Nearly 100 North Country CSEA members demonstrate recently at the Peru School District because the district refused to pay retiree health benefits to a former co-worker who is battling cancer. See story, Page 15.

AFSCME 2008 scholarships

AFSCME will grant 13 $2,000 scholarships for high school seniors graduating in spring 2008. Students must be the son or daughter of a CSEA member, or whose legal guardian or financially responsible grandparent is a CSEA member.

Students must be enrolled in a full-time degree program at an accredited four-year institution.

Applications must be postmarked by Dec. 31, 2007. CSEA President Danny Donohue to meet with Long Island Region members on Dec. 6.

CSEA President Danny Donohue will visit the CSEA Long Island Region on Dec. 6 to meet with members. The meetings will be held at the Long Island Region office, 3 Great Place, Commack. Donohue will meet with union members from 1 to 7 p.m. Please call the Long Island Region office at (631) 492-0930 for an appointment and directions.

State contract alert

TROY — CSEA and New York state have made considerable progress recently in negotiations for new contracts.

Negotiations have been consumed with health insurance issues.

Both sides were able to reach tentative agreements in three areas of health insurance that improve plan elements without shifting costs to employees, while leaving the larger issues unresolved. There was, however, extensive dialogue between CSEA and the state as to how the tough issues could be resolved.

As the November Work Force went to press, CSEA had laid out all the remaining proposals, which both sides have on the table. After lengthy discussion and exchanging counter proposals, both sides withdrew a few and modified several others.

There is tentative agreement (subject to agreement on complete contracts) on Identification Card replacement fees, funding for all joint labor-management programs, out-of-title work grievance procedures, special assignment to duty pay, and the use of compensatory time.

Breaking contract news is regularly posted at www.csealocal1000.org.

CSEA creates new benefit fund

ALBANY — CSEA has established a new labor-management fund that will be an important option for providing health care and other benefits to the union’s private sector members.

The Strategic Benefit Fund, which is a joint labor-management collaboration, will allow CSEA and participating employers access to more cost-effective benefits.

CSEA President Danny Donohue praised the trust as an important step toward reigning in ever increasing health care costs.

“CSEA’s Strategic Benefit Trust will lead to better benefits and coverage at lower costs for employees and employers,” Donohue said.

“We will be able to use our collective strength and buying power to achieve quality, affordable health care for our members despite skyrocketing costs.”

CSEA backs candidates

CSEA has made endorsements in several key races across the state and encourages union members to vote on Nov. 6 for candidates who support working families. On this page are listed the major races of each region. Visit http://www.cseaLocal1000.org/pac/endorsements07.php for a complete list of CSEA’s endorsements.

Onondaga County Executive: Magnarelli

SYRACUSE — For the first time in decades, Onondaga County voters will have the opportunity to elect a new county executive following the retirement of longtime County Executive Nick Pirro.

CSEA members have recently been pounding the pavement and the phone buttons in hopes of making sure that state Assemblyman Bill Magnarelli is that next county executive.

“We know that it’s time for a change in Onondaga County’s leadership and our members believe that Bill Magnarelli will be the best leader to bring about positive changes on our county work force issues,” said Onondaga County Local President Phil Graham.

Magnarelli said he’d push to get a timely and fair contract for the county workers, who are struggling to make progress in negotiations.

Western Region endorses Keane for County Executive

BUFFALO — CSEA is fighting to get James Keane elected as Erie County executive in a race that pits Keane against a candidate who can best be described as public enemy No. 1 of public employees.

“Jim Keane will work to end the mismanagement that has plagued Erie County for the last eight years,” said CSEA Western Region President Ho Tripi. “His government and labor experience make him the best candidate for county executive.”

CSEA endorsed Keane after meeting with several county executive candidates in recent months. The meetings included formal interviews of the candidates by the Erie County Local Political Action Committee. Following the interviews, the committee endorsed Keane for the endorsement.

“Jim Keane and CSEA both believe that strong economic development partnered with a strong county work force will help revitalize our community,” said CSEA Erie County Local President Joan Bender.

Ruggiero for Dutchess County Executive

BEACON — CSEA members in the Southern Region are campaigning for Joseph Ruggiero for Dutchess County Executive.

“Joe Ruggiero is the best choice for Dutchess County,” said CSEA Southern Region President Diane Hewitt. “In his six years as Wappinger town supervisor, Joe has shown he is a friend to labor. His accessibility has allowed for smooth labor-management relations for our Town of Wappinger Highway Department members, an open relationship that is badly needed in Dutchess County government.”

President Johnson and Ruggiero have been asked to come to a debate, which is booked as the first debate for the Dutchess County Executive race.

“Many issues confront the Dutchess County Executive, including labor-relations issues. I have a very open relationship with labor. I have been a long-time supporter of labor and plan to continue to support labor,” Ruggiero said.

Capital Region

CSEA has thrown its support behind Anthony “Skip” Scirocco for Saratoga Springs Public Works Commissioner race, in a bid to oust a 16-term incumbent.

“For over 30 years, the hard-working men and women of the city DPW have done their job with respect, professionalism and efficiency. And they’ve been able to do so despite (the current commissioner), not because of him,” DPW Unit President Joe O’Neill told the Albany Times Union regarding the city’s incumbent.

Metropolitan Region

CSEA’s Metropolitan Region is endorsing Michael Ryan in the Staten Island district attorney’s race.

“Michael Ryan has the qualifications and experience to put the best interests of working families first,” said Metropolitan Region President George Boncoraglio.

Long Island Region

CSEA is backing South Hampton Supervisor candidate Patrick Heaney is running on Row D. Heaney, who is in an uphill battle to retain his seat has always supported CSEA, improving working conditions and respecting the workers who make things happen in South Hampton.
Courage, dedication at Willowbrook helped change the world

For many people, the name “Willowbrook” is infamous. It refers to what was once known as the Willowbrook State School for the Mentally Retarded on Staten Island and has come to symbolize all that was wrong with an outdated and inhumane system of institutionalizing individuals with developmental disabilities.

More than 35 years ago, two young medical doctors at the facility became involved in a complicated chain of events that exposed the intolerable conditions and changed forever not only the care of individuals with developmental disabilities but more importantly, the way we consider their humanity.

Michael Wilkins and William Bronston recently shared their stories as part of the CSEA 100 history project. Some brief excerpts are included on Page 18 of this edition and they have lessons for us all.

Wilkins and Bronston were compelled to action by the horrific circumstances they faced every day and a rigid state bureaucracy that did not respond to the greatest needs. They also faced an unsympathetic and at times ignorant medical establishment of the era that was too quick to dismiss the potential of individuals with developmental disabilities. It is also fair to say that the CSEA of the early 1970s was not the CSEA of today and it is clear that their actions led to some enormous changes in our union.

New York has come a long way in improving the care and quality of life for individuals with developmental disabilities since the days of Willowbrook. None of us should take any progress for granted and we must still do more. The well-being of individuals must always be the top priority — that is a profound trust for people who work in the system and it must be a steadfast commitment by the rest of us.

Wilkins and Bronston along with others demonstrated what is possible when a dedicated group of individuals work together to do what is right.
A navigator for patients in need

BUFFALO — Patients at Roswell Park Cancer Institute in Buffalo never have to feel alone: they have Mildred Kelly.

Kelly, a CSEA member, is a navigator at Roswell. In that position, she “tries to knock down barriers that keep people from getting the treatment Roswell Park has to offer.”

“Hearing the news you have cancer is overwhelming,” Kelly said. “Half the battle is attitude. You’re in trouble. You’re going to suffer, but you can survive this with some help. I want to help our patients through it. I want them to be survivors.”

Help can take many forms. Some patients can’t get to treatment because they lack transportation or someone to care for their children. Others have difficulty leaving an elderly relative alone at home while they go to the hospital. Some have issues with their employer that keep them from their appointments. “Some people can’t afford to miss even one day of work because they won’t get paid if they do,” Kelly said. “We have ways we can help them until other forms of assistance become available.”

