. Weissbard, one of the candidates taking the promotion test.

The Civil Service Department reports it will re-examine the 168 candidates who failed the initial qualifying oral examination. The new oral results are expected to be held within six to eight weeks.

Public relations is simply the mechanical technique you use to tell the story, and the department you do. By the same token, the industrial executive has public relations — good or bad.

If a business has a good product, gives the public what they want, and sets itself in the best interests of the public, then advertising will take care of that story. It can also be publicity.

But whether a public relations or advertising service must be seriously good, always in the public interest be beneficial, or advertising service.

feeling of relief to learn that the plan, although amended, will not be severely altered.
The Association commends the legislative leaders for keeping faith with the many thousands of civil servants in the classified service.
After the many publicized statements by the State's leaders as to the need of putting State salaries on a par with industry, any deviation from that plan would have had a disastrous effect upon employee morale — particularly after the public endorsement of the findings of the private management firm of McKinsey & Associates.
For the past several weeks, the representatives of the Association have been in constant communication with both the Director of the Budget and also the legislative leaders in an attempt to have the recommended salary plan approved.
We are grateful that our efforts to some degree seem to be rewarded.
The Legislature is expected to adjourn this coming Saturday, and the final impact of this pay bill will have to come by legislation to effect any change desired.

C.S.C. Study on Career Development Is Planned

Civil Service Commission chairman John Macy obtained a pilot study of career development to be conducted by the Commission last week in an address to the training officers' conference.

This study, still in the planning stage, would focus on such problems as the retention of employees of high potential. "We have no pool of superstars," said Mr. Macy. "Of able new employees who have been assigned to mediocre supervisors and who leave Government because their skills are not fully utilized. We need to know the extent to which such cases occur and what needs to be done to make better use of our talented recruits."

Other areas which could be covered by this study are the need for interagency experience; the need to fill more mid-career Classification Act jobs with people outside of the government, and the need for more integrated management training.

Monroney Knocks Pay Ceiling for U. S. Aides

Senator Mike Monroney criticized the unofficial salary ceiling which prevents Federal employees wages from rising above the pay level of members of Congress. Monroney said that this ceiling prevents the Federal government from competing with private industry for top employees.

Monroney also said that because of title the government has had to rely on private contractors and non-profit organizations for scientific research. Such salary ceiling was said to have a demoralizing effect on Federal employees. These remarks were made during the Senate Armed Services Committee's confirmation of John Macy as head of the Civil Service Commission.

Kennedy Delays Plan to Raise Pay of Top Aides

A plan to make the pay of Cabinet members and other career executives which was proposed by the Budget Bureau, the Civil Service Commission and Congress's joint committee on control division, was passed over by the Senate.

The plan, followed that recommended by McNamara to the White House was to raise Cabinet members to $16,000, undersecretaries to $12,500 and assistant secretaries and commission members to $9,500.

The awards were made by Col. Perry H. Lanning, finance and accounting officer of the First U. S. Army.

Day to Keep Production Measurement System

Although the postal unions would like to see the Post Office Department's work measurement system eliminated, except in the case of a specific post office failing below production norms, Postmaster Day plans to keep a modified system in effect.

Day has said that his work measurement system will be "more attractive" than that proposed in early January by the Eisenhower administration. That proposal would have had the production of postal clerks measured during one week, every four week period each year.

Postmaster Day has said that he cannot afford higher production goals in the union. The National Postal has criticized the delay in modifying the work measurement system.

The Governor Has Kept His Promise

When Governor Rockefeller first took office he made a pledge to the State's civil servants that he would work toward placing them on a par with their counterparts in private employment. To that end, the Governor engaged a private management survey firm, McKinsey & Co., to make a comparative study of the State's civil service against the private sector. He declared he would be guided by them in fulfilling his promise.

With his salary proposals of this year, Mr. Rockefeller followed the suggested proposals of the McKinsey survey and did take the first step toward putting them into practice. This was to remove his stamp of approval to the Rockefeller pay plan for 1961. Furthermore, the Governor has indicated he will finish his program of civil service reform.

We believe him. Because Governor Rockefeller has shown the civil servant is a man who keeps a promise.

Police Grievance Plan

We, along with the New York City Patrolmen Benevolent Association, hail Mayor Wagner and Police Commissioner Leonard F. Fisk for getting a police grievance plan ratified by the State Legislature.

The Legislature's proposed revision to the Condon-Wadsworth law would mandate grievance systems for all State, county, and municipal employees—specifically including the police—with impartial arbitration boards. We regret the exclusion from it of a truly impartial arbitration board. We also regret there is no appeal beyond the agency.

We urge Mayor Wagner and the Police Commissioner to include these two provisions in their own police grievance system and get their approval for it before the Legislature forces it on them—and takes credit for it.

We are through, Mr. Rockefeller, for the sake of police efficiency, with any bit of so-called "half-way measure," the Condon-Wadsworth revision will fail to clear the Legislature or be amended to exclude these two important provisions. If it happens, the Mayor's and Police Commissioner's present plan will fail to do its job. It is half-way measure...

Fire Department Chest X-Ray Over; TB Cases Found

New York City Fire Commissioner Edward F. Cavagnale, Jr., announced last week that 11,114 civil servants of the Fire Department have been chest X-rayed during the past year because it was found in the spring of 1960 that a number of Department members had tuberculosis.

Fire Commissioner Cavagnale said that after "discussing the situation with Dr. Cramble Baldwin, head of our medical division, and with Health Department officials, we decided to use four mobile X-ray units to X-ray the entire Department."

"As a result of this program," two battalion chiefs, four lieutenant and 15 firemen were placed on leave due to disability. Four firemen and one civilian employee were declared unfit for duty because of active TB.

"We found healed or inactive TB in one deputy chief, four battalion chiefs, five lieutenants, one lieutenant, 18 firemen and 17 civilians."

Jan. 1 Pay Hikes To Be Delayed Until July 1

According to the office of New York City Comptroller Lawrence E. Garage, city employees awarded pay raises effective Jan. 1 will not begin receiving the increase until July 1.

This includes employees raised through collective bargaining and through Career and Salary upgradings.

The Comptroller's office explained that all its time now is being taken up by preparation of the 1961-62 city budget, and therefore the budgetary authorizations for the pay hikes will have to wait.

Questions Answered On Social Security

Does my disability benefit start this month or next month? When will I begin to receive it?

Disability benefits become payable on the 12th day of the month in which I become entitled to benefits. The law sets a six-month waiting period for disability payments to begin.

I have my own business. Am I eligible for social security disability benefits?

Yes. Benefits are available to self-employed persons who qualify. For more information, visit SSA's website or contact your local SSA office.

Disability benefits are available for children who are under 18 years of age or are ages 18 to 22 and are still in full-time education. The wage base for children is $15,000 per year.

Are there any time limits on receiving benefits?

Social security disability benefits are generally paid for life as long as you remain disabled. If you are no longer disabled, you must pay back all the money you received in benefits.

I believe my benefits have been reduced. What can I do?

Contact your local Social Security Administration office to discuss your case. You may be eligible to appeal the decision and receive additional benefits.

I want to work again. Can I receive social security disability benefits while I am working?

Yes, but your earnings may affect your benefit amount. Contact your local SSA office for more information.

I am married. How will my spouse's earnings affect my disability benefits?
