Newburgh Unit OKs five-year pact

NEWBURGH – After four years of arduous negotiations, members of the Town of Newburgh Unit have unanimously approved a five-year contract that will bring them to parity with nearby municipalities of a similar size.

Members voted Jan. 31 to approve a report issued by an impartial fact finder appointed through the Public Employees Relations Board after negotiations with town officials came to a halt late last year. The contract, retroactive to Dec. 31, 2003, and running through Dec. 31, 2008, includes wage increases in each year of the contract, longevity increases, a stipend for workers holding Class A CDL licenses, and the implementation of a vacation buy-back program. One notable inclusion in the fact-finder’s report is the reduction of the percentage of health insurance premiums members will pay.

The fact-finder’s report does not resolve the town proposal to reduce the two-person crew in sander trucks during snowstorms to one-person crews, recommending instead that the issue be resolved by a committee to be formed to study the issue. — Jessica Ladlee

Lefkowitz eyed for PERB

ALBANY — CSEA is praising Gov. Eliot Spitzer for recently nominating CSEA Deputy Counsel Jerome Lefkowitz as chair of the state Public Employment Relations Board.

“Jerry Lefkowitz is the expert on New York’s Taylor Law,” said CSEA President Danny Donohue. “We can literally think of no better choice for the job.”

As an attorney in the state Labor Department under Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, Lefkowitz helped craft the Public Employees’ Fair Employment Act, also known as the Taylor Law, which was enacted in 1967.

The law granted employees the right to organize and bargain collectively with their employers while prohibiting strikes. PERB was created as an independent, neutral agency to administer the Taylor Law.

After the law’s enactment, Lefkowitz served as PERB’s executive director for many years before joining CSEA in 1987. “Jerry’s experience, integrity and high ethical standards are unparalleled,” Donohue said. “He is respected by labor and management alike, and he will bring credibility to the process of labor relations and raise the bar for fairness here in New York.”

Medina worker killed on the job

MEDINA — CSEA members in the Western Region are mourning the death of activist Michael J. Russo, 47, who died Jan. 31, after falling out of a bucket lift while trimming a tree.

Russo had been working with a crew from CSEAs Medina Department of Public Works Unit when the bucket lift apparently hit part of the tree. The impact caused the bucket to tip and Russo fell 25 feet to the ground. He had worked for the village for 23 years and been the unit’s vice president for many years.

CSEA and PESH are investigating the accident. An inspection of the truck and its controls and safety devices is also planned.
ALBANY — CSEA's overall assessment of Gov. Eliot Spitzer’s proposed state budget is positive and a step in the right direction to address New York's needs.

"Gov. Eliot Spitzer has delivered an ambitious and challenging agenda in his budget proposal. There is much to admire in his objectives and energy," said CSEA President Danny Donohue.

Initial budget analysis shows Spitzer has recognizes the importance of strengthening state operations, a move that could help reverse the erosion of resources and morale in state government.

The proposal also recognizes that cash-strapped local governments need help in shoring up their finances to meet the needs of their communities.

CSEA is opposing the governor’s proposals on the state’s health care system, especially their impact on public health care. CSEA is committed to a public health care system that meets the needs of real people in the communities where they live. "We will not back away from that commitment and will work to ensure that principle is reflected in the budget," Donohue said.

Spitzer proposes spending $120.6 billion, a 6.3% increase over last year.

General impact on CSEA
At this time that the budget proposal will have a positive impact on state, county, local government and school district employees. Affects on public health care are yet to be determined.

There is an increase of approximately 2,500 positions at the state level. Specific funding streams for local governments are still under review however there are no severe cutbacks and there is increased aid for fiscally distressed municipalities. There is also a multi-year overall increase in school aid.

Taxes/Revenue
The Governor has proposed several measures that will close loopholes that allow corporations and the very wealthy to avoid paying their fair share of taxes in New York State Tax deduction for private school tuition
• The Governor has proposed a $1,000 per child tax deduction for private and parochial school tuition for grades K-12
• STAR - $1.5 billion in state funds for STAR enhancements and property tax relief. Details will follow
• Expands bottle bill law ($25 million in state revenue this year and $100 million annually thereafter)

Health Care
Impact on State Employees
• 90 new positions for State Department of Health and 157 new positions for Office of Medicaid Inspector General
• Creates a new Office of Health Insurance Programs in DOH to consolidate oversight and administration of Medicaid, EPIC, Child Health Plus and Family Health Plus
• $78 million in support for Roswell Park Medicaid
• $1.2 billion in Medicaid cuts and $485 million in HCRA and other cuts.
• Authorizes conversion of not-for-profit health insurers (including GHI) to private entities and dedicates 95% of proceeds to HCRA

Hospitals
CSEA is reviewing the proposed hospitals cuts and more information on how these cuts affect specific CSEA represented hospitals will be available soon.
• Freezes inflationary trend factor funding stream for hospitals and nursing homes
• Revises Graduate Medical Assistance (GME) for teaching hospitals which results in a funding cut

Nursing Homes
The funding cuts are still under review.
• CSEA's nursing home grants & rebasing - continues the rebasing and state grant programs which will provide $15 million in the current fiscal year, $35 million next year and $100 million each year thereafter. This is the funding CSEA won in last year’s budget.
• Freezes inflationary trend factor
• Work force recruitment and retention phased out over 3 years
• Makes permanent 6% assessment on nursing home revenues

State Legislature chose the right comptroller for the right reasons

There’s been a near-hysterical response in the media in recent weeks over the selection of the new state comptroller. It has been shocking and out of whack with reality.

As far as CSEA is concerned, state lawmakers made the right choice for all the right reasons.

There is no position of responsibility in New York state government more important to CSEA members than state comptroller. As the sole trustee of the public employee retirement system, the comptroller must be an individual who will make the right decisions to protect those funds and maintain the stability of the system in both the short and long term.

The selection of Tom DiNapoli as comptroller is strong on its merits.

We have enormous confidence in Tom DiNapoli’s integrity and abilities. He is an individual of excellent character and qualification. CSEA has worked with him on many state and local issues over a long and distinguished career. We know that his abilities and honesty will serve him well as state comptroller and they will quickly become apparent to all as he works on behalf of the people of New York.

In exercising their legitimate constitutional right to fill the vacancy, the state Legislature has demonstrated courage, independence and foresight to make an outstanding choice. Our democracy is better when there is healthy debate and a separation of powers.

The system did work — CSEA active and retired members and their families can rest easy knowing Tom DiNapoli is the guardian of the retirement system.
Putnam health care workers earn national distinction

CARMEL — CSEA-represented workers at the Putnam County Department of Health’s Certified Home Health Care Agency have been recognized in a national survey ranking it among the top home health care agencies in the country.

The county agency is part of the 2006 HomeCare Elite, a compilation of the most successful home care providers in the country issued by DecisionHealth, a publisher of home health care-related media, and OCS Inc., a clearinghouse of health care statistics.

“Being such a tiny agency, it is such an honor to be included,” said Putnam County Local President Jane Meunier-Gorman, who works as an intermediate clerk/intake coordinator in the department. “It’s due to our caring staff that we are on the HomeCare Elite list.”

Commitment to excellence

The excellent outcomes of care experienced at Putnam County’s agency are due not just to the excellent care, but also to workers’ dedication to improving their skills. Direct care workers attend monthly training programs. The county also employs a quality improvement coordinator, CSEA member Maureen Iacono, to coordinate staff education programs.

“We try to keep everyone up to date because there are changes all the time,” said Thel Simon, a CSEA member who coordinates rehabilitative services training. Mary Piacente, the department’s account clerk/home health aide coordinator, is one of several CSEA members who provide clerical support to ensure the ever-growing mountain of paperwork common in the health care industry is complete.

“If we open up a new patient case, we have about 30 pages of information that needs to be completed,” she said.

Top-notch public health care

As a public body, the Putnam body ensures quality rehabilitative home care, regardless of income or ability to pay.

“We are mandated to provide care,” said Simon. “If somebody is uninsured and gets into a terrible accident, we provide services regardless of ability to pay.”

Agency workers also help low-income residents by collecting used rehabilitation devices such as canes, walkers and wheelchairs that may be given free to uninsured patients.

While most rehabilitative services are given to the county’s elderly population, the agency also employs two maternal child health nurses who make home visits to new mothers and babies. Those public services also factored into the agency’s place on the HomeCare Elite list.

“The county offers services that don’t cost a thing,” said Anka Roberto, a maternal child health nurse at the agency. “We’re able to get out there and educate the public, which is unique to the public sector.”

“We’re able to get out there and educate the public, which is unique to the public sector.”

Any cuts in Medicaid would affect our consumers, and the middle class workers who keep these programs running. We have over 300 patients in our young adult day program for patients with mental illnesses who depend on us.”

—— Ardis Alaqarbeh, head nurse, Rockland County Department of Health Young Adult Center, on Gov. Eliot Spitzer’s proposed budget.
Nine out of 10 people polled (in a recent Zogby poll) believe that rehabilitation and treatment for incarcerated youths can help prevent future crime.

Zogby poll: public supports rehab, not prison, for youths

A new poll by Zogby International, and commissioned by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency (NCCD) — the oldest criminal justice research organization in the U.S. — shows the public strongly supports rehabilitation and treatment, not prosecution in the adult court or incarceration in adult jails or prisons. Major findings from the survey of likely voters included:

• Nine out of 10 people polled believe that rehabilitation and treatment for incarcerated youths can help prevent future crime, and eight out of 10 thought spending money on rehabilitative services and treatment for youths will save money in the long run.
• Seven out of 10 of those polled said putting young people (under age 18) in an adult correctional facility will make them more likely to commit future crimes. More than two-thirds (68 percent) disagreed that incarcerating youths in adult facilities “teaches them a lesson and deters them from committing future crimes.”

Concerns remain at OCFS

BRONX — Sandra Bryson vividly remembers the 16-year-old client she received one day at the state Office of Children and Family Services' Pyramid Reception Center.

“He behaved like a 5-year-old,” said Bryson, a youth development aide at the South Bronx facility for the past 18 years. “I spent a lot of time with him.”

As the first point of contact at the main reception site for the agency, Bryson readily admits she can hardly afford to spend too much time on any one client.