For some patients, the barriers go far beyond missing work or catching a ride. Some people need a shoulder to lean on and ears to listen. For those patients, Kelly can make a referral to an appropriate support group or medical professional. For others, she’ll extend her own hand.

Kelly recalled one patient who could not gather the courage to walk past the hospital’s front entrance. Kelly came down to the front door to meet the woman, and escorted her to the registration desk. From there, she literally walked the woman through the process, offering all the support and encouragement one might receive from a good friend.

“If I need to sit at someone’s bedside and hold their hand as they go through this, I will,” Kelly said. “I needed someone to do this for my mother and no one did. She didn’t even know she had cancer until it was in the later stages.”

Faith provides solutions

Helping people with problems every day may prove overwhelming over time. The memories of her own mother, and a lot of prayer, keep Kelly going. The navigator program evolved from a program in the African-American community that encourages women to receive regular mammograms and gynecological examination. The need for such support and encouragement knows no boundaries.

“Cancer has no ethnic limits,” she said. “I want to be able to help whoever I can as much as I can. I don’t care what color you are. If you need my help, my hand is extended.

“I really feel as if this is my calling.”

For now, Kelly is the lone navigator at Roswell. The program began as a pilot in the breast cancer clinic last fall with three patients. The hospital officially kicked off the program last July. Kelly has almost 50 patients in her care. She receives two or three new referrals every day. Eventually, Kelly said, the program may expand to all of the hospital’s clinics and more navigators may be added.

School security guards fight staffing cuts

NORTH TONAWANDA — Two officers, more than 1,500 students and 294,715 square feet: welcome to North Tonawanda High School. Security officers at the Niagara County high school are fighting a reduction in work hours that has resulted in the elimination of a guard position at the sprawling campus.

Three off-duty city police officers once kept the students, faculty and staff safe, but now just two guards patrol the halls. “North Tonawanda High School is a safe place because of the security guards,” said CSEA Western Region President Flo Tripi. “When the officers first started, there were a lot of safety issues at that school. The guards have brought the school under control. To cut staffing jeopardizes their safety and the safety of students and staff.”

CSEA is helping the guards address the work issue. The school unit is also in contract negotiations. “In this day and age, there isn’t any place that is cutting security,” said Shawn Larson, a security guard and North Tonawanda police officer. “If anything, they are adding to it. We were the first school in Western New York to have armed security and now the superintendent is taking that away.”

Street safety at school

As North Tonawanda police officers, the school security guards interact with some of the students on the streets. Two officers always respond to street crime and fight calls, and those types of calls are on the rise. “We have a good working knowledge of what we’re dealing with,” Larson said. “We take our police training and we implement it in the schools.”

Although the guards are well trained to handle many situations, the school building’s large size also challenges the workers. “This is an old building, and with all the additions it is like a huge ranch house,” said guard Tom Mohring. “It’s so spread out; students can’t get from one end to the other in the five minutes between classes. It’s also impossible for us to get from one end to the other quickly.”

The North Tonawanda School District began employing armed guards nine years ago. Guards have not received a raise in that time. In addition to wages and the short staffing at the high school, guards also have taken issue with the actual scheduling procedure and other work conditions at the school.

Putnam unit fights budget cuts

CARMEL — CSEA members are fighting cuts to the proposed 2008 Putnam County budget, cuts that they say would greatly reduce chances of reaching a contract agreement between the county and CSEA.

“It pretty much eliminates our bargaining power,” said Unit President John Mulreany. CSEA members employed by Putnam County have been working without a contract since Dec. 31, 2006.

Earlier this year, CSEA aggressively lobbied to bring additional sales tax revenue into Putnam County with the hope that added funding would ease budget concerns that have stalled contract negotiations since late last year. Despite the added revenue, the proposed 2008 budget still included a 40 percent county property tax increase, which county legislators whittled down through cuts, including money for future raises.

More than 180 CSEA members recently demonstrated outside the county’s courthouse before a public budget hearing in an effort to raise public awareness of the vital roles the public work force plays in Putnam County.

County residents rely largely on county workers for municipal services, from highway maintenance to home care for the elderly.

The Putnam County Local has also teamed up with the county unit and other bargaining units to sponsor a billboard and a series of advertisements highlighting the positive contributions the CSEA work force makes in the county.

“The Story Lady” moves on to new chapter

ROCHESTER — She’s best known by Rochester’s children as “The Story Lady.”

Now, Jane McManus, a part-time library assistant in the Rochester Library System and until recently the only person to ever serve as president of CSEA’s Rochester Library System Local, is moving on.

She began working at the Rochester Library System in 1974, and worked in the system’s Winton Branch from 1991 until her recent retirement. For the past 12 years, McManus served as president of the union’s Rochester Library System Local, which represents part-time workers.

McManus closed the book on her library career with a prestigious statewide award.

She was recently named this year’s recipient of the Craig Koste Award for Outstanding Service. The annual award recognizes New York State Library Assistants Association members for their service to the organization and to their library. Selection is based on a nomination and supporting letters from the recipient’s co-workers.

“When I found out I was selected for this, I thought ‘You have got to be kidding,’” McManus said. “I thought ‘There must be other people who deserve it more.’

The Story Lady

As “The Story Lady,” McManus organized story hours for preschool age children.

“I enjoy reading to the children and getting them active and social,” McManus said. “At their age, you can see their minds just clicking as they participate in the program.”

Story time is more than just fun, McManus said. She hopes parents will realize the importance of reading to their children at home, and to help children develop a love of reading.

“Working with the children and the parents is definitely my favorite part of the job,” McManus said. McManus applied her dedication to her job to her union work, constantly fighting for parity for part-time library workers.

Through my involvement in the library association, I realized as a library employee I had a right to speak out and that I should speak out about what I thought were injustices,” she said.

“When a patron comes into the library, they say ‘I need this.’ They don’t ask if you are a part-time or a full-time employee,” she said. “In each contract we’ve negotiated, we’ve added to the total package. Will we ever get full parity? I don’t know, but I think we are headed in the right direction.”

— Lynn Miller

“It’s not like it’s a news flash that this has been coming and that our contract has expired. We just want a little respect. I love my job; I really do, and I love the people I meet.”

Albany International Airport workers negotiating first CSEA contract

COLONIE — Negotiations are in full swing for Albany International Airport employees who became part of CSEA in July after 13 months of fighting for the right to join a union.

The employees sought protection from CSEA shortly after Baltimore-based AvPORTS replaced TBI Airport Management in July 2005 as the airport’s manager.

Broken promises
Three divisions of the airport’s field maintenance crew, Vehicle Maintenance, Airfield Maintenance, and Glycol Operations, had seen a drop in their salaries and benefits under AvPORTS despite promises for improvements.

“Right before AvPORTS came on board, we were told how much better things would be. Then, they changed our raise program, reduced our 401K match significantly and completely took away our $120 per month retirement benefit,” said Wayne Shultes, a vehicle maintenance operator at the airport for more than three years. “Then, there was talk of taking away the raise program completely and replacing it with a performance pay option, a poor concept that would lead to favoritism. We needed to do something for our protection.”

The private-sector airport workers called CSEA in June 2006 after meeting together to discuss their options. AvPORTS management pushed back on several attempts at card-check neutrality and said it would only accept results of a National Labor Relations Board secret ballot election. NRLB elections give the employer the chance to use intimidation and retaliation practices.

Of twenty-five voting employees, nearly three-quarters voted for the union.

A voice at work
“I was confident all along that CSEA could help us,” said Shultes. “We need the protection a union can provide. It seems each benefit we have is just a memo away from being taken from us. The airport is a county authority and receives county funding. We at least deserve the same respect as our public sector counterparts.”

“Their determination and persistence is commendable,” said CSEA President Danny Donohue. “This proves that small groups can benefit from the strength of a union and workers have significant power when they stand together and speak in one voice.”

“We’re over halfway there already and making good progress,” Training and Safety Officer Bobby Allen said about negotiations, which are expected to continue until the end of the year.

