CSEA Goes To Bat For Discharged Aide; Wins Back Job and Lost Pay

(From Leader Correspondent)

JERICHO, July 31 — A school bus driver in the Jericho School District — who had been discharged improperly — was reinstated this week after the Nassau Chapter of the Civil Service Employees Association conducted a campaign for his reinstatement.

Bogus Jakubowski, 36, of Glen Cove, was fired on May 1 by the school board of the Jericho School District without a hearing. He was also told he had no right to such a hearing. Mr. Jakubowski was hired as a substitute bus driver, but had taken the state test for custodian-driver on Nov. 21, 1959.

The list was established Feb. 21, 1960 but Jakubowski was never appointed.

Mr. Jakubowski then appealed to the Nassau County Civil Service, which asked Attorney Harold L. Herriman to study the case. Mr. Herriman discussed the matter with Jericho School Board Attorney, Mr. Moms and later filed a court action which would have required the board to reinstate Mr. Jakubowski.

Mr. Herriman, an expert in civil service law and a former city councilman, took the position that the school board was in error in its first instance by failing to apprise Mr. Jakubowski as a permanent employee. The law provides, Mr. Herriman said, that the End of 1,500 new members.

Mr. Jakubowski also discussed the need of training to organize the drive and a good committee to conduct it. He told the group the state organization will support the drive with mail solicitations, literature and other assistance.

"And," he told the group, "if the drive increases membership, it will be the employees of the city of Jericho who will benefit." Mr. Jakubowski also discussed the success of similar campaigns in other cities and counties, the rising membership in CSEA throughout the state — and the gains public employees have made through the efforts of the CSEA. He urged the Jericho group to use those same methods to gain a foothold for membership.

Additional membership, he said, will help CSEA meet the need of training to organize the drive and a good committee to conduct it. He told the group the state organization will support the drive with mail solicitations, literature and other assistance.

Your Public Relations IQ

By LEO J. MARGOLIN

(Mrs. Margolin is Assistant Professor of Public Relations in the New York University School of Public Administration and is a vice-president of the public relations firm of Marshall & Company, Inc.)

All civil service employees in New York City are closely the political dynamo in New York City for some interesting political reasons. We can almost guarantee there will be an object lesson a few years from now when and if the final vote is counted November 7th.

Most important object lesson: the voting power of the civil service employee and his family, as well as his friends.

Watch closely for appeals to civil service by all candidates. See how public employees are recruited, entered and even begged for their votes.

There will be good reason for the attention paid to civil service employees. The fact of life is simply: that the civil servants of the city and of the State of New York and their families make up the largest single occupational voting group in the city.

The power you have in the flick of a finger which moves down a voting lever or in the hand that marks the X is incalculable. It can blow into and out of office almost any candidate in the city or state. In New York State the civil service voting group probably totals 3,600,000. In the city, the figures are 1,600,000 to 1,700,000. These are a lot of votes.

The public relations appeals will be many. Some will come from the "book": still others will come from left, right, and center; a few will come from thin air.

May we caution civil servants to use their votes wisely and to evaluate these appeals—or promises. Remember the power you hold in your finger. Make it work in behalf of the best possible public relations for yourselves and your fellow civil service employees.

Urges Consideration of Bill on Sick Leave Collected by Retirees

Editor, The Leader: I wonder how many people don’t see that on accumulative sick leave on retirement has not been considered more extensively. The advantage of the accumulative system is that a person who is seriously ill and has had several days of sickness in the morning is not in a state of ill health to whom days of sick leave are necessary, it may be seen as a way to cut down on the number of those who are sick leave accumulated or even working, much when they considered that there is a great need of those who are 50 years and over.

City Opens Affiliation Between Mt. Sinai & Greenpoint Hospitals

Mayor Robert P. Wagner has announced that the Greenpoint Hospital in Brooklyn will become affiliated with Mt. Sinai Hospital in Manhattan, to provide a permanent medical staff, interns and residents, physicians, who will divide their training between the two institutions.

Greenpoint Hospital is the smallest hospital which has been most affected by the national shortage of interns and residents. At present there are no interns or residents on the pediatrics or medical services. As a result the hospital has been operating at about 40 percent of its maximum capacity.

Recently Mayor Wagner authorized the use of funds necessary for hospital Commissioner Dr. Ray Trumpfield to staff the hospital with salaried physicians. No new funds are required for the affiliation. Greenpoint is the smallest hospital which a salaried staff has been authorized at a cost of approximately one-half million dollars.

The Mayor expressed his appreciation to Mt. Sinai Hospital officials and staff for their community minded attitude and willingness to undertake a long term responsibility in Greenpoint Hospital. "Mt. Sinai is a large voluntary hospital with a strong teaching and research program and a very large visiting and resident and intern staff," the Mayor said. The institution is affiliated with Columbia University and also is helping the University in its recently announced program with Harlem Hospital.