Nearly every day a new group of preteen and teenage boys, who need to be tested and prepared for other residential programs throughout the state, arrive at the 14-day reception program at Pyramid.

“The majority of the youths we get now have a lot of mental health issues,” said Bryson. “Back then, we didn’t have as much.”

While there may be more troubled youths entering facilities than in the past, public opinion supports treatment rather than incarceration.

CSEA is working to set up a meeting between President Danny Donahue and acting OCFS Commissioner Gladys Carrion to discuss CSEA’s concerns about the agency, its policies and other issues related to CSEA members’ abilities to do their jobs in what has been a troubled agency.

Courtney Victor, a youth development aide who is also responsible for transporting clients to appointments and sites across the state, fears the clients he encounters are often not getting the kind of care and evaluation they merit.

“We’re the most critical phase,” said Victor about Pyramid, since the tests and evaluations performed there will determine the placement of clients. Emphasis on individual clients, and improved communication and input between staff and supervisors, Victor insisted, would go a long way toward better serving the clients.

At Pyramid, there are usually two youth development aides working with a group of 12 to 16 clients with wide-ranging mental and behavioral patterns. Lacking staff and additional training in dealing with more serious mental and developmental issues will often make ordinary tasks more difficult.

“I can only attempt to make them as comfortable as possible and help them get through the process,” said Bryson. “With a lot of the mental health issues, not every client gets it.”

Bryson and Victor also agreed existing protocols to deal with aggressive and unruly clients have to be re-evaluated.

“Every situation is unique and may require different methods,” said Bryson, who was physically attacked by a client several years ago and has grown accustomed to receiving verbal threats. “We have to remember that some of these youths have mental health issues and we have to use different techniques to reach them.”

Despite these concerns, Bryson enjoys her job and takes great pains to make herself available and receptive to clients during their brief stay.

“This job is not for everybody,” said Bryson. “You need to have patience and be able to communicate.”

OCA negotiation team set for talks

ALBANY — CSEA's Office of Court Administration negotiating team is ready to begin contract talks with the state in late March. The team recently met in Albany, poring over the entire OCA contract and comparing files and notes. Sets of proposals have been drafted. The team, at left, are New York City State Employees Local President Vinnie Martucciello, team chair; Capital Region Judiciary Local and Court of Claims Statewide President Nicole Ventresca-Cohen; Long Island Region Judiciary Local President Kevin Ray; Southern Region Judiciary Local President Bob Lorenz, team vice-chair; and Central Region Judiciary Local Vice President Donald Lynahey. Western Region Judiciary Local President Nancy Hart is in front.

No word yet on start of state contract negotiations

CSEA's state contract negotiating team remains prepared to begin contract talks for a successor agreement to contracts that expire April 1 of this year. At press time, there was still no word on who Gov. Eliot Spitzer will appoint to head the Governor's Office of Employee Relations and conduct negotiations. If a new contract is not reached by the time the current contract expires, all terms and conditions of the current contract remain in effect until a successor agreement is reached. Such items as pay (including increments), health insurance, leave accruals, etc, continue at the same levels. There is one exception: if the expired provision contains a "sunset" or specific end date, then that benefit ends on that date.

CSEA will communicate news about the status of talks through every means possible. There will be regular updates on our website (www.csealocal1000.org) and your local leaders will be regularly kept up to date by members of the team and through other means. Much information about negotiations is already posted on the website.

Depression does not discriminate.

Depression is a serious illness that affects individuals of all ages, races, status and abilities. It's a lot more than just feeling blue and it does not go away by itself.

While depression is treatable, most people suffering from depression do not seek the help they need.

Westchester County Unit declares impasse

WHITE PLAINS — The Westchester County Unit recently declared impasse in its contract negotiations with county officials. Reasons for the contract stalemate include issues related to health insurance and salary increases. CSEA represents about 4,000 county employees.

"It's good to hear that OMRDD will receive another 237 positions statewide. Quality care is our first concern and this will help us continue to provide quality care to the consumers who depend on us every day."

— Rick Ortel, development aide/job coach and 24-year member of the Western New York DDSO Local, on Gov. Eliot Spitzer's proposed budget.
HIGHLAND — Many CSEA members spend their entire careers serving other New Yorkers, but an increasing number of members are also serving their country via long-term overseas military deployments.

Richard Call is one of those CSEA members who serve both his state and his country.

An almost 20-year U.S. Navy Reserve member, Call has spent his civilian career working at the New York State Bridge Authority, which oversees toll bridges spanning the Hudson River.

Call, a senior toll collector employed with the authority since 1998, supervises other collectors on the Franklin D. Roosevelt Mid-Hudson Bridge that spans Ulster and Dutchess counties.

In his other life, as a military policeman with the Navy Seabees, Call’s military deployments have taken him as nearby as New York City and as far away as the Middle East and Indonesia.

Soon, he will be back on military duty in the Middle East.

“This will be my third tour,” said Call, who last served in Iraq in 2004 and also spent time in Kuwait during Operation Desert Storm.

A busy second career

While the minimum time requirements consist of one weekend per month and two weeks of annual training, deployments for reservists are common.

One trip to East Timor occurred during a period of conflict there where it was difficult for military forces to gain entry, but upon arrival, troops received more of a welcome.

“A lot of the people welcomed us,” said Call. “Many of them wanted to learn English.”

In Iraq, despite the busy days, there are occasional chances to be out in public.

Call to Duty
Some of Richard Call’s missions

• TWA Flight 800 crash recovery support, Long Island

• Sept. 11 Homeland Security efforts, New York City

• Tsunami aid and recovery, Indonesia

• Medical team security, East Timor

• Operation Enduring Freedom, Iraq

“We are allowed to go out once we go go a course teaching about their culture,” he said.

Regular deployments of military reservists are becoming more common at CSEA work sites. The deployments are tough for the reservists themselves, but they can also be a burden on the families back home.

“It is an inconvenience,” said Call. “My wife has to run the house by herself and make sure our kids are taken care of.”

As for himself, in Iraq, Call said he, “works 12-hour days, every day, with no time off. Working 12-hour days makes the deployment feel even longer.”

Call’s job with the bridge authority will be filled by co-workers during his absence.

“Rich’s job will be filled by part-timers during his deployment,” said Bridge Authority Local President Frank Gentilcore, who said co-workers and bridge authority management support Call.

“A number of our CSEA brothers and sisters also serve in the military, so it is important that we show our support for them both on the job and during deployments.”

CSEA fights, wins $9,000 for member

GREENWICH — Imagine being on the hook for $9,000 and not even knowing it.
That’s exactly what happened to Greenwich School District Unit member Sandy Colby after her insurance company denied a claim for her husband’s emergency medevac flight.
Thanks to CSEA, Colby, a bus driver for the district, now doesn’t need to worry about the bill.
In August 2005, Colby’s husband fell through basement stairs and was rushed to Albany Medical Center from their Greenwich home.
A few weeks later, the Colbys began getting bills from the med-fiight company. Colby’s health insurer, Empire Blue Cross, denied the claim stating the flight was not medically necessary.
Empire also claimed Colby did not notify the company of the incident.
Colby’s husband was treated and released that night, so she did not call.
Her insurance card states she must notify the insurer within 48 hours after being admitted to the hospital.
Still, the bills were coming quickly, along with threats to take the matter to collections.
The Colbys worried about their credit rating and also feared the company would garnish wages.
At one point, the company offered her a payment plan of $200 per month. “There is no way we would have been able to pay that,” she said.
After trying to resolve the matter on her own for six months and exhausting two appeals, Colby turned to a co-worker, who put her in touch with CSEA’s Health Benefits Department.
CSEA went to work on the issue and immediately ended the threatening letters that were piling up, a welcome reprieve for Colby.

Sandy Colby on the job as a bus driver for the Greenwich Central School District.

After going to Empire Blue Cross and again being denied, CSEA Health Benefits Specialist Margaret Gannon suggested taking matters to the school district.
“I knew it was either that or go to the legislature,” said Gannon.
At CSEA’s urging, school officials intervened and Empire Blue Cross relented. The Colbys got the good news just before Christmas.
“Because of CSEA’s help, Sandy and her husband were able to put their minds as ease this Christmas,” Greenwich Central School District Unit and Washington County Local President Brenda Facio said. “Sandy has been battling this company for over a year and I am so thrilled that CSEA was able to assist her.”
“They did a great job and weren’t going to let up until they got satisfaction,” Colby said. “Without the union and everyone fighting for us, we would still be paying for this.”

Spitzer education budget boosts funding

ALBANY — Gov. Eliot Spitzer’s proposed education budget gives needed funding boosts to public schools and the State University of New York, but CSEA is concerned about the governor’s plan to increase the state’s number of charter schools.
“We are pleased with Governor Spitzer’s commitment to strengthening aid to New York’s public schools and colleges,” CSEA President Danny Donohue said. “Our children need adequate resources and services to help them prepare for their futures.”

Spitzer is proposing a $1.4 billion overall increase in aid for school districts this year, and a $7 billion increase in school funding over three years. BOCES also gets a boost, with a proposed $37 million funding increase. The budget also proposes $99 million for universal pre-kindergarten programs.
The governor’s plan also adds 97 new positions to the state Education Department, and 200 new positions at SUNY.

Charter school plans
CSEA is concerned about the governor’s plan to increase the cap on charter schools across the state from 100 to 250 schools. The union has long been concerned about charter schools because the schools take away needed resources to public schools and many have been unsuccessful in improving academic success as opposed to public schools.

Stay updated on the latest state budget news by visiting CSEA’s website at www.csealocal1000.org.

For more on the state budget, see Page 3.

Spitzer budget by the numbers

SUNY:
• 200 new positions

School districts:
• 97 new positions in state Education Department
• $1.4 billion overall increase for school districts this year and $7 billion increase over three years
• $99 million for Universal pre-K

Charter schools:
• Increase cap on charter schools in state from 100 to 250
• Transition aid of $15.2 million to five districts

BOCES:
• $37 million aid increase

“Two hundred positions spread over all the SUNY schools doesn’t put a lot of positions at each school. If you compare these positions to how many we have lost over the years, we still have a long way to go. I’m not sure this will help with the shortfunding we’ve experienced, but it’s a good start.”