Solidarity for a fair contract

OLD WESTBURY — CSEA members from across Long Island recently demonstrated in front of the East Williston School District’s Wheatley School before the district’s Board of Education meeting in support of reaching a fair contract with the district.

Contract negotiations between CSEA and the district have long been stalled because of East Williston district officials’ unwillingness to reach a fair agreement with the union. CSEA-represented district employees, who work in custodial, maintenance and transportation titles, have been working without a contract for more than two years.

“Intolerable situation”

Long Island Region Director Ron King told a television station that “the situation is intolerable and the intransigence of the East Williston school board with regard to our stalled contract negotiations is what inspired us to take our message directly to the community.”

Rich Acevedo, Port Washington School District Custodial, Maintenance and Transportation Unit president, led the lively demonstration. Joining CSEA were members of the district’s teachers union, which is also embroiled in a contract battle with district officials.

State Sen. Craig Johnson and Assemblywoman Michelle Schimel also attended the demonstration to show support for their constituents in the unit and throw some political clout behind the message.

“I’m here to show my support for the Custodial, Maintenance and Transportation Unit and the Teacher’s Association,” Schimel said. “I will do all I can to help resolve this issue for the greater good of our community.”

No good faith

The district has responded to CSEA’s attempts to jumpstart negotiations with tactics that stall for time and evade the issues. These issues include the school board’s demand to double the workers’ health insurance contributions, which is intolerable given the high cost of living in East Williston, and the absence of a salary increase that would negate the effect of the increased cost of health insurance.

East Williston is among the wealthiest communities on Long Island, yet the district’s CSEA-represented workers are paid 8 to 15 percent less than their counterparts in surrounding school districts.

“No good faith

“The 35 members of our unit here in East Williston have been without a contract for two and a half years with no end in sight due to the refusal of the school board to bargain in good faith,” said Monica Berkowitz, president of the Nassau Educational Local.

“The board needs to adopt a more reasonable approach and re-think its take it or leave it position.”

Dismissive attitude

Making matters worse is the East Williston Board of Education’s dismissive, disrespectful attitude toward the workers. At the recent board meeting immediately following the demonstration, East Williston Board President Sig Hulin read a statement noting that the contract negotiations would not be on the agenda of the meeting, nor would there be public comment.

Also not addressed during the meeting was the recent 24-count indictment of board member David Wasserman, who is accused of fraud, falsifying business records and “receiving unlawful gratuities” over a four-year period while serving as building commissioner in the town of North Hempstead. Wasserman, who has pleaded not guilty, was not at the school board meeting.

Audience members still addressed the issue during the meeting’s “open comment” periods.

“Our people deserve respect and a fair contract but more than that, their excellent work before and during this tumultuous time has earned them the right to be better off today than they were yesterday,” Berkowitz said. “It’s not a lot to ask.”

CSEA's 97th Annual Delegates Meeting

Fight to win

LAKE PLACID — More than 1,000 CSEA delegates gathered for the union’s 97th Annual Delegates Meeting, conducting the union’s annual business, sharpening their skills as the union’s leaders, and sharing ideas on how to make the union even better.

The program was planned to give delegates many opportunities to take part in decision making, express views, and learn about leadership issues that affect CSEA’s membership.

Delegates also took action on amendments to the CSEA Constitution and relevant resolutions that had been filed with the Statewide Secretary (see Secretary Reeves’ report, Page 19).

Some of the workshops were “Planning for Power,” “Building and Activist Network,” “Inside the Time and Attendance Process,” and “Discipline in the Workplace,” and “Public Speaking for Union Leaders.”

Statewide Secretary Barbara Reeves gave her final address to CSEA delegates, before her announcing her intention to retire at the end of her term in 2008. Reeves was elected to the statewide position in 1994, after more than 20 years of activism. “I just get so much satisfaction from working with people, that’s the only reward I’m interested in,” Reeves said following a video tribute to her. A more complete retrospective of Reeves’ unionism will be published in a future Work Force.

CSEA President Danny Donohue fires up union members demonstrating outside Olympic Regional Development Authority headquarters for ORDA workers.

CSEA delegates took to the streets of Lake Placid to demand a fair contract for Olympic Regional Development Authority (ORDA) workers, who are at impasse in contract talks.

The workers at ORDA make this town come alive in winter, because without them, you’re not going up on Whiteface, and you’re not going to do all the other things that people from across the country come here to do in the winter,” said CSEA President Danny Donohue.

CSEA Capital Region President Kathy Garrison said CSEA members help keep a tourist economy growing, but it’s an economy that outpaces the cost of living for most residents.

“All we’re asking for is fairness and respect,” said ORDA Local President Bill Shurter, who thanked the hundreds of delegates who rallied around the workers.

“You don’t know how much this means to us.”

Pension protection

State Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli told CSEA delegates he will do everything in his power to protect their pensions.

As many private sector companies do away with defined pension plans, pre-retirement groups are beginning to call into question the need for public employee pensions.

“Who they fail to realize is that the state’s pension system is healthy, and that you deserve the pension that’s waiting for you,” DiNapoli said.

State Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli addresses CSEA’s delegates, assuring them the state’s pension system is in fine shape.

McEntee: CSEA leading AFSCME

CSEA is a leading affiliate to be held up as a national example to other AFSCME affiliates of how a union should operate, AFSCME President Gerald McEntee told CSEA delegates.

Addressing the 97th Annual Delegates Meeting, McEntee, not known as a leader who willingly parts with praise, held CSEA up as an example to be emulated by AFSCME’s (American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees) councils and its 1.4 million members across the country.

CSEA is AFSCME’s largest affiliate.

“You’re leading AFSCME. CSEA is leading all of AFSCME across the country,” McEntee told the delegates, noting CSEA’s organizing wins over the past few years.

The union leader took to task the country’s leadership, taking particular aim at President George W. Bush’s failed domestic policies, which have led to catastrophic debt and trade deficit.

McEntee also criticized Bush’s failures in the war in Iraq, comments that brought applause from a majority of delegates.
Violence prevention rules drafted

ALBANY — CSEA members should know the rules of New York’s Workplace Violence Prevention Law have been drafted and CSEA leaders are set to comment on them at a hearing later this month. CSEA fought for more than a decade for the law and won its passage last year. The law is designed to ensure the risk of workplace assaults and homicides are regularly evaluated by public employers and that workplace violence protection programs are implemented to prevent and minimize the hazard to public employees.

While workplace violence can occur in any work setting, typical examples of employment situations that may pose higher risks include:

• Duties that involve the exchange of money;
• Delivery of passengers, goods, or services;
• Duties that involve mobile workplace assignments;
• Working with unstable or volatile persons in health care, social service or criminal justice settings;
• Working alone or in small numbers;
• Working late at night or during early morning hours;
• Working in high-crime areas;
• Duties that involve guarding valuable property or possessions; and
• Working in community-based settings.

Visit http://www.labor.state.ny.us/workersprotection/safetyhealth/workplaceviolence.shtm for complete information about the new law.

CSEA helping to support New York’s high school athletic championships

Across the state, CSEA members on and off the job help support high school athletes in many ways. Some members coach and many attend games. Members working in school districts support athletes daily. Nutritious meals, clean classrooms, and safe transportation are some of the things that help foster a positive learning environment that ultimately helps athletes succeed.

Maintenance of athletic fields and facilities is also key to a sports team’s success. CSEA is again supporting championship tournaments and sports programs in public schools across the state through sponsorship of the New York State Public High School Athletic Association, which oversees 20 varsity sports tournaments held across the state each season.

The Village of Irvington Unit is implementing new safety procedures. Unit President Todd Smith said the unit has created a safety committee that now meets regularly. Unit members, who work in the village’s Department of Public Works, Water Department and Parks Department, have undergone trainings led by CSEA Occupational Safety and Health Department staff. Smith said the unit recently bought safety green colored winter CSEA jackets for workers in an effort to increase visibility of workers on sanitation routes and other road work. Workers are pictured here in their new jackets.

50 years ago ...