Kenneth Garrett, Youth Board Club worker, winner of the Hundred Year Association annual award of $500 and its citation, can be called a "well-made youth." According to the award winner, who began life in Far Rockaway, "Saturdays were always pleasant, except when his mother moved to Harlem's East 110th St. Every day was a terrible struggle to keep from joining one of the local gangs and being in a gang, meant fighting, stealing, carousing—none of which appealed to young Garrett. His interest was in something else: "I used to work to keep him in school. Finishing James Penrose Cooper junior high school, he received a scholarship from Benjamin Franklin High School."

He is a graduate in a business shop, having completed a business course. This was not his first job—he has been to government work, obtaining a position as a typist in the United States Employment Service. He was a typist for two years and is now a volunteer for PAL and other youth agencies.

Garrett has been the manager of a beauty shop, working in a beauty shop, completing a business course. This was not his first job—"I used to do work in a shop, I had a job in a beauty shop." He was a typist for two years and is now a volunteer for PAL and other youth agencies.

He was assigned to the Hundred Year Association as a volunteer. He wanted employment in this field, but each application was rejected. He didn’t quit—"I wanted to be a volunteer and I kept working as a volunteer and that’s how I got the job." Finally, he landed the job he wanted, a Youth Board Club worker with the Youth Board. Garrett’s career with the Youth Board has continued, and he has become a "well-made youth." And being in a gang, meant fighting, stealing, carousing—none of which appealed to young Garrett. His interest was in something else: "I used to work to keep him in school. Finishing James Penrose Cooper junior high school, he received a scholarship from Benjamin Franklin High School."

He is a graduate in a business shop, having completed a business course. This was not his first job—"I used to do work in a shop, I had a job in a beauty shop." He was a typist for two years and is now a volunteer for PAL and other youth agencies.

When he was assigned to the Hundred Year Association as a volunteer, he made a reputation with the gang to which he was attached. Talking about the work, he said, "I believe in finding jobs for these boys. Out of that contract, there are in the Youth Office... others are members and useful members of the community. I want to be out here doing something of this type of work, and that type of people become involved in serious troubles." Garrett smiled. "It’s not the same as the other work I’ve done."

When the Hundred Year Association, which is composed of the thousands of members of the Greater New York, sent out questionnaires to city department heads for candidates the board, Garrett’s supervisor sent in the application of the young man’s work.

He came out of the very area the Youth Board serves and said he was a "pioneer in the field of homes bent on the problems that harrass thousands of young people who belong to gangs."

But Garrett didn’t follow the easiest road—he was determined to "do something more for the youth who are members of the Hundred Year Association. But Garrett didn’t follow the easiest road—he was determined to "do something more for the youth who are members of the Hundred Year Association."

How will the 53-year-old young man has succeeded is told in the winning of the Hundred Year Foundation of this week’s Hundred Year Association.

Oneida County Weighs Health Plan for Aides

UTICA, July 31—Oneida County may adopt the CSEA-sponsored state health insurance plan soon.

Harold V. Kirch, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, said last week that legislation clearing the way for adoption of the plan probably would be introduced within the next few months.

Kirch said that funds to finance the county's share of the program probably would be included in the 1965 budget.

He made the statement shortly before Thomas E. McCracken, senior health insurance representative for the State Civil Service Department, explained provisions of the plan at a meeting of supervisors last Wednesday.

CSEA Urges Adoption

President M. Casey, supervisor of field representatives for CSEA, who also attended the meeting, urged the board to approve the plan.

McCracken said it would cost the county about $88,000 a year to cover its 1,000-old employees.

Kirch said: "I'm in favor of it. They county employees have got that much coming to them.'

Nassau CSEA Serves Up Reminders of Action to Promote Member Drive

(FROM LEADER CORRESPONDENT)

MINORULA, July 31—Irv Fluemenbaum, president of the Nassau Chapter, Civil Service Employees Association, is a man who never lets a solid Fluemenbaum is currently taxing full advantage of good-will being built up for the Nassau CSEA by the pay raise which 11,500 county and town workers have been receiving during the first three weeks of July.

Fluemenbaum has distributed some 8,000 circulars among Nassau's public employees which, on one side carry the slogan "Let's Look At the Record," while the other side contains a handy membership application.

In response to a question from supervisors, McCracken said that 15 county governments throughout the state had approved the program so far.

He also said about 130,000 em- ployes of the state and its sub-division were enrolled.

Mr. Flaumenbaum observed this theme of the promotion circular. After spelling out the past accomplishments of the chapter, the Nassau circular lists its current program for county and town employees. The points include 1) official grievance machinery, 2) pay raise of 2 to 3 per cent for each employee, 3) five years of service, 4) unemployment insurance coverage.