— Laurie Hildebrant, calculations clerk and member of the SUNY Brockport Local, on Gov. Eliot Spitzer’s proposed budget.

CSEA joins fight for more library funding

CSEA is joining forces with New York State United Teachers, AFSCME District Council 37 and the New York Library Association to support closing the funding gap for libraries caused by eight years of flat funding cutbacks. “CSEA supports closing the gap in funding for libraries and providing more reading aid directly to libraries so they can have the resources necessary to meet the growing needs of their communities,” said CSEA President Danny Donohue. CSEA members are encouraged to take page past in the New York Library Association Library Lobby Day March 13. Here, several CSEA members share their experiences and speak of the funding need.

Facts about New York’s libraries

- New Yorkers make 107 million visits to their public libraries each year — 10 times higher than attendance at professional sporting events.
- New Yorkers found answers to 27 million research questions, borrowed 313 million books and other items, and attended 3 million programs at their public library in 2005.
- Libraries serve 75 percent of New York’s households; 52 percent of New Yorkers have library cards.
- Libraries are a $1.6 billion industry in New York, generating another $3 billion in economic activity.
- New York state ranks 11th in the nation per capita ongoing state support for public library construction; behind states like Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.
- A 2006 Zogby Poll showed New Yorkers support increased funding for libraries: 63 percent support more state funding for libraries, and 85 percent support more state aid for public library construction.

The job of librarians has changed somewhat with the increasing role of the computer in libraries.

“The librarians have to learn a lot more and work a little harder with it. You have to make sure what the kids are watching. The librarians here don’t complain. We’re here for public service. We give top-notch public service.”

— Mary Misci, New Rochelle Public Library Unit President, senior typist in the library’s Community Relations Office.

Nogak Library System Senior Library Clerk Laura Krzemien, above, CSEA members at Nogak plan to travel to Albany March 13 to emphasize the importance of library funding to state legislators. Because of funding cuts, the Lockport/Nogak facility has been continually short-staffed and unable to offer member libraries as many services and programs as it once had. “We have suffered lots of losses due to no increases in funding,” Local President Diane Hunt said. “We used to have all sorts of supplies for children’s programs. We’ve also lost home delivery and adult and children’s services due to lack of staff. There has been a progressive loss.”

Library clerks Cheryl Perkins and Gabriel Pimentel scan old medical reference books at the SUNY Health and Science Center which will enable students at the school to access information and data from these books electronically. Perkins appears on The Work Force this month before a card catalog, a reference system being replaced by computers in many libraries.

Guiderland librarian one of top in nation

GUILDERLAND — Librarian Maria Buhl assumed a recent call from The New York Times was to offer her a deal on a subscription. She was taken aback upon learning she was getting a call only 24 other librarians in the nation would receive.

The Guiderland Public Library employee was recently named one of the top librarians in the nation.

“I thought they were trying to sell me a subscription,” joked Buhl, who was chosen from more than 1,300 nominees from 45 states. “I was totally flabbergasted.”

The New York Times award, given annually for the past six years, honors working librarians for their public service and positive impact on their community. Buhl was one of 25 to receive the honor.

Buhl traveled to New York in mid-December for the award ceremony where she also received a plaque and a $2,500 prize. “There were people there from all over the country,” Buhl said. “It was inspiring to see the work being done in various communities.”

Buhl’s efforts with the library’s English as a second language (ESL) program and her work as a health services librarian won her recognition.

Buhl became a certified health services librarian in 2001 and has taken special interest in helping patrons find accurate medical information.

“So much of the information out there, especially on the Web, is not accurate,” she said.

The library promoted the availability of such services and was promptly inundated by community members. “Clearly people were happy to know this is out there,” Buhl said.

As coordinator for the library’s ESL program, Buhl wrote many of successful grant applications and forged a collaboration between the library and the local literacy community.

Seventy-five volunteers have been recruited as literacy tutors who use the library’s meeting spaces and training materials. The program fills a niche in the community for many residents whose first languages were Asian.

“That’s what being a good library is about, getting a good read on the things the community is looking for,” Buhl said.

Safety and health grant trainings available

CSEA has secured a state Department of Labor Hazard Abatement Board training grant that provides all CSEA represented worksites with the opportunity to take advantage of free training programs. The programs are aimed at increasing members’ knowledge and understanding of potential safety and health hazards to help reduce or eliminate workplace injuries or illnesses.

“Through education and awareness, we can make a difference in the lives of all CSEA members and ensure that everyone has a safe and healthy place to work,” CSEA President Danny Donohue said. CSEA is offering the following programs to members:

Office Ergonomics
Train-the-Trainer
A 10-hour course designed towards reducing musculoskeletal disorders, such as carpal tunnel syndrome, associated with heavy computer use. Participants will learn to recognize the risk factors that lead to injury and to properly assess and set up a computer workstation. On the second half-day, participants will practice training and discuss training techniques.

Office Ergonomics
Direct
A seven-hour training course identical to the Train-the-Trainer

HAZWOPER
First-on-the-Scene Responder
An eight-hour training course that will help public employers in meeting the training requirements of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration’s HAZWOPER standard for first-on-the-scene workers. This training is for workers who may either discover, witness, or are likely to encounter an emergency situation involving hazardous materials.

Safe Refuse Collection
The purpose of this training is to protect sanitation workers from falls from moving vehicles, exposure to household hazardous waste and back injuries. This course will cover:
- safe riding on refuse collection vehicles training and the American National Standards Institute standard for Mobile Waste and Recyclable Materials Collection, Transportation, and Compaction Equipment Safety requirements;
- sanitation hazard communication training in the recognition of common household waste and worker protection;
- personal protective equipment in sanitation training using a job hazard analysis to determine proper selection of such equipment, and;
- ergonomic risk factors that lead to back injuries and prevention methods.

Work Zone Safety and Safe Flagging Training
The purpose of this training is to protect workers from being struck by oncoming traffic and by heavy equipment.

Work zone safety training will educate road workers on best practices of work zone layout, application of control devices, knowledge of the development and implementation of traffic control plans, ability to interpret traffic control plans, recognition of illumination and visibility considerations and identification and control of hazards in the work zone.

Safe flagging will cover: When flagging is necessary, the best practices for safe flagging procedures, understanding flagging procedures, understanding the use of required equipment and increased ability to safely coordinate traffic movement through the work zone.

OSHA 10-Hour General Industry
A 10-hour training program spanning two days that follows the specific guidelines of the OSHA outreach training program. The course will consist of seven hours of mandated training and three hours of industry specific training.

For more information or to schedule a training, call CSEA’s Occupational Safety and Health Department at 1-800-342-4146.

Monroe County workers injured in trench collapse

ROCHESTER — Two Monroe County workers were injured recently when the trench in which they were working collapsed, trapping the men in the dirt.

Chris Futka and Jim Guerra were in digging in the seven-foot deep trench with other co-workers. Jan 18 when the northern wall suddenly gave way. The dirt buried Guerra to his knees and Futka to about his armpits, according to a report by CSEA’s Occupational Safety and Health Department. Both men were taken by ambulance to Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester. Guerra was evaluated by doctors and released. Futka suffered a collapsed lung and other internal injuries. He was placed in a medically induced coma as his injuries began to heal. As The Work Force went to press, Futka remained hospitalized but is no longer in the hospital’s intensive care unit.

An investigation determined a trench box was not yet in place in ditch. PESH and CSEA continue to review the accident.

Helping their own in Madison County

WAMPsville — CSEA member Luke Rivenburgh, an engineering technician with the Madison County Highway Department, worked for the county less than six months before a December car accident left him with many serious injuries and the fear he may no longer be able to provide for his family.

His injuries — a shattered kneecap, a broken right femur, a cracked hip, a hand injury and a spleen injury — would take months to heal. As a newer employee, he almost immediately exhausted his accumulated leave time and wasn’t eligible for the county’s sick bank.

Rivenburgh feared his wife, a full-time nursing student, would have to drop out of school and return to work to support them and their two young daughters.

Luckily, his fears turned out to be unfounded when labor and management co-workers teamed up to come to his rescue.

CSEA Madison County White Collar Unit Secretary Betty Jo Johnson said the union took up a monetary collection to help Rivenburgh and his family during his recovery. Workers also held a 50/50 raffle, from which the winner donated his prize back to Rivenburgh.

CSEA also worked with county management to establish a special sick leave donation program that would allow Rivenburgh to remain out of work at full pay and continue his health care coverage.

Rivenburgh said his co-workers’ efforts to help mean a lot to him. He said he’s getting better, and that much of the strength he’s regained was bolstered by the outpouring of support.

“It’s been amazing that everybody helped out so much. I’m blessed by everybody’s help,” Rivenburgh said. “I would like to thank everyone for what they did. I just hope I can someday help someone else as much as they helped me.”

Federal, state laws protect workers with disabilities

Editor’s Note: This is the 10th article in a series of discrimination articles that have appeared in THE WORK Force, to provide valuable information regarding important areas of protection available through the CSEA Legal Assistance Program (LAP). The Legal Assistance Program covers employment and labor issues involving disciplines, contract grievances and arbitrations, court litigation and agency proceedings. Get more information about legal services in the LAP by calling CSEA Headquarters at 1-800-342-4146, extension 1443, or by visiting www.csea-local1000.org and clicking on the legal programs and services menu item.

Both federal and state law prohibit disability discrimination and require, in certain circumstances, that employers provide “reasonable accommodations” to disabled employees.

This article provides an overview of disability discrimination, as defined under the New York State Human Rights Law. The next WORK Force article will feature disability discrimination as defined under the federal Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).

The New York State Human Rights Law provides broad protections for disabled employees. State and federal law contain different definitions for who is considered “disabled.” The main issue in a disability discrimination case is whether the employee’s particular circumstances meet the definition of “disability” under the applicable law. The fact that an employee has some form of physical, mental or medical impairment does not guarantee that the employee is considered “disabled” under the law for employment law purposes.