In 1957, CSEA celebrated a milestone as the union’s membership surged to more than 75,000 members, totaling about 10,000 more members than just two years earlier. CSEA’s then unprecedented growth, under the presidency of John Powers, was the result of an increasing number of public employees who chose to be represented by CSEA.

This year CSEA recognized 10 locals that were founded in 1957. These “Golden Locals” continue to be an important part of CSEA, New York’s Leading Union. The Golden Locals are, by region:

Southern Region: Mid-Hudson State Employees Local and New York State Police (Poughkeepsie – Troop K) Local;

Capital Region: New York State Police (Ray Brook – Troop B) Local, New York State Police (Loudonville – Troop G) Local and state Office of Children and Family Services Local;

Central Region: Black River Valley State Employees Local, St. Lawrence County Local and New York State Police (Sidney – Troop C) Local, SUNY College at Potsdam Local and;

Western Region: New York State Police (Batavia – Troop A) Local.

CSEA membership grew by more than 20,000 members under the presidency of John Powers, who served as CSEA president from 1953 to 1959.

Also in 1957 ...

- The Space Age begins with Russia’s launch of Sputnik I, the first Earth-orbiting satellite.
- President Dwight Eisenhower sends troops to Little Rock, Ark., to uphold the integration of a local high school after the state’s governor defies the order to integrate the school.
- Columbia University professor Charles Van Doren becomes a media sensation by winning $129,000 on the quiz show “Twenty One.”
- “Leave It to Beaver” premieres on CBS, ushering in an era of television shows that projected television’s ideal of America.

Workers rally for retiree denied health benefits

PERU — Nearly 100 North Country CSEA members demonstrated recently at the Peru School District because the district refused to pay retiree health benefits to a former co-worker who is battling cancer.

The employee, Ken LaMoy, a bus driver since 1991, was injured in a fall on the job in March. While treating him for his injuries, doctors also diagnosed LaMoy with bone cancer. He retired from the district Sept. 30 and applied for retiree health insurance under the union’s contract.

The district denied LaMoy’s application despite what CSEA called clear and plain contract language entitling him to coverage. The union filed a grievance charging the district violated LaMoy’s contractual right to health benefits in retirement.

CSEA Labor Relations Specialist Eny Pombrio said the issue is important to other CSEA-represented school employees in the area because they have similar contract language with respect to retiree health benefits.

“What good is a contract if they’re not going to follow it?” said Peru Central School CSEA Unit President Jeannette Cumber. “We work hard to get a fair agreement and when it is time to follow it, we have to fight every inch to get it honored for our members.”

“This is about much more than just a contract dispute,” said CSEA Capital Region President Kathy Garrison, who attended the demonstration.

LaMoy said he was touched by all the support he received.

“This has been great. There was a lot of support. People came in from all over,” he said. “It really showed (district officials) they needed to do some thinking about what they were trying to do to their employees.”

Holt-Baker assumes AFL-CIO office

WASHINGTON — Arlene Holt-Baker, the new executive vice president of the AFL-CIO, was on hand recently to pay tribute to her legendary predecessor, Linda Chavez-Thompson, at an emotional dinner during the annual Labor Council for Latin American Advancement conference in Washington, D.C.

Chavez-Thompson recently retired from the AFL-CIO after more than 40 years to the union movement. She plans to spend most of her time with her children and grandchildren.

Holt-Baker and Chavez-Thompson share much in common, including their longtime affiliation with the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME).

“I have great admiration and respect for Linda Chavez-Thompson,” said CSEA Metropolitan President George Boncoraglio. “As a labor leader and humanitarian she set the standard. Although she will be missed, we are also very proud to have another talented AFSCME sister assume this important role.”

As an organizer, international representative and eventually AFSCME’s international union area director in California, Holt-Baker helped public-sector workers win a voice at work and secure contracts with better wages and pay equity for women. She also was instrumental in AFSCME’s political programs, mobilizing union voters in national, state and local elections.

In 1995, Holt-Baker came to the AFL-CIO as an executive assistant to Chavez-Thompson, who was the federation’s first executive vice president after the AFL-CIO established the office that year. Most recently, Holt-Baker led the AFL-CIO’s Gulf Coast Recovery effort.

She is the first African American to be elected to one of the AFL-CIO’s top offices and event. “This is about common decency and compassion. We think it’s very sad that district officials chose to turn their backs on Mr. LaMoy in his time of need.”

The demonstration took place before a board of education meeting at which LaMoy’s grievance was heard. As The Work Force was going to press, CSEA was considering a settlement agreement offered by the district the day after the union’s demonstration.

LaMoy said he was touched by all the support he received.

“This has been great. There was a lot of support. People came in from all over,” he said. “It really showed (district officials) they needed to do some thinking about what they were trying to do to their employees.”

is the top ranking African American woman in the labor movement.

Chavez-Thompson joined AFSCME in San Antonio in 1971 as an assistant business agent. She was promoted to business agent, then appointed executive director of Local 2399, AFSCME’s San Antonio affiliate.

Chavez-Thompson was first elected a national vice president of AFSCME in 1988. In 1993, she became the first Hispanic woman elected to the AFL-CIO’s Executive Council.

Chavez-Thompson was later elected to the federation’s Executive Vice President office.

Voting Eligibility Date

Only CSEA members in good standing as of Dec. 1, 2007, will be eligible to vote in the election.

Break in membership affects eligibility for union office, voting privileges

A break in union membership status can have long-term future implications. Your membership status affects your eligibility with respect to:

- seeking or holding union office;
- signing nominating petitions for potential candidates;
- voting in union elections, and;
- voting on collective bargaining contracts.

Only members “in good standing” can participate in these activities. To be in “good standing,” your dues cannot be delinquent.

If you go on unpaid leave or for any other reason have a break in your employment status, your dues will not continue to be paid through payroll deductions. You must make arrangements to pay your dues directly to CSEA to continue your membership status. If you are either laid off or placed on leave without pay status due to becoming disabled by accident, illness, maternity or patriarchy, you may be eligible for dues-free membership status for a period not to exceed one year. If you are called up for active military duty you may also apply for dues-free status.

Note, however, you must continue to pay dues to run for office. Dues-free or gratuitous membership allows members to continue their insurance coverage while out of work. It does not protect your right to run for or hold office. This does not apply to members who are on leave due to being called up for military duty. Members on active military duty, upon return, are considered to have had continuous membership status for all CSEA election purposes.

Please notify the CSEA Membership Records Department at 1-800-342-4146, Ext. 1327, of any change in your status and what arrangements you are making to continue your membership in CSEA.
Keep your future clear and bright with EBF vision plans

Now that you have negotiated a CSEA Employee Benefit Fund vision plan into your contract, take the next step to ensure the quality and health of your eyes.

Just because you don’t wear glasses now doesn’t mean you’re immune to eye diseases and infections. Regular comprehensive eye exams can detect eye diseases that can lead to vision loss if left untreated. Adults with no known vision problems should have at least one exam between the ages of 20 and 39, and then every two to four years until they are age 65. After age 65, exams should be performed every one to two years.

People who wear glasses or contact lenses should have their eyes examined each year. Just like any other body organ eyes change over time, leading to many common eye conditions.

The most common problem is presbyopia, when the lens becomes less flexible, thus less able to focus clearly on nearby objects. Many people with presbyopia will require corrective lenses as their ability to focus declines.

A cataract occurs when there is a clouding of the lens; this can also cause blurry and/or double vision.

The cloudy, natural lens can be replaced with an artificial lens during surgery. Glaucoma is caused by pressure of the fluid in the eye. Long-term treatment with prescription eye drops is needed to prevent vision loss.

A less serious condition is floaters, which develop as the vitreous humor, the clear gel that fills the space between the lens and the retina of the eyeball, shrinks. These floaters give the appearance to the individual of floating hairs or flecks in the line of sight. These floaters can be moved by moving the eyes up and down or back and forth. Even though this is not a dangerous situation, a sudden onset of many floaters should be evaluated by an eye care professional to rule out any serious problems.