Under New York law, the term “disability” is defined as: a) a physical, mental or medical impairment resulting from anatomical, physiological, genetic or neurological conditions which prevents the exercise of a normal bodily function or is demonstrable by medically accepted clinical or laboratory diagnostic techniques or b) a record of such an impairment or c) a condition regarded by others as such an impairment, provided, however, in all circumstances the term is limited to disabilities which, upon the provision of reasonable accommodations, do not prevent the complainant from performing in a reasonable manner the activities involved in the job or occupation sought or held.

Under state law, an employer can be disabled if the impairment can be proven by medically accepted techniques. Unlike the ADA, state law does not require that the impairment “substantially limit” the employee’s normal life activities. Our broader state law definition has led courts to find that some employees with conditions such as obesity and panic disorder with agoraphobia are “disabled” under the New York law.

State law defines “reasonable accommodation” as actions taken by the employer to permit a disabled employee “to perform in a reasonable manner the activities involved in the job or occupation” including but not limited to: a) providing an accessible worksite; b) obtaining or modifying equipment; c) providing support services for persons with impaired hearing or vision; d) job restructuring; e) altering a work schedule.

Under state law, a reasonable accommodation is not required if it would impose an “undue hardship” on the employer. To determine whether a particular accommodation would constitute an undue hardship, the courts consider: a) the cost of the accommodation; b) the size, number of employees and financial resources of the employer; c) the impact the accommodation will have on the employer’s operation including the impact the accommodation will have on the ability of other employees to perform their duties.

Due to the complexity of the law regarding disability discrimination and reasonable accommodation, it is extremely important that CSEA locals and units contact CSEA labor relations staff immediately when reasonable accommodation issues arise. Where necessary the Labor Department should be contacted as well.

35 years ago ...

In 1972, CSEA members secretly let a young local television reporter named Geraldo Rivera in a back door of the Willowbrook State School for the Mentally Retarded on Staten Island to document the appalling living conditions for the clients caused by understaffing and neglect by state officials.

The exposé caused a firestorm of public outcry and many lawsuits, and eventually led to a better system of care for developmentally disabled individuals across the state that is today a national model.

In Willowbrook’s aftermath, CSEA aggressively and successfully advocated for numerous reforms and resources for the developmental disabilities field. Beginning in the mid-1980s, CSEA worked with the state Office of Mental Retardation to move state operations from institutional settings into community based homes.

Last year, CSEA launched the Quality Care campaign to address the serious problem of low pay and poor benefits for workers in the not-for-profit agencies providing developmental disabilities services that threatens to undermine the quality of care throughout the system. The legislation was overwhelmingly approved by the state legislature, only to be vetoed by Gov. George Pataki in one of his last acts as governor. The Quality Care Act was shockingly opposed by the management of the not-for-profit operators even though it would have helped support better pay for their employees.

Also in 1972 ...

- Eleven Israeli athletes at the Olympic Games in Munich, Germany are killed by members of a terrorist group who invaded the Olympic village.
- President Richard Nixon is re-elected to a second term by a landslide; five men are caught breaking into the Democratic National Committee headquarters in Washington, D.C., kicking off the Watergate scandal that would end Nixon’s presidency.

Fast for justice for all working New Yorkers!

Join the 12th annual 40-Hour Fast
Sponsored by the New York Labor-Religion Coalition

• Begins Monday, March 5, at 8 p.m.
• Ends Wednesday, March 7, at noon

In New York state, farmworkers are excluded from many of the state’s labor laws. Farmworkers are not considered “employees” and therefore have no right to overtime pay, even though they might work 70 or 80 hours a week. They are also denied the right to a day of rest each week and to the collective bargaining protections legally given other workers.

By identifying with farmworkers (and others in New York who work hard but fall further and farther into debt), participants in the 40 Hour Fast can better understand that low-income workers do not need charity, but justice—which can be accomplished through simple changes in the laws of the state. CSEA is a longtime supporter of the Fast and urges members to participate.

For more information about Fast events in your region or to sign up for the Fast, contact the New York State Labor-Religion Coalition at (518) 213-6000 or visit the Labor-Religion Coalition’s website at www.labor-religion.org.

Visit the CSEA Employee Benefit Fund website

Members can learn a lot from the CSEA Employee Benefit Fund website that can save them time and phone calls.

While navigating through our website at www.cseaebf.com, you will see some of the great features we have to offer.

EBF serves CSEA-represented state employees and employees from more than 450 local government, school district and public authority units that have negotiated dental, vision and other health care benefits into their contracts.

You can download from EBF’s website many types of forms that will help you take greater advantage of the many benefits the Fund has to offer, including forms related to prescription co-payment reimbursement, vision care reimbursement, annual physicals and your children’s benefits through EBF.

Provider search
You can also search for dental and vision providers on our panel that have contracted with EBF. Changes are made to this listing daily, so this resource is always up-to-date.

Information pertaining to your benefits can be downloaded. Examples of the books available include the State Plan Summary Description, Unified Court System Summary Description, and local government plan booklets for dental and vision benefits.

Retiree Dental Program
Retirees have a section on the website that explains the dental program available to them. This program is for retirees who were previously covered by an EBF dental plan with continued dental coverage from the date of retirement. Application for coverage must be made no later than 30 days from the date of retirement, end of COBRA or termination of another dental plan.

Other links
There is a link on our home page that can link you directly to Davis Vision. On this link, you can access your eligibility date with CSEA EBF for vision benefits. You can also call us to check your eligibility at (800) 323-2732 ext. 880.

When you call EBF to inquire about a spouse, please be aware that due to the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA), we cannot provide the caller with information unless we have a signed HIPAA Authorization Form, which can be downloaded from our website. Complete the form and forward to EBF. Forms must be updated every two years.

If you have a non-network claim submission, make sure you complete the requested subscriber information on the claim forms, include the original billing or receipt, if requested, and sign the claim form.

Procedure protects rights

AFSCME’s constitution includes a rebate procedure to protect the rights of members who disagree with how the union spends money for partisan political or ideological purposes.

Article IX, Sections 14 of the International Constitution, which establishes the procedure for rebates from members who object to AFSCME’s partisan political or ideological expenditures, was amended at AFSCME’s 53rd International Convention.

The amended language requires those persons who object to the expenditure of dues for political or ideological purposes submit their objections in writing to the International Union and CSEA Local 1000 by certified mail between April 1 and April 16 (dates inclusive) each year for the prior year ending Dec. 31.

The timing of the steps in the procedure is tied to the International’s fiscal year. The procedure, including the requirements for submitting a proper rebate request, is spelled out in Article IX, Section 14 of the International Constitution. THESE REQUIREMENTS WILL BE STRICTLY ENFORCED.

Here’s how it works. Members who object to the expenditure of a portion of their dues for partisan political or ideological purposes and want to request a rebate must do so individually in writing between April 1 and April 16, 2007. That request must be timely filed by registered or certified mail with the International Secretary-Treasurer and the CSEA Statewide Treasurer. The requests must include the following information: name, Social Security number, home address and the AFSCME local to which dues were paid during the preceding year. This information must be typed or legibly printed. The individual request must be signed by the member and sent by the individual member to International Secretary-Treasurer at AFSCME Headquarters, 1525 L St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036-5087, and CSEA Statewide Treasurer, Empire State Plaza Station, P. O. Box 2111, Albany, N.Y. 12214-0121. Requests for more than one person may not be sent in the same envelope. Each request must be sent individually. Requests must be received in writing every year the member wishes a rebate.

Upon receipt by CSEA of the valid, certified request, the constitutional maximum of 3 percent rebate will be processed. No phone calls or e-mail correspondence will be accepted.

Any member who is dissatisfied with the amount of the rebate paid by the International Union may object by filing a written appeal with the AFSCME Judicial Panel within 15 days after the rebate check has been received. Appeals should be sent to the Judicial Panel Chairperson at the AFSCME International Headquarters at the address listed above. The Judicial Panel will conduct a hearing and issue a written decision on such appeals subject to an appeal to the full Judicial Panel. If disqualified with the Judicial Panel’s decision, the member can appeal to the next International Convention.

Promoting Good Health

Important reminder for Empire Plan enrollees

LabCorp continues as participating lab

As of Jan. 1, 2007, Quest Diagnostics is no longer a participating provider of laboratory services with United HealthCare under the Empire Plan Medical Program.

Laboratory Corporation of America (LabCorp) is now the national participating provider of laboratory services for the Empire Medical Program. In addition to LabCorp, other regional and local laboratory providers will continue to participate in the Empire Plan.

To find an Empire Plan participating laboratory, call the Empire Plan toll free at 1-877-7NYSHIP (1-877-769-7447); select United HealthCare (option 1) and then select the option for Plan Benefits (option 1). You can also visit the Empire Plan’s laboratory locator website at www.empireplanlablocator.com.
WATERLOO – After many years serving as local and unit treasurer, two years ago Seneca County’s Carmina Russo, a paralegal in the county attorney’s office and 24-year county employee, decided to run for Seneca County Local president, believing the local needed “a breath of fresh air.”

Since winning her election, she’s been more like a whirlwind, working hard to get members of the local more involved in the union, so it came as no big surprise when she was recently honored by Seneca County as “Employee of the Quarter.”

In her nomination for the award, her boss, County Attorney Steven Getman, cited Russo’s “tireless work” on behalf of her co-workers as union president as a key reason he nominated her. Russo also does interesting and unusual volunteer work in her community and Communications Associate Mark Kotzin recently spoke with Russo to hear more about her union activism and her “other” life.

Q: Describe some of the initiatives that you’ve undertaken since becoming local president?
A: Well, we resurrected the local’s Community Service Program, collecting gloves, mittens and hats for those in need, and raising money to make donations for three area food pantries and a local animal shelter. We also got more involved in the Rochester Labor Council, and now two others and I regularly attend meetings. We’ve also been recognizing our retirees at local meetings, and recently recognized our World War II veterans.

Q: Why get involved in community service projects?
A: It not only benefits our community, but it gives our members a sense of involvement in the community and the union. They’re all very generous in their donations.

Q: Why is it important to be a part of the labor council?
A: The idea is that we not only hear from the other CSEA units that attend, but the other unions in the area as well. It’s a good place to network, to share ideas, and to brainstorm over our common concerns.

Q: How have your efforts to get the local more active paid off?
A: We’re bringing people back into the union. People who would never come before are coming to the meetings. We had good turnout of about 60 percent at our end of year local meeting. Maybe my enthusiasm is contagious, but I don’t really like the word “I.” In the union, it’s more about “we.”

Q: How do you feel about being local president?
A: I find it interesting, and challenging. It’s a big responsibility. I’m always aware that as president, I represent CSEA to the members and the community.

Q: Speaking of the community, is it true that you have an alter ego that is fairly well known in the community?
A: Yes. I’m known as Daffy Dill the Clown. In 1999, I went to “clown school” once a week for two months, to learn how to do makeup, costumes, make balloon animals and learn the general antics of a clown and how to work with kids. Now I do community events, picnics and birthday parties. Every year, I volunteer a day at my local elementary school, and the excitement and the reaction from the kids, it cracks me up. It’s the funniest thing.

Q: So you enjoy working in

Edward Barto, Seneca County Board of Supervisors chair, presents CSEA Seneca County Local President Carmina Russo with a plaque and a gift certificate as recognition of her service and dedication to county government.

your community and helping out your co-workers?
A: I enjoy helping out people, and as long as I have the ability to do it, I’m going to keep doing it. I guess I’m a people person.
Summary of Jan. 11 Board of Directors meeting

Editor's note: The Work Force publishes a summary of actions taken by CSEA’s board of directors. The summary is prepared by CSEA Statewide Secretary Barbara Reeves for union members.

ALBANY — CSEA’s statewide board of directors met on Jan. 11. In official business, the board:

- Authorized a new Member Benefit discount program for Apple products;
- Approved a language change to Hudson Decision procedures;
- Created four new locals: Local 749 (NYS School of Ceramics at Alfred University), Local 758 (SUNY Cobleskill Auxiliary Services), Local 761 (Westchester Medical Center Food Service/Sodexo) and Local 764 (Touro College-Fuschberg Law Center Employees);
- Dissolved Local 748 (Correctional Medical Services/CMS at Albany County Correctional Facility) and Local 555 (Statewide Taxi & Limousine Operators).

Smithtown Unit Reaches Tentative Agreement

The CSEA Smithtown Unit has reached a tentative agreement with town officials that provides wage increases over four years, upgrades 22 titles and protects members' health insurance benefits. It was the first time the union negotiated directly with the town supervisor without the intervention of an outside negotiator. The previous contract expired in December 2006.

Officer trainings help leaders to lead

OMMACK — Two of CSEA’s four statewide officers, Executive Vice President Mary Sullivan and Secretary Barbara Reeves, conducted classes for Long Island local and unit leaders recently.

Sullivan led a class for presidents and vice presidents at the region office on Jan. 17, while Reeves led a session for secretaries at the Huntington Hill Feb. 3.

The classes highlighted the obligations of local and unit leaders to meet CSEA’s standards and governmental regulations as they serve their fellow members.

Both classes drew large turnouts and praise from the students for the value of the three-hour sessions. John Mooney, a head water maintenance worker for the City of Long Beach, said the course given by Sullivan “was very good, educational and informative,” and written materials handed out to the students added to the usefulness. “We have a couple of situations where the books will definitely help,” said Mooney, who has been executive vice president of the City of Long Beach Unit of Nassau Municipal Local 882 for two years. “It’s a lot to read but you learn. Knowledge is power. The training course will help make the Long Beach Unit a lot stronger.”

Jim Logan, president of the Town of Huntington Unit of Suffolk Local 852, said the course was time well spent. “It was informative and the subject matter was excellent. I attended with my 1st vice president, Rich Vaccio, and we both gained a tremendous amount of knowledge from this. I believe it will assist me in my duties as president, and, in turn, the knowledge I gain will assist all my members.”

Logan was 1st vice president of the unit for five years before assuming the presidency a year and a half ago. Although you have considerable service as an officer under your belt, was the course useful, he was asked. “Absolutely,” he said.

About 40 officers took the course.

Brendan Brown was one of 65 officers who attended the course Reeves conducted for secretaries. “Barbara did a very good job,” said Brown, secretary of the Brookhaven Highway Unit of Local 852 for six years. “The part on the way we conduct the minutes was very helpful.”

After her class, Reeves praised her students. “It was a great class,” she said. “People came early, there was a large turn out, the material was very well received and excellent questions.”

The class was given beginning at 11 a.m. on a Saturday. “This is only the second region that’s done Saturday training,” said Reeves. “I think the Saturday format works well for people here and we may do it again.”

In top photo, the turnout for the classes was high. This is part of the group of students who took Mary Sullivan’s course. Above, student, left, has a question for Statewide Secretary Barbara Reeves.

LaMorte honored

Long Island Region CSEA members turned out to honor Region President Nick LaMorte as he received the Suffolk County Martin Luther King Jr. Commission’s Public Service Award. He was honored for his long and demonstrated record of dedication to fighting for dignity, respect and workers rights. LaMorte accepted the award on behalf of all CSEA members. Here he accepts the award from Commission Chair Mary Reid.

Meetings brothers and sisters.

As March is Women's History Month, I would like you to consider a few facts.

According to the latest US Census figures:

- 72 million women in the United States age 15 and older worked in 2004. Of this number, 59 percent worked year-round, full time.
- 37 percent of women age 16 and older work in management, professional and related occupations, compared with 32 percent of men.

And yet women age 15 and older, who worked full time, year round, earned only 77 cents for every $1 their male counterparts earned in 2004. (That's an increase from 76 cents for every dollar in 2003.)

I am sure you feel as do I there is no excuse for this disparity.

The solution for this kind of inequity is very simple: work union.

For example, in the Town of Brookhaven, CSEA fought back when the town attempted to cut or reduce our Package 7 benefits, which pertain to eye exams, glasses and dental coverage, among other things. But a coordinated turnout by hundreds of CSEA members at a town board meeting turned back the threat.

That's why it is so important when you get a notice from CSEA about a protest or a demonstration going on in a school district, a municipality or a library, that you make a note of it and take the time to come out and help.

Even if you can just come for a few minutes, wear something with the CSEA logo, pick up a sign and let the union know you are there to lend some support. Let them know that you are there to help your brother and sister members. And know that one day, you might need their help.

In solidarity,

Nick LaMorte, president
Long Island Region

Family illness cited

Suffolk Cooperative Library president resigns

BELLPORT — Jim Balletta has resigned as president of the Suffolk Cooperative Library Local 701 because of the illness of a close family member.

Eileen Milieski, local vice president for the past 2 1/2 years, will serve as acting president until the local elects officers in July.

Long Island Region President Nick LaMorte expressed regret at the resignation, calling Balletta a “new and energetic local leader.” “We all wish him and his family the best,” LaMorte said.

Balletta, coordinator of computer services, has worked at the library for 11 years. He served as a steward and vice president before stepping into the presidency five years ago. “I really enjoyed representing the people at the cooperative,” he said.

“They are a great bunch of dedicated, hard workers.”

Milieski said local members were sorry that he had left office. “All are very upset that he’s leaving because he’s been such a good president,” she said.

Milieski served as the local’s recording secretary for five years before assuming the vice presidency. She has worked at the library for 12 years and is office manager for acquisitions and services.

The local’s two other officers, Treasurer John Richardson and Recording Secretary Terese McCormick, will remain in those posts.

Brookhaven Unit gets a benefit refresher

White Collar CSEA members in the Town of Brookhaven were recently treated to a thorough review of what are referred to as their “Package 7 benefits.”

CSEA Employee Benefit Fund Senior Benefit Specialist Linda Sclafani spent some time at a general membership meeting, doing a presentation and answering questions. She said that the current benefit plan has been extended through 2009.

Package 7 includes dental and optical (eyeglass) benefits; legal, hearing aid, and maternity benefits; an annual physical, a $200 per family per calendar year prescription drug co-payment; and a workplace security benefit in addition to the health insurance coverage provided under the contract.

The importance of the Package 7 benefits was highlighted recently by the very public battle between the Town Board and CSEA over the town’s attempt to save money by cutting back on Package 7. In December Brookhaven’s CSEA Presidents in White Collar (Meg Shuka), Blue Collar (Bill Walsh) and Highway Units (Richie Leute) rallied the membership, and turned back the town’s effort.

“As a follow-up I asked Linda Sclafani here to (the membership meeting) to explain what CSEA has secured for them, and why we were fighting so hard to preserve it,” said White Collar Unit President Meg Shuka.

“Basically, we’re not going to be bullied into signing any agreement. And I’m not going to be conned into signing away anything we have earned. Bill Walsh, myself and Richie Leute stand together, we are united, and we will not let kind words separate us,” said Shuka.

Town Supervisor Brian Foley also stopped in to pay a visit to the White Collar members. He said he valued their work and thanked the town employees for their service.

Stony Brook takes stock

STONY BROOK — For the CSEA State University of New York at Stony Brook, Local, the first general membership meetings of the New Year were designed to keep members up to date and give them the opportunity to ask the officers questions.

During the kick-off at 2006, it was noted that Local 614 was the first local to break in the new CSEA rat. The 20-foot-high resident was erected on Nichols Road in April to protest University Hospital giving work of CSEA-represented jobs away to outside contractors. It also marked the launch of several legal filings and an actual lawsuit, which are in the pipeline.

“Our message is, we’re fighting back,” said Local President Carlos Speight. “We’re not going to roll over and take them giving our jobs away; we’re not going to take them walking on us. Our motto now is, ‘Don’t give in; Don’t give up.’ We’re fighting back! We’re fighting for our jobs,” he added, with a smile.

The officers also cited the massive Stony Brook turnout at the December demonstration to oppose the Berger Commission’s plans to privatize SUNY hospitals.

“We came out strong, and we were heard. We got on News 12, and even in Newsday,” said Speight. “The state saw us and heard us and together we got them to back down.”

Speight, who said the fight is not yet over, said the state had put the privatization plan on hold for now because of a temporary injunction but CSEA would remain vigilant.

Long Island Region President Nick LaFortune praised the officers and members for standing together. “I am with you; the region is with you, and CSEA is behind you,” he said. “Your involvement is critical to our success. Remember this, when we fight, we win!”

Getting involved

Local Executive Vice President Debbie Nappi-Gonzalez said the local needs as much member participation as possible. “We’re forming a local newsletter, and we need you to get involved and give us information,” she said. “There’s 10 of us, 3,000 members and a lot of locations as we need your input and assistance.”