Every CSEA EBF vision plan includes a comprehensive eye exam at no charge through a participating provider. With the new changes to all vision plans in April, EBF also covers dilation at a provider’s office when professionally indicated.

Take the time now to protect your vision’s future and have your eyes examined. It’s quick, painless and will ensure your future will stay bright and clear.

November is annual option transfer period

The following information is intended for CSEA represented Executive Branch enrollees — enrollees employed by New York state covered by one of the CSEA collective bargaining agreements: Administrative Services Unit, Institutional Services Unit, Operational Services Unit or the Division of Military and Naval Affairs.

November is typically the Annual Option Transfer Period by contacting the health benefits administrator, usually located in their agency’s personnel office.

Agency health benefits administrators will receive a supply of Choices for 2008, your guide to NYSHIP health insurance options. If you are thinking about changing your option, read the plan description, which includes important information, including office visit and prescription drug co-payments for each of the health plans available in the area where you live and/or work.

Choices for 2008 can be a very important resource if you are contemplating changing your health insurance option. If you would like to review your options and the benefits available, you may obtain a copy of this guide from your health benefits administrator.

Another important resource during the option transfer period is the Rates & Deadlines Guide. As soon as the 2008 rates are approved, a Rates & Deadlines Guide will be sent to enrollees’ homes so you can make an informed decision about your health insurance choices for the 2008 plan year.

As always, enrollees will have 30 days from the date that the rate information is approved to make any changes. If you decide NOT to change your health insurance option, you do not have to take any action. If you wish to change health insurance options, you must submit a signed Health Insurance Transaction Form PS-804 to your agency’s Health Benefits Administrator by the deadline specified in the Rates & Deadlines Guide.

Pre-tax Contribution Program (PTCP)

The Pre-tax Contribution Program (PTCP) allows enrollees to have their health insurance premiums deducted from their pay before taxes are taken out. This may lower the taxable income and give the enrollee more spendable income. Enrollees were automatically enrolled in this program when they became eligible for health insurance, unless they declined to participate.

The enrollee pay stub shows whether the enrollee is enrolled in PTCP. Regular Before Tax Health will appear in the Before Tax Deductions column if your health insurance premium is deducted from your wages before taxes are withheld. Regular After Tax Health will appear in the After Tax Deductions column if your health insurance premium is deducted from your wages after taxes are withheld.

Under Internal Revenue Service rules, by participating in the PTCP enrollees may change their health insurance deduction during the tax year only after a PTCP qualifying event, such as a change in family status. More information on the PTCP is included in Choices for 2008.

If you wish to change your pre-tax election option, you must declare the health insurance premiums, you must see your health benefits administrator and complete a health insurance transaction form no later than Nov. 30, 2007. No action is needed if you wish to keep your current pre-tax option.

NYSHIP HMO offerings for 2008

Based on the annual review, NYSHIP approved HMO choices will remain consistent with the 2007 offerings, with one exception:

Aetna HMO: The enrollment freeze that was previously in place has been lifted and new participant enrollment into the HMO has been approved for the 2008 Plan Year.

HMO co-payments are not negotiated by CSEA; they are established by the HMO. Enrollees will be sent a side-by-side comparison from the HMO detailing any changes in benefits for 2008. Please pay particular attention to increases in Prescription Drug co-payment levels (retail & mail order). Contact your HMO for clarification of benefits and out-of-pocket expenses.

If you have any questions regarding your health benefits, please contact the CSEA Health Benefits Department at 518-785-4774 or 1-800-286-5242 (JCHB) or you may send an e-mail to healthben@cseeinc.org.

November 2007 THE WORK FORCE Page 17
Editor’s Note: In the early 1970s, two young doctors, Michael Wilkins and William Bronston at the Willowbrook state School for the Mentally Retarded on Staten Island, helped expose the inhumane conditions at the institution. Their actions ignited a public firestorm, sparked a landmark series of class action lawsuits, and forever changed the way individuals with developmental disabilities are treated in New York and beyond.

Wilkins and Bronston had to demonstrate enormous personal courage in standing up for what was right. They recently participated in interviews for the CSEA 100 History project sharing their stories in great detail. Some brief excerpts are offered here.

WF: Tell us about the conditions at Willowbrook when you first began working there?

Michael Wilkins: The circumstances were extremely adverse. The place was extremely crowded. It had been built for 2,700 individuals and 5,700 were living there. There would be large rooms, dayrooms where, in my building, 70 mentally retarded people would be congregated with nothing to do, just sitting. One or two or three at the most attendants to take care of these people. Common bathrooms with no privacy.

No inmate there — and I call them inmates because I believe it was more like a concentration camp or a prison than a health care facility — had any possessions that they could keep themselves. So they were just floating as human beings without any sense of identity. We were the doctors — that was the way this place was justified — they could be taken care of by doctors, but still the conditions there created chaos, and so there was no progressive medical care.

WF: Why did you stay and continue there?

Michael Wilkins: By hoping to make it better and realizing that you can’t do that without beginning to try to change the underlying conditions.

William Bronston: I began building relationships. Parents had never talked with the building doctors. I would sit with parents and they would begin to cry and I would begin to cry because the situation was untenable. I saw myself clearly as a guerrilla leader in there to put together whatever needed to be done to humanize that place.

WF: As your efforts began to attract more people, what was the response on the part of the administration?

Michael Wilkins: Well, it was very negative. The director of the institution, a fellow by the name of Dr. Jack Hammond, was invited to a meeting of the parents’ group and this was after Gov. Nelson Rockefeller had cut the budget at Willowbrook and there was a job freeze. So these parents were pretty hot and they insisted that Dr. Hammond take a public stand against the conditions at Willowbrook and he stood up and said I’m not going to do any such thing.

The following Monday, a memorandum was sent out to each and every employee, because several of us were at that meeting, saying that we couldn’t go to any more of the parent meetings. We disobeyed that memorandum and those of us who were not permanent employees were fired.

WF: So what happened after that?

Michael Wilkins: It just happened that I was a friend of this local newsman in New York named Geraldo Rivera and he was willing to go into the institution. Our view was this is a disaster…this isn’t to be kept under wraps and so he was trusting me that the conditions were bad. He later said, it was much worse than I had described.

William Bronston: So it was enormous press coverage. Geraldo and many others came to look at the carnage. Everybody in the world, congressmen, Senator Javits came. I mean everybody came because it was the place to be. What became clear to me was that the more we made Willowbrook wrong, the more we would lose this fight because there would have been this enormous commitment to fix what was wrong. There was no way to make Willowbrook OK.

The full interviews will shortly be available as part of CSEA’s official archives at the Genender Special Collections at the University at Albany.
CSEA Constitution, Bylaws unchanged, resolutions adopted

LAKE PLACID — Delegates to the union’s 97th annual meeting did not make any changes to the CSEA Constitution and By-Laws.

Delegates adopted the following resolutions:
• Opposed a tax on employer paid health plans;
• Urged the U.S. Senate to approve the Employee Free Choice Act which would strengthen the rights of employees to form unions and negotiate first contracts;
• Reaffirmed the union’s commitment to organizing the unorganized and honored those locals, units and members who have participated in that mission; and
• Renewed the union’s commitment to economic equality for women in New York state and across America.

Summary of September Board of Directors meetings

Editor’s Note: The Work Force publishes a summary of actions taken by CSEA’s Board of Directors. The summary is prepared by CSEA Statewide Secretary Barbara Reeves for union members.

ALBANY — CSEA’s statewide board of directors met on Sept. 27. In official business, the board:
• Authorized Unit 9250 of Local 861 to enter into a lease for office space at 67 West Buffalo St., Warsaw;
• Sanctioned contracts for the Central Region to hold a region conference at the Doubletree Hotel, Syracuse, on May 15, 16 and 17, 2008, and an installation picnic for local and unit presidents at the Emerson Park Pavilion, Auburn, on Aug. 2, 2009;
• Appointed Suzanne Smith to the Central Region Political Action Committee and Peter Collins to the Long Island Region Political Action Committee; and
• Placed into administration Saranac Central Schools Unit 810-6464-00 and Delaware Academy and Schools Unit 813-6613-00.

***

ALBANY — The statewide board of directors also met on Sept. 26. In official business, the board:
• Approved the 2007-2008 Budget, as amended; and
• Approved the 2007-2008 Capital Additions Budget, as printed.

Questions concerning the summary should be directed to CSEA Statewide Secretary Barbara Reeves, CSEA Headquarters, 143 Washington Ave., Albany, NY 12210 (518) 257-1253.

“FLOATING” HONOR — CSEA’s float in the Buffalo Labor Day Parade earned a first place award and a $100 prize for the third consecutive year.

NORTH ROCKLAND RATIFIES — Members of the North Rockland School District Unit in Rockland County recently overwhelmingly ratified a new four-year contract, which includes raises in each contract year, the addition of domestic partner coverage on health insurance and improvements in longevity payments. .

PORT WASHINGTON PEOPLES — Port Washington School District Unit activist Gerald Di Agostino, during a recent unit membership meeting, recruited 41 other unit members to the PEOPLE program, which protects and improves our jobs, benefits and pensions in Washington, Albany and in your community. Your support and participation in PEOPLE strengthens CSEA’s clout in the workplace, in the legislature, in your community and in the labor movement.

Veterans to be honored

HAUPPAUGE — All Long Island CSEA members are invited to honor those who served in the U.S. armed forces on Veterans Day on Sunday, Nov. 11.

At 9:30 a.m. that day, the Long Island Region Veterans Committee will hold a ceremony at Armed Forces Plaza, near the H. Lee Dennison Building, to pay tribute to all those who served in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines and Coast Guard.

“The committee invites everyone to attend,” said Maryann Phelps of SUNY Stony Brook Local 614, who chairs the committee. “Please join us in honoring the veterans.”

The committee is also inviting all CSEA members in Nassau and Suffolk counties to take part in its annual holiday drive for veterans who live at the Long Island State Veterans Home in Stony Brook and at the Veterans Affairs Hospital at Northport.

Donations of comb, toothbrushes, toothpaste, denture tablets, bar soap, shampoo, nail clippers, shaving cream, underwear, T-shirts, winter scarves and gloves, sweat shirts, sweat pants, lap blankets and postage stamps are being accepted.

The donations will be delivered to the veterans in mid-December.

“Help spread some holiday cheer to some of our ‘retired,’ and in many cases disabled, veterans who so proudly served their country,” said Phelps.

The deadline for dropping off donations at Long Island Region office at 3 Garel Place, Commack, is Monday, Dec. 3, 2007.

For more information or travel directions, call Phelps at (516) 971-4629.

Leaders of the Village of Greenport and Town of Shelter Island units of Suffolk Local 852 met at Greenport recently to hear CSEA Political Action Coordinator Gretchen Penn, rear, second from right, discuss the importance of political action, knowing the candidates and voting in every election. “Gretchen was a wealth of information,” said Kathleen Berezny, middle row, second from left, secretary of the Greenport Unit. Shown after the meeting at the village dock are, front row, left, Bob Marchica, president of the Greenport Unit, and, Region President Nick LaMorte, second row, left to right, Linda Cass, vice president of the Shelter Island Unit, Berezny, Bonnie Smith of Greenport and Beverly Pelleiter, secretary-treasurer of the Shelter Island Unit; rear row, from left, Jim Fogarty, Greenport vice president, Penn and Bill Walsh, Local 852 president.

Message from Long Island Region President Nick LaMorte

Time sure flies, doesn’t it? The November elections are already upon us and even though there are no national races to be concerned with, there are a variety of local elections that are very important to us here on Long Island. There are town supervisor and council races to be decided, county legislative contests are up for grabs in both Nassau and Suffolk, and assorted judgeships are on the line as well.

The local elections traditionally take place in an “off-year,” that being the odd numbered year between each presidential or congressional election, but they are no less important than their more notable counterparts precisely because of the fact that the officials who will be elected this year are closer to the people than those on the national level.

For instance, it’s quite possible that the candidate for town council will ring your doorbell and speak to you personally in an effort to get your vote. Likewise, county legislative candidates commonly pound the pavement in advance of Election Day just to meet the people they wish to represent. Thinking back to last year, I don’t recall Chuck Schumer or Peter King knocking on my door to ask for my vote.

So you see where I’m going with this: It’s important that you cast an informed ballot on Election Day for pro-labor candidates. To that end, CSEA recently conducted interviews with all the candidates to determine which of them hold positions most friendly to labor. We have endorsed candidates in almost every race based on the information gathered through this process and urge you take this into consideration before you go to the polls.

We have the unique opportunity as public employees to retain or terminate our boss during this local election cycle. You can protect your jobs and benefits by voting for the CSEA endorsed candidates. It’s not the party, it’s the person. Both sides have wronged us at times; that’s why we vote pro-labor.

Voting is both a right and a privilege, one that should be exercised at every opportunity. Election Day is Nov. 6 and the polls are close to your homes and open from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. If things go our way on Election Day, the legislative process that follows is more likely to favor our pro-labor positions.

So don’t be fooled by the term “off-year.” This year’s elections are as important as any other. Do your civic duty: get out and vote!

Yours in solidarity,

Nick LaMorte, president
Long Island Region
A Q&A with Bob Rauff, president, Oyster Bay Local 881

The Long Island Reporter had the opportunity to speak with Bob Rauff, the recently installed president of Local 881, which represents 1,100 employees of the town of Oyster Bay. The discussion revealed the scope of his skills in labor relations, the depth of his participation in CSEA affairs and insight into his vision for the future of Local 881.

LIR: What are some of your ideas on how to involve more of the membership in union activities? How do people benefit from union membership?

Rauff: Some of our ideas here in Local 881 are to create better communication through our public relations committee, which involves all our shop stewards and officers. We have a “bulletin board” committee that goes out and makes sure all CSEA information — state, region and local — is posted. This information, once disseminated, enables the rank and file to realize how union involvement makes us stronger as a whole and demonstrates the union’s worth. It reveals how solidarity benefits the people we work for and the people we serve. People benefit from union membership through collective bargaining, which serves to secure and improve pensions, health benefits and job security.

LIR: Your local has been very successful with contract negotiations in the town of Oyster Bay. What strategies or techniques have you applied to achieve this outcome?

Rauff: The main strategy has been to foster a positive and productive relationship with our past and present town supervisors. John Venditto is the current supervisor and is now in his third term. During his tenure we’ve negotiated some of the best contracts in the state. Our communication with the membership puts us in a better position to make them aware of how important it is that Mr. Venditto and the town board consistently vote positively on labor issues. The free flow of ideas is key that underlies these decisions.

LIR: Do you think there is a need for greater communication between the various locals in the Long Island Region? How could this be accomplished?

LIR: Education & Training Committee, what do you see as its primary goal and how can it affect the overall mission of CSEA?

Rauff: We’ve made a concerted effort to reach out to the presidents of units and locals in the Long Island Region to find out where they’re at and ascertain their needs. We’ve utilized ASCONE and CSEA online training and in last two years the Long Island Federation of Labor has provided workshops out of SUNY Farmingdale on health care, pensions and the negotiation of contracts. We communicate in myriad ways to make sure we get our message out to the members. Nick LaMorte and (CSEA Education & Training Department staff) Eric Muldoon and Sharon Lowelly-Hall have been integral to the success of the region’s education & training committee. On the state level, Sharon is sensitive to our needs and does her best to meet them. Local 881 has recently become a training site for all CSEA members.

LIR: What other committees do you serve on? How do they fit into the scheme of things at CSEA?