The officers passed around sign-up sheets for the newsletter, women’s, social and human rights committees, as well as for new grievance officers. Any member who was not able to attend the meeting is welcome to participate by contacting their shop steward or by calling the local office.

The meeting also touched upon the beginning of state contract negotiations. Negotiations are only in the initial stages, so no real movement or progress could be reported.

Local 2nd Vice President Joe Longo not only represents local members on the state negotiations team, but along with the rest of the Long Island Region representatives, the interests of all state members in the region.

He said any member with questions or concerns about the state negotiations could send him a note at joseph.long@stonybrook.edu.

Mattituck-Cutchogue hits the street

‘If members don’t participate, they are only hurting themselves, and that’s why our members in Mattituck-Cutchogue deserve a lot of credit.’

MATTITUCK — Not even the cold rain could deter CSEA members in the Mattituck-Cutchogue School District from hitting the streets for a fair contract.

“We want to send a clear message: the CSEA members in this district deserve more respect than the disregard this school district has shown them – and their president Sam Strickland,” said CSEA Long Island Region President Nick LaMorte. “The members in Mattituck-Cutchogue deserve a fair contract and we will not rest until they have one.”

“We want to thank all of the CSEA members who came to support us at our last demonstration! We were deeply grateful for the strong show of solidarity from our fellow union members,” said Unit President Sam Strickland. “It really demonstrated to us what a union is about. We also want people to know that we are serious about getting a fair contract, and we will continue to do everything we can to secure it.”

Labor Relations Specialist Stanley Frere was pleased at the turnout. “Whenever there’s a contract fight going on, it is vitally important that the membership show a united and strong front. Management will use any opening it can find to try and weaken our bargaining position at the table, and our strength as a union,” he said.

“Sometimes I hear members say that they don’t think they’re needed at union events because other people will show up,” LaMorte said. “Nothing could be further from the truth. What if everybody said that? You can’t have a union of one or two people. That just wouldn’t be effective.”

“When members fail to participate in contract campaign events, they undermine the union’s efforts on their behalf. If members don’t participate, they are only hurting themselves, and that’s why our members in Mattituck-Cutchogue deserve a lot of credit,” said LaMorte.

A demonstration in support of CSEA members in the Mattituck-Cutchogue School District will be held Feb. 15, as this issue is going to press. A full report of the demonstration will appear in our next issue.

Veterans centers thank CSEA for support

COMMACK — The Northport Veterans Administration Medical Center and the Long Island State Veterans Home at Stony Brook have thanked CSEA contributors and the Veterans Committee for their gifts to hospitalized veterans at during the holiday season.

On behalf of the veterans and staff at the Northport VA Medical Center we would like to thank you and the members of CSEA for your generous donation,” Lynn Cannella of the medical center wrote to Maryann Phelps, chair of the Veterans Committee.

A similar letter of thanks came from Lee Grace Cannella of the veterans home. “Our residents greatly appreciate your generosity and caring, especially all the time and effort that it took to gather such a wonderful assortment of clothing and useful items,” she wrote.

“The veterans are always so appreciative of the generosity of our members and it helps lift their spirits tremendously,” said Phelps, a member of SUNY Stony Brook Local 614.

The union contributions came from many members and friends. “There was a group of Local 630 members who chose to purchase gifts of clothing and blankets instead of buying grab bag gifts to exchange at their holiday luncheon,” said Phelps. “There were members from Stony Brook University Hospital who collected toiletries from a Girl Scout troop that wanted to participate. We received articles of clothing and toiletries from members at

Local 852 Health and Safety Committee moving ahead

SOUTHOLD — Suffolk Local 852’s Health and Safety Committee is moving ahead on several issues affecting members employed by the Town of Brookhaven, including the preparation of an emergency action plan for Town Hall and unsafe working conditions for Blue Collar Unit members at town facilities.

“The committee will be reaching out to various departments of the town, asking questions and urging the town to resolve the situations,” said Tom Skably, committee chair and Southold Unit president.

He said the committee hopes to get all 35 units involved in the committee’s work. “Our primary focus is to give everyone a thorough grounding in safety and health issues,” he said.

Units that wish to send a member to the March committee meeting should leave a message for Skably at the local office.

CSEA member Marybeth Krummenacker’s second child Laura came into the world at more than 8 pounds and seemed perfectly healthy. But after she reached her first birthday, Laura stopped growing.

Doctor after doctor told mom not to worry, but Marybeth instinctively knew something was wrong with her daughter.

“She was admitted to the hospital, severely dehydrated,” said Marybeth Krummenacker. “Her potassium level was so low that they didn’t know how she didn’t die. She spent a week in the hospital, with no answers. Nobody knew what was wrong.”

But an alert kidney specialist had a hunch that saved Laura’s life. It took eight months for the diagnosis — cystinosis. The reason it took so long was because most doctors have never seen it.

Cystinosis is a rare disease. Krummenacker said there are only about 500 people in America who have it.

Cystinosis is a metabolic disorder that causes amino acids to accumulate in organs such as the kidneys, eyes, liver, muscles, pancreas, brain and white blood cells. Children who do not receive the proper treatment can develop kidney failure by age 9.

Fortunately, around the time she was diagnosed, Laura Krummenacker’s doctors found out about a study being conducted by the National Institutes of Health to test a new medication.

“I felt fine,” she said. Of all the medical visits she said, “you get used to it.”

Although she is on nine medications, Laura is going to college to become an elementary school teacher and she works two jobs.

“The disease doesn’t control our life; it fits into our life,” said Marybeth.

Because of what the Krummenacker family has endured, Marybeth, along with the parents of another child with the disease, started a foundation 10 years ago to support cystinosis research, provide the latest information, and find a cure.

Today, Marybeth Krummenacker is on the Board of Directors and a vice president of education for the Cystinosis Research Network.

I want to raise the awareness about the disease,” she said. “We try to connect families dealing with the disease. We have a newsletter. We hold a conference every two years to bring doctors and families together. We have an online support group. I don’t want another family to go through what we went through.”

While Marybeth Krummenacker was helping other families through this foundation, people in the Town of Oyster Bay, where she is a secretary, simply had no idea.

“She’s such a nice person,” said CSEA Town of Oyster Bay Local President Bob Raff. “She’s also very quiet.”

Although she is active in the union and is on the local’s Women’s Committee, it wasn’t until recently that she mentioned the foundation to Raff.

“Because Marybeth works in the town’s Communications Department, she has helped us a great deal over the years to get the word out about CSEA events throughout the membership,” said Rauff. “She has been there for our union. So, when she told me about the group, we wanted to do what we could to help her and support the foundation. I just can’t imagine what these families have to go through.”

That’s why the CSEA Town of Oyster Bay Local is conducting a fund-raising campaign for the Cystinosis Research Network, and encouraging members everywhere to give generously.

The time has come for your union to begin the process of negotiations toward our next contract. I use the word ‘process’ because that is what it truly is. Some people may believe that I just sit down with the county executive and start negotiating with him. That’s not the way CSEA or the county negotiates. It’s a long process that begins right here at the union’s local office.

As most of you know we sent out ‘proposal request forms’ to all members through their unit presidents. We asked that any CSEA Local 830 member who had an idea for enhancing our next contract to fill it out and send it back to us. Well, you did a very good job and we received more than 800 proposals. Now your local negotiating team has some serious homework to do since we need to trim that number to about 100. This is an extremely tough and grinding assignment, and it requires many meetings by our negotiating team to accomplish. That is where we are right now, and we have made some considerable progress. I have scheduled three more all-day sessions just between our negotiating team before we meet for the first time with the county. It should also be noted that several of our unit presidents are new to negotiations because they were recently elected for the first time. This is not a negative thing because new people bring innovative and fresh ideas. However, they will have to learn quickly because the process is long, tiring and can get complicated. I have all the confidence in the world in our negotiating team, and I am ready to begin this serious task with them.

I want you, the CSEA Local 830 member, to know that I believe in you and how vital you all are to this county. We have spent a great deal of time and energy getting this message out to our county officials and residents. I’ve said it many times and I’ll repeat it here: without our CSEA county workforce Nassau County would cease to function. Other public employee unions represent one or two titles, and they do a fine and respectable job at it. CSEA represents more than 800 titles! That in itself is incredible and it makes our job as your union that much more difficult. So, rest assured that my entire team and I will be fighting hard to get you a fair and equitable contract.

On the health care side of our union, I am very concerned about Governor Spitzer’s budget as well as his overall plan on health care for New York. As I have stated many times before, our members working under the umbrella of the Nassau Health Care Corp. are far better off today than they were a year and a half ago. Much of the credit goes to Art Gianelli and his leadership team for realizing where the problems existed and addressing them head on. Mr. Gianelli has worked hard to secure millions of dollars in grant money as well as state and federal aid. Under Governor Spitzer’s plan, NUMC could take a loss of up to $35 million a year in Medicaid and Medicare funds. Although the governor seems to be on a mission to strengthen those hospitals that will survive the closings recommended by the Berger Commission, he is shortighted when it comes to Long Island’s health care needs.

We will continue to work closely with Mr. Gianelli and his team to help ensure the entire Health Care Corp. becomes more financially stable and sound. After all, it is the job security of our 3,000 members who work for the corporation that concerns us most. I still feel much better today than I did a year and a half ago about our members’ job security there, and this subject is what drove me and our team to lobby for the change in leadership there.

On that same topic, let me remind our members that you are the first line of relations with the public. I am very proud of our members.

This Month in Labor History

Mar. 15, 1917

The Supreme Court approved the Eight-Hour Act under the threat of a national railway strike. This was the first federal law that regulated the hours of workers in private companies.

The eight-hour day was realized for many working people in the U.S. in 1938, when the Fair Labor Standards Act under the New Deal made it a legal day’s work throughout the nation.

Salary Discrimination in the Workplace

October 2005

This article provides an overview of salary discrimination in the workplace. It is one in a series of articles that have appeared in The Work Force.

1. Salary Discrimination: The Equal Pay Act

Under the Equal Pay Act (EPA), it is illegal for an employer who is subject to the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) to pay different wages based on the gender of the employee who perform substantially equal work. It is also illegal for a union to encourage an employer to violate the EPA.

For an EPA claim to be successful, it must be shown that the jobs are “substantially equal” and that they are located in the same work location. The jobs do not have to be identical. Whether the jobs are “substantially equal” will depend on the actual work performed rather than the duties listed in the written job descriptions.

Unlike other discrimination laws, the EPA does not require proof that the employer intended to discriminate.

2. Employer Defenses to Equal Pay Act Cases

An employer who has male and female employees paid different wages for equal work, an employer must show that the salary difference is justified by either a merit system, a seniority system, a system that measures earnings by quantity or quality of production, or a differential based on any factor other than gender.

3. Collective Bargaining Agreements and the Role of the Union

The fact that a contract contains unequal rates of pay for equal work does not constitute a defense for either an employer or the union to an EPA claim. Contracts that provide for unequal rates of pay in conflict with the EPA would be viewed by the courts as null and void. It is inappropriate for a CSEA local or unit to knowingly enter into or renew a contract that contains known wage discrepancies that violates the EPA.

4. Enforcement of the Equal Pay Act

The EPA can be enforced through a complaint with the United States Department of Labor (DOL) or through a lawsuit in federal or state court. Generally, EPA claims must be commenced within two years of the date of the alleged offense. However, if it can be shown that the employer willfully violated the law, a three-year time frame is allowed. If successful, an employee can receive back wages for a maximum of two years, or three years in the case of a willful violation.

They Said It:

CSEA Teams up with County to Clean up Probation Center and JDC

WESTBURY — CSEA Local 830, in cooperation with the county executive’s office, and CSEA members from the Nassau County Department of Public Works, teamed up to clean the office at Nassau’s Probation Department Family Division at 1200 Old Country Road in Westbury and the Juvenile Detention Center on Carman Avenue.

The office was hit with a major flood in early January, damaging ceiling tiles and creating unsanitary conditions for CSEA members at the facility. Local 830 President Jerry Lanichuta quickly got in touch with Nassau Deputy County Executive John Donnelly to make sure the problem would be rectified.

Pictures were taken initially on Jan. 8 with missing ceiling tiles, wet rugs and tarps galore. A subsequent visit on Jan. 29 showed night and day improvements, as the ceiling tiles were back in place, the rugs were sanitized until new rugs are installed and all workers seemed to be pleased. The installation of the new rugs is the only improvement that remains.

This job could not have been done without the work of Probation Department Unit President Maria Rowe, who was instrumental in getting the job done as quickly as it was.

Similar measures were taken right across the street from the Probation Department, at the Nassau Juvenile Detention Center on Carman Avenue.

In March 2008, CSEA was joined by numerous county legislators and CSEA Long Island Region officials in a tour of the old JDC building.

“This has been a huge initiative for CSEA, and now major progress has finally been accomplished as DPW was at it again, cleaning up and painting the building,” Lanichuta said.

Lanichuta was very pleased with the undertaking of both of these projects, and said, “I am glad that we were able to call on Nassau County, and that we were able to work together with them on this project. It’s important to know that we can work with the county and get these sorts of things done in such short order.”

CSEA Attends 5th Annual Nassau Labor Breakfast

WOODBURY — The CSEA Local 830 team attended the Nassau County Executive’s 5th Annual Labor Breakfast Feb. 6 at Crest Hollow Country Club.

The event started off with the convocation by the Rev. Thomas Hartman, followed by remarks from County Executive Tom Suozzo. The focal point of the morning was the presentation on the Nassau County Hub, a plan to link all assets in Nassau County. These assets would include Eisenhower Park, Nassau Coliseum and the Roosevelt Field and Source Malls for easier accessibility.

This plan is in its early stages and would need approval from the Nassau County Legislature each step of the way.

Following the presentation, CSEA Local 830 President Jerry Lanichuta spoke with Reckson Associates Realty Corp. Chief Executive Scott Rechir about his thoughts on the plan.

“I wanted it to be known that CSEA will not support this endeavor unless it includes public employees,” Lanichuta said. “It was an impressive presentation and excellent plan, but we need to look at how this could affect our CSEA members.”

CSEA thanked the county executive for the invite to the event, and union officials look forward to attending again in the future.

Local 830 President on “Meet the Leaders”

WOODBURY — CSEA Local 830 President Jerry Laricchiuta joined forces with Nassau County Legislator Lisanne Altmann, from the 10th Legislative District, for the latest installment of Cablevision’s half-hour show, “Meet the Leaders.”

The show was taped Feb. 16 at the Cablevision studios and will air frequently throughout March in Nassau County, with exact times yet to be determined (log onto www.csea830.org as air times will be posted once they become available).

The host of the show is Pat Halpin, who has been a regular stand-in for Alan Colmes on “Hannity and Colmes,” shown on the Fox News Channel.

Altmann, a longtime supporter of labor and of CSEA, joined Laricchiuta to discuss many topics, including their accomplishments during their tenures, what is in store for the future, preserving the quality of life for Nassau County and other labor issues that affect CSEA and its members in Nassau County.

“I am very excited for this opportunity to let Nassau County know about the hard work of our CSEA members, and all that our local is doing to support them,” Laricchiuta said. “The more the public knows about us, then the better off we will be in the future.”

Scenes from the Kitchen at A. Holly Patterson

CSEA members employed in the kitchen at the A. Holly Patterson Extended Care Facility in Uniondale work hard to provide meals for all residents of the 889-bed nursing home. Here are some scenes from the kitchen as our members do their jobs:

Veteran’s Corner
By Debbie O’Connell

Greetings to everyone! We all hope you are staying warm and having a pleasurable start to 2007. Here’s what’s new in veterans’ news:

• There’s still time for veterans’ organizations planning to “flag the graves” of veterans on Memorial Day weekend to get their requests for flags to the Veterans Service Agency, 1425 Old Country Rd., Building H, Plainview, N.Y. 11803 by April 1. Long Island National Cemetery has reported it does not have the funding to replace 20,000 worn-out grave flags.

• The Independent Budget, Veterans Service Organizations (IBVSOs), AMVETS, Disabled American Veterans, Paralyzed Veterans of America and Veterans of Foreign Wars have released their 21st annual “Critical Issues Report.” Adequate funding for Veteran Affairs Health Care, sufficiently funded Mental Health and Traumatic Brain Injury programs, a sufficient construction budget, reduction of the claims backlog at the VA, seamless transition from active duty to civilian life, VA’s Homeland Security role, and commitment to the National Cemetery Administration are explained in detail in this comprehensive and clear report. For a copy go to http://es1.pva.org/independentbudget/pdfC1_FY08.pdf or call the Veterans Service Agency at (516) 572-8452.

• VA officials announced that veterans of the 1991 Persian Gulf War who have disabilities from undiagnosed illnesses will continue to qualify for veterans’ health care and benefits until Dec. 31, 2011. Before this Dec. 18, 2006, decision, the coverage would have expired on Dec. 31, 2006. For the latest information on government funded research into the Gulf War Illnesses, depleted uranium, SHAD and other health threats to our service men and women, check out www.deploymentlink.osd.mil.

• The CSEA Veterans Committee is looking to meet again in the coming month. Please call Debbie O’Connell at 571-2919 ext. 22 if you have any questions, or suggestions on anything. In the meantime we are still collecting DVD movies and anything else that you think might help for those deployed overseas. Thanks, and see you next month!

January 2007 Nassau University Medical Center Employee of the Month

At a reception hosted by the employees of the Nassau Health Care Corp., Maycil McDowell, a registered nurse, was honored as the January 2007 Employee of the Month for the Nassau University Medical Center. McDowell, a resident of Uniondale, has been employed at NUMC since 1996 as a nurse. She works in the Women’s Pavilion, keeping the clinic running smoothly and efficiently, going the extra mile for patients. She works well with the attending physicians and fellow staff members. McDowell is an asset to the unit and a pleasure to work with.

January 2007 A. Holly Patterson Employee of the Month

At a reception hosted by the employees of the A. Holly Patterson Extended Care Facility in Uniondale, Isaura Abrego, a nursing aide and resident of East Rockaway, was honored as the January Employee of the Month at the nursing home. Abrego is an exceptional person who performs her duties with kindness and treats all residents with respect and caring. She takes pride in her work, has a good record of attendance and is always professional in manner and dress.

Solidarity Beats Inequities Every Time

Greetings brothers and sisters

As March is Women’s History Month, I would like you to consider a few facts.

According to the latest US Census figures:

• 72 million women in the United States ages 15 and older worked in 2004. Of this number, 59 percent worked year-round, full time.
• 37 percent of women 16 and older work in management, professional and related occupations, compared with 32 percent of men.

And yet women ages 15 and older, who worked full time, year-round, earned only 77 cents for every $1 their male counterparts earned in 2004. (That’s an increase from 76 cents for every dollar in 2003.)

I am sure you feel as do I that there is no excuse for this disparity. Simply put, two individuals who do the same or comparable work should be paid the same fair wage. It should not matter whether the worker is male or female, and it certainly should not matter what the person’s race, ethnicity, religion or sexual preference is, either. A fair wage should be a fair wage, period.

The solution for this kind of inequity is very simple: work union.

Of course, that’s getting harder and harder for our friends, neighbors and children to do these days, with the number of people represented by unions shrinking every day. Whole industries and companies that once promised good-paying stable union jobs have vanished, or are on the verge of disappearing. Companies are dumping their pension plans left and right. And because so many working people are getting shafted by these trends, they are becoming resentful about what unions like CSEA have been able to secure or acquire for their members.

For example, in the Town of Brookhaven, CSEA fought back when the town attempted to cut or reduce our Package 7 benefits, which pertain to eye exams, glasses and dental coverage, among other things. But a well-coordinated turnout by hundreds of CSEA members at a Town Board meeting turned back the threat.

The sniping that resulted in the press smacked of envy, and I’m sure we haven’t heard the last of it. School districts and libraries all over the island are also trying to hike the premiums our members pay, or make them pay if they aren’t already. And CSEA is right there, fighting back.

That’s why it is so important when you get a notice from CSEA about a protest or a demonstration going on in a school district, a municipality or a library, that you make a note of it and take the time to come out and help.