LIR: We serve on the local, region and state political action committees and this fits into the scheme of things because it provides an understanding of key issues on every level, which allows for informed endorsements of politicians who are friendly to labor. I’m also involved in all the committees at Local 881, but in more of an oversight position. On the region level, I’m involved with the Membership Action Team, which allows me to see what goes on in other locals and units and how to communicate with this approach we see if our methods can be utilized elsewhere. We’re always relying to help other locals and units better understand labor issues. With the region Constitution & By-Laws Committee, helps to change local and statewide constitutional amendments and advocate for the changes we want to implement. Gary Steckler of Local 880 is the chair of the regional Constitution & By-Laws Committee and he does a great job. He helps us write and understand the changes, along with Nick LaMorte. I’m the statewide chair of the Convention Committee, which has become more intense as the years go on, primarily because it has become more active in helping to design and determine the convention’s many logistical aspects. I’m also on the statewide Resolutions Committee, where we redraft resolutions brought forward by other locals. And, as Federal Political Action Liaison to U.S. Rep. Peter King, I constantly initiate dialogue to help him understand our view of various labor issues, which is a tough task because he’s not too friendly to labor.

LIR: How would you characterize the role of a local president? What do you want to accomplish as you move forward with Local 881?

Rauff: As president of Local 881, I’m in a different role and the members know the various ways we can foster their understanding of exactly what labor is and give them a sense of how important compromise is to the process of contract negotiations. We would rather compromise than fight here in Oyster Bay and that strategy has proven beneficial, which is evidenced by our string of successful negotiations. Moving forward, we want to bring more of the union to the members. We want to communicate our desire to make CSEA the strongest union in the state and the country.

LIR: Differentiate between the function of the region, the local and the unit. How can the three entities interact to best serve the membership?

Rauff: We’re all on the same team, striving for the same goals. All three entities must work in tandem to most efficiently serve the membership. The free flow of ideas should be encouraged to strengthen solidarity. My involvement with the region committees provides a unique perspective on the problems facing other locals and units and serves as a springboard to solve similar problems that may be affecting the members of Local 881.

LIR: How can your role as Long Island Federation of Labor vice president be of value to Local 881 and the CSEA Long Island Region?

Rauff: The education they supply provides the impetus for us to conceive of diverse ideas, utilize these ideas at Local 881, and suggest these options to other union leaders.
Ongoing negotiations addressed at Local 865 Levittown unit meeting

LEVITTOWN — Limited progress at the bargaining table was the message the negotiators for the Levittown School District Unit of Nassau Educational Local 865 brought to a large turnout of members at the Abby Lane School on Sept. 24.

The meeting began in the school’s auditorium, with Levittown School District Unit President Roger DeGroff discussing items that were on the table in the ongoing talks between the school board and CSEA.

Because of problems with the air conditioning, the meeting moved to the school board room with 100 unit members present. The unit has 600 members who work as teacher aides, clerical employees and maintenance, grounds and custodial workers and is the Nassau Educational Local’s largest unit.

Jim Della Rocca, the CSEA labor relations specialist who works with the unit, told the Levittown members that the negotiators had met with the board several times for a total of seven or eight hours. The tone was cordial, but not much progress had been made.

"Where we're at; we're not anywhere," he said.

After settling with the teachers’ union in the district, the school board made a considerably lower offer to CSEA. "We know what the teachers got," Della Rocca said. "We don’t know why the board offered us what they did."

DeGroff, a member of the negotiating team, said the union was upset with the board’s inferior offer.

"This is a great district, a great place to work, but the board didn’t treat us fairly," he said.

Many unit members raised questions and commented from the floor. One hoped the district would make a reasonable proposal that the negotiators could bring to the membership for a vote. "The longer this goes on, it’s bad for morale," she said.

The other negotiators for the unit are its other officers: Denis Carroll, 1st vice president; Mike Murphy, 2nd vice president; Maryann Churchill, 3rd vice president, and Mike Gunn, treasurer.

Right, a member raises a question for the negotiators.

English for Speakers of Other Languages graduates
CSEA members graduating from the first English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) course at the State University of New York at Stony Brook hold certificates at recent ceremonies. The course, set up by the Local 614 and the New York State/CSEA Partnership for Education and Training, created a curriculum that addresses work and daily life situations. The course was created to meet the needs of the growing number of Stony Brook employees who are not native English speakers. “As CSEA leaders, it is our responsibility to keep the American dream alive for all our members,” said Local President Carlos Speight, rear left. Long Island Region President Nick LaMorte, rear, fifth from left, joins graduates, Partnership staff and local leaders at the ceremony.

Local 881 Executive Board meeting
OYSTER BAY — The Local 881 Executive Board named shop stewards and committee chairs at its Oct. 11 meeting.

The board meeting was the first chaired by President Bobby Rauff, who took office in August.

Named shop stewards are Sal Cecere, Highway; Pat Davino and Jarvis Brown, Sanitation; Roger Zimmerman, Parks; Brian Hintzel, Recycling; Terry Wufofa, Comptroller; Danny Renes, Central Vehicle Maintenance; Sam Ciucia, Public Safety; Terry Boryk, Public Works; Bridg Hand, Inter-Governmental Affairs; Frank Calguri, Solid Waste, and Aldona Lawson, Environmental Resources. Other officers of the Local are Alex Bard, executive vice president; Gene Fallica, 1st vice president; Danny Hess, 2nd vice president; Josephine Matcha, 3rd vice president; Jon Klein, treasurer, and Barbara Huben, recording secretary.

The local’s committees are Audit, chaired by Zimmerman; Education & Training, Rauff; Grievance Board, Davino; Grievance Screening, Fallica; Health and Safety, Zimmerman; Membership, Bard; Non-Discrimination and Anti-Harassment, Boryk; Political Action, Rauff and Bard; Resolutions, Hess, and Social, Boryk and Fallica.

Two new committees have been established — PEOPLE, chaired by Calguri, and the Scholarship Committee, which is honoring the late Bette James, former 2nd vice president of the local, this year; Klein serves as the chair.

Retiree plans to keep busy
GREENPORT — Janet Staples, registrar of the Village of Greenport, is retiring after 30 years of service to the community.

Staples, who served as treasurer of the Village of Greenport Unit of Suffolk Local 852, was honored by members at a party on Oct. 17.

“She wants to visit her grandchildren, who live in Maine,” said Kathleen Berzney, unit secretary. “She loves to work outside. She has a beautiful garden—beautiful flowers. She’s an avid reader and now she’ll be able to keep up with the bestsellers and travel and enjoy her husband and family.”

CSEA members reach out to the community

EAST MEADOW — As a union of mostly government employees, CSEA members serve the public. As individuals, CSEA members reach out to strengthen the ties with those they serve.

Members of the Port Washington Unit of Nassau Educational Local 865 play an important part in the annual Pride in Port celebration sponsored by civic organizations in Port Washington, held this year on Oct. 6.

And, Steve Cuomo, president of the Village of Floral Park Unit of Nassau Municipal Employees Local 882, could take particular pride watching runners from the Rolling Thunder Special Needs Program compete in the five-kilometer National Disability Championship Meet for people with developmental and physical challenges on Oct. 7.

Cuomo started the program.

CSEA shows “Pride in Port”

This year, more than 50 members of the 76-member Port Washington School District Unit participated in the Pride in Port festivities. “Our members met up early in the morning to help assemble decorations and get the music ready,” said Rich Acevedo, president of the custodial, maintenance and transportation employees unit. “Our participating in the Pride in Port parade was a success.”

After the parade, the unit hosted a lunch for its members, their families and friends.

Unit vice president Monte Vare and Acevedo are members of the planning committee, which meets from November until the week before the Oct. 8 parade. They also chair the annual fund-raiser held on the evening of the parade. Several CSEA locals contributed gifts to the fund-raiser, which raised $1,400 for the Children’s Health Fund. The fund buys and equips mobile hospitals that serve needy children.

The mobile hospitals are now treating children in New Orleans and Mississippi who were victims of Hurricane Katrina, as well as children on Long Island.

The unit also presents scholarships to students in the school district they serve. Recently, $500 scholarships were presented to two graduating students, with nearly all members participating through support of unit fund-raising activities during the year. “This was the second year the scholarships were awarded,” said Jerry D’Agostino, scholarship committee chair. “These are two good kids who work hard and we’re proud to help them pay for their education.”