Even if you can just come for a few minutes, wear something CSEA, pick up a sign, and let them know you are there to lend some support. Let them know that you are there to help your brother and sister members. And know that one day, you might need their help.

CSEA members, officers and staff people are out there every day fighting for fair contracts, defending benefits and other contractual items, demanding respect from management, and representing members on the job. Just about all of us could use a little help sometimes.

It’s times like these that demonstrate what a union is all about — unity, solidarity, and fairness.

Yes, it’s unfair that so many women still only make 77 cents for every dollar a man earns. But CSEA is doing its part to make sure that ALL of our members get fair pay, fair treatment, and fair representation. That’s the union way to work so that the inequities plaguing so many workers, women and men, can one day become just a note in the history books.

In solidarity,

Nick LaMorte, president

This month from Talkin’ Labor With Local 830

MINEOLA — January marked “Talkin’ Labor’s” first repeat guest as Nassau County District Attorney Kathleen Rice stopped by to discuss labor issues such as the Nassau County out-of-title audits and her initiative to open the Early Case Assessment Bureau to cater to her part-time workers.

Later in the month, host and Local 830 President Jerry Laricchiuta interviewed his 10th and 11th different Nassau County legislators in the 10 months this radio show has been on the air by speaking with 4th District Legislator Denise Ford and 7th District Legislator Jeffrey Toback. Ford, a former union member in CWA locals 1101 and 1106 until 1999, brought a unique perspective to the show.

Coming in February, CSEA is working on some high-profile guests to come on and talk about labor. U.S. Rep., Peter King, who represents New York’s 3rd Congressional District, is already scheduled to be a guest, and there has also been back and forth contact with U.S. Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton’s office in the efforts to schedule her for “Talkin’ Labor”.

“Having guests that are very prominent figures on both a local and a statewide level, is very important for CSEA and our members,” Laricchiuta said. “It helps put CSEA on the map, gives our members much needed exposure, and emphasizes the fact of how powerful we are with over 10,000 members here in Nassau County, and 265,000 overall in New York state.”
A Message From Metropolitan Region President
GEORGE A. BONCORAGLIO

Brothers and Sisters,

I certainly hope you are all excited about the drastic political changes that have taken place across the state and across the country. It’s been a long time since we had any good political news but finally, it seems the tide is turning.

For starters, we have a new tenant in the Governor’s Mansion. Members across the city played a big role in making sure that former state Attorney General Eliot Spitzer became the next governor. We are all grateful and very proud for all the work you did in this race and other important statewide and local races.

Now that we have a Democrat for governor, however, we can’t afford to rest on our laurels and expect that he will do everything that we ask. That’s not what history has taught us and we would be foolish to think otherwise. On the contrary, as we gear up for a new round of state contract negotiations, we need to continue to educate, energize, organize and mobilize all of our members to insure that Gov. Spitzer hears our collective voices and responds affirmatively to our demands.

The same goes for the new Congress sworn in earlier this year. With a new Democratic Congress leading the charge, we can’t assume that it will pass legislation and implement new policies to benefit workers and unions in this country. We expect help because labor played such a big role in helping the Democrats win the leadership of both houses of Congress. But once again, history has shown us that old habits die hard. We need to hold them accountable and let them know we’re watching and we vote.

There’s a lot at stake for organized labor at every level of government and it’s important to remain vigilant, educate others and stay involved in our union and in civic affairs.

We wouldn’t have been able to pass a new minimum wage law without that kind of vigilance and participation on behalf of labor. We will need to get even more involved around another piece of legislation involving a worker’s ability to join a union.

America’s working people are struggling to make ends meet these days and our middle class is disappearing. The best opportunity working people have to get ahead economically is by uniting to bargain with their employers for better wages and benefits.

But the current system for forming unions and bargaining is broken. Every day, corporations deny workers the freedom to decide for themselves whether to form unions to bargain for a better life. They routinely intimidate, harass, coerce and even fire workers who try to form unions and bargain for economic well-being. The Employee Free Choice Act (H.R. 800), is supported by a bipartisan

Mensaje del Presidente Regional Metropolitano

Hermanos y hermanas,

Espero que estén felices con todos los cambios políticos que han ocurrido a través del estado y a través del país. Se que hemos esperado mucho tiempo para buenas noticias política pero finalmente, me parece que la marea está dando vuelta.

Para empezar, tenemos un nuevo inquilino en la mansión del gobernador. Los miembros de nuestra unión a través de la ciudad desempeñaron un papel grande en asegurando que el abogado general del estado, Eliot Spitzer, sea el próximo gobernador. Todos estamos orgullosos y muy orgullosos por el trabajo que ustedes lograron en esta y otras elecciones estatales y locales.

Sin embargo, ahora que tenemos un gobernador demócrata no nos podemos ralentizar ni pensar que el haga todo lo que pidamos. Eso no es lo que nos ha enseñado la historia y seríamos absurdo pensar de otra manera. Al contrario, como nos preparamos para una nueva redonda de negociaciones para un nuevo contrato estatal, necesitamos continuar educando, organizando y movilizando a todos los miembros para asegurar que el gobernador Spitzer oye nuestras voces colectivas y responde afirmativo a nuestras demandas.

Igual va para el nuevo congreso en Washington, DC. Con un nuevo congreso democrático no podemos asumir que aprobarán la legislación y pondrán nuevas políticas en ejecución para beneficiar trabajadores y uniones en este país.

Somos que nos ayuden ya que ellos saben la gran ayuda del movimiento sindicalista le presta para capturar ambas casas del congreso. Pero de nuevo, la historia nos demostró que los viejos hábitos mueren difícilmente. Necesitamos estar vigilantes y también dejarnos saber que estamos mirando y votamos.

Hay mucho en juego para el movimiento laboral en varias niveles del gobierno y es importante que sigan siendo vigilantes, educuen a otros y permanezcan envueltos en nuestra unión y en asuntos civicos.

No habríamos podido aprobar leyes para aumentar el salario mínimo si no fuera por ese tipo de vigilancia y la participación sindicalista. Necesitaremos el apoyo de más sindicalistas con la nueva legislación que se trata de la habilidad de obreros que quieren ser miembros de una unión.

Obreros en América está luchando cada día y nuestra clase mediana se está desapareciendo. La mejor oportunidad para obreros que quieren mejorar su posición económica es unirse para negociar salarios y ventajas mejores con sus patronos.

Pero el sistema actual para formar uniones no sirve. Cada día, corporaciones reían a trabajadores la libertad para decidir para sí mismos si formando una unión puede mejorar sus vidas. Intimidan, azcan, y despiden trabajadores que intentan formar uniones para negociar mejores salarios y beneficios.

La legislación (H.R. 800) tiene el apoyo de una coalición de ambos partidos políticos en el congreso, sería justo para

Workers Shine at Queens Children

QUEENS — Winston Ferrell is making environmental services and his co-workers shine at Queens Children’s Psychiatric Center.

As the supervisor of environmental services supervising 10 cleaners, this CSEA member has gone out of his way to develop a training course for his staff while also working with the facility to acquire better equipment.

“Ten years ago, workers in environmental services were just going to work and not knowing why,” said Ferrell. “Through education and staff development there is now a sense that their work is appreciated.”

Ferrell’s department recently held an Environmental Services Awareness Week event where the workers were acknowledged for their contributions.

“When I first started at this facility, I felt the morale was low,” said Ferrell. “Now (the workers) feel like they are making a contribution.”

Arthur Holmes, a house cleaner at the psychiatric center for the past 31 years remembers how it used to be.

“We had no machines. We had to do everything by hand,” said Holmes. “The machines have made it a whole lot easier.”

Other changes implemented by Ferrell include color-coded mops that limit cross contamination. For instance, red mops are for bathrooms, blue for offices and green for stripping.

The department has also started using cleaning agents that are less toxic for the environment and humans, in accordance with a state executive order issued last year requiring state agencies to use “green” cleaning products.

It shows the quality of work that union members provide,” said Sarah Smith, the local’s recording secretary. “Their high standards and the quality of their work are just as important as any other job in this facility.”

A bookshelf in Ferrell’s office contains the large binders with the training program he’s implemented. It covers six basic topics including floor and carpet care, disinfecting and cleaning, rest rooms, and bloodborne pathogens.

“Whatever I have learned in my years of working I want to share with someone else,” said Ferrell. “I can’t keep it all to myself, you have to pass it on.”

Junior Moses has been working as a cleaner for only a short time but knows how critically important his department is to the facility.

“If we don’t keep this place clean and organized, they’ll shut us down,” said Moses. “We work for the state, but more importantly, we work for the children.”

measures to protect those who are still suffering from the effects of Sept. 11. Many firefighters and police officers have already died or become seriously ill as a result of toxins and other contaminated debris they were exposed to in the aftermath of the terrorist attack. If this is how the heroes of Sept. 11 are treated what should we expect for the rest of us?

Unlike many workers, in a few days we’ll have the ability to elect our new boss. It’s especially important this year since we’ll soon begin negotiating a new contract for state workers. By voting, we demonstrate our strength and our ability to reward those who treat labor fairly and respectfully and punish those who don’t.

Brothers and sisters, as we head into the holiday season, I would also like to wish you and your loved ones peace, happiness and good health.

In solidarity,

minieron, por muchos años, sobre la calidad del aire en la zona baja de Manhattan, sindicatos se han reunido con grupos de la comunidad, residentes y otros activistas en un llamado para legislación y otras medidas para proteger a los que todavía están sufriendo de los efectos del 11 de septiembre. Unos cuantos bomberos y policías han muerto o están sufriendo de enfermedades resultando de la contaminación. ¿Si así tratan a los héroes del 11 de septiembre, qué nos espera a nosotros?

No hay muchos trabajadores que puedan elegir a nuestro nuevo jefe. Es especialmente importante este año por que pronto comenzaremos a negociar un nuevo contrato para los trabajadores del estado. Con nuestros votos demostraremos nuestra fuerza y nuestra habilidad de recomendar a los que nos traten respetuosamente y castigar a los que no lo hagan.

Hermanos y hermanas, ya pronto vamos a celebrar varios días de fiesta como el día de acción de gracias y las navidades. Quisiera desearles a todos y a sus familias paz, felicidad y buena salud.