Summing up the unit’s contributions to its community, Acevedo said, “We feel this is about giving to our community, which we love and care so much about.”

Local 865 President Monica Berkowitz is a strong backer of the unit’s efforts. “They really go all out,” said Berkowitz. “The unit builds a stronger community and shows how CSEA supports involvement in the community.”

“I saw him get confidence, self-esteem, and respect from the kids on the team, and I thought to myself that Steve’s not the only one — there have to be other children like him with this kind of talent,” the elder Cuomo said.

Rolling Thunder started with 15 youngsters in 1996, and now has 150 members. The group includes a member who is blind, several who use wheelchairs, as well as siblings of children with disabilities. At least five of the athletes have relatives who belong to CSEA.

Dozens of young people took part in the five-kilometer meet on Oct. 7 at Sunken Meadow State Park. Rolling Thunder members have run in the New York City and Long Island and other marathons.

The Long Island Region is a sponsor of Rolling Thunder. “CSEA is proud to be associated with a group that does so much for people with special challenges,” said Region President Nick LaMorte. “When they cross the finish line, we are cheering them on.”

Message from CSEA Local 830 President Jerry Laricchiuta

Local 830: Fiscally Strong in ’07-’08

I want to take this time to report to you, our members, on the financial health of CSEA Nassau Local 830. This is the most appropriate time of year to do so since our fiscal year ends on Sept. 30 of each year. Our new budget has been brought to our executive board and was passed on Sept. 27, 2007. I am proud to once again propose a budget that was on time and very healthy.

When I say healthy, I really mean that we were able to present a budget that is balanced. For the second year in a row, Local 830 has worked very hard to ensure that we remain fiscally prudent. There is no need to bore you with all the details, but I can summarize some of the most important aspects of our 2007 and 2008 budgets.

Beginning in fiscal year 2007, I presented a budget to our executive board that halted spending practices which clearly rose above our cash intake. Basically, that practice of spending more than you take in equates to what is known as a deficit budget. Payroll costs had exponentially risen to the point where our staff was costing the local over a third of all our income. I had to make many tough decisions early on and I did. As a result of those decisions, we were able to cut almost $200,000 per year off of our payroll. I also instituted a new policy as to time accruals for paid staff, effectively lowering our future liability for those who were employed by the union.

Today, Local 830 is budgeted for all expenses for the next 12 months. This includes unit rebates not yet paid out and all paid staff termination payouts. These last two factors are a vast improvement in the manner in which our local budgets for the future. In my opinion, Local 830 is now more solvent and financially healthy than ever before. There should be no surprises unless an issue comes up that is totally out of the realm of standard day-to-day operations. Our members deserve to have their union dues spent in a responsible way.

Our members deserve to have their union dues spent in a responsible way. It is also extremely important that union leaders plan and prepare for the future of the local. I believe my administration has done just that. We have worked hard to turn the financial health of this local around and we have succeeded.

Let’s also take a look at some other important issues in which your local is involved. As you may know, County Executive Tom Suozzi is big on consolidation. On the other hand, I am not. Consolidation can make sense in some areas of county government, but not in others. There is no need to consolidate just for the sake of consolidation. Suozzi’s plan to merge together our police maintenance unit with our DPW unit is just that kind of a move. When I spoke recently at the county legislature to oppose the plan, I specifically asked county officials to show the savings in dollars. They could not, and they actually stated on the record that there were ‘no savings in this plan.’ I believe that this will be the reason why the legislature will not approve of that move.

The county also is interested in consolidating our county parks into the towns of Oyster Bay, North Hempstead and Hempstead. We oppose such a move for many reasons. Sticking strictly to the labor points, we simply want county workers to keep their county positions. Stop giving away our real estate and our jobs. No unit in Nassau County has taken a bigger hit than Rec and Parks when it comes to a loss in staff. When at one time Nassau County was known around the country for having some of the most beautiful parks in the United States, we are digressing into a county which might have only one park left for its residents should this plan go through. That is not only ridiculous and wrong; it’s embarrassing.

Despite some contention between CSEA and Nassau County over staffing issues, I am pleased to announce that for the first time in several years, this year the Nassau County police department was able to absorb all its CSEA members.

$2.5 Billion County Budget on Tap for 2008

CSEA Battling for Fair Contract While Fighting Off Departmental Mergers

CSEA Battling for Fair Contract While Fighting Off Departmental Mergers

MINOLA — On Sept. 17, Nassau County Executive Tom Suozzi announced his 2008 budget totaling $2.5 billion that does not include a property tax increase for the fifth consecutive year. There was a 1.9 percent spending increase, a total of $52 million.

Suozzi mentioned “changing the culture in labor contracts in Nassau County,” as a means of controlling the budget. “We can’t give the same increases that were given under prior administrations,” Suozzi said at the press conference announcing his budget.

The county claims to have set a precedent with the new Police Benevolent Association (PBA) contract in July that established a pattern of below-inflation wage growth.

With CSEA Local 830’s contract for its 7,000 county employees expiring at the end of the year, President Jerry Larchiuta is confident about how the constant contract talks have been going with the county. “We are meeting with the county on a consistent basis, and are starting to make some progress,” he said. “Our main effort here is to keep our members’ benefits.”

The county is also looking for many ways to generate revenue, which could be a help to CSEA’s desire to reach a fair contract settlement. Ideas such as cigarette tax, red-light cameras, and uniform filing fees are all in the works and have to be approved by state lawmakers.

There is also a new county plan of selling naming rights to prominent public facilities that could take in around $4.5 million annually.

However, there are plans to save money that CSEA does not favor, including departmental mergers. The impending merge of the Police Department’s Fleet Services Maintenance Unit with the Department of Public Works is now at the forefront.

At an Oct. 3 legislative meeting, DPW Commissioner Ray Ribeiro presented the merger proposal, but did not quantify how much money this might save, which left legislators such as Dave Denenberg and Fran Becker scratching their heads.

Larchiuta said this merger would create morale problems and would really not save any money. He is sure that these changes must be negotiated. “How are you going to tell two mechanics working side by side but on different pay scales that they should be doing the same job?” he said in the Sept. 23 Newsday. This is a plan that CSEA will be keeping a close eye on and will continue to address in the legislature.

CSEA will continue to fight hard for a fair contract, as well as battling to prevent department mergers that will have an adverse effect on the CSEA membership.

Consolidation Begins

Four Sewer Districts to Merge with Nassau County

LAWRENCE — At a Sept. 26 press conference at the Lawrence Sewage Treatment Plant, Nassau County Executive Tom Suozzi announced that four municipalities — the villages of Cedarhurst and Lawrence, and the cities of Glen Cove and Long Beach — have agreed to consolidate their sewage operations with those of Nassau County.

CSEA opposes the plan.

The Nassau County Legislature and the four municipal boards must still approve the county’s takeover by mid-November. If this was to go through, the workers employed at the municipal facilities will become Nassau County employees. However, that won’t take place until 2011 because there first needs to be building and implementation of new pumps at the facilities.

Suozzi ensured that “no one will lose their jobs as a result of this merger.” However, CSEA is working to ensure the workers’ prior service credit and residency issues are taken care of so they have no problems when they transfer to the county work force.

Nassau County treats 85 percent of the county’s sewage, and after this agreement that number would rise to 93 percent. Suozzi said he will next look to acquiring Great Neck, and Port Washington, which could be an issue as that additional waste would be forwarded to Nassau County’s Cedar Creek Sewage Plant in Wantagh.

About 160 CSEA members work at that plant, which is close to its waste capacity, Nassau County legislator Dennis Dunne said.

CSEA will closely monitor any future mergers, as well as the logistics of this impending situation.
NUMC Employee Events Build Morale

EAST MEADOW—Nassau University Medical Center had its annual Employee Recognition Barbecue outside the cafeteria, as well as its annual Golf Outing at Eisenhower Park’s Red Course Sept. 17. CSEA Local 830 President Jerry Larchiclitza was honored at the Golf Outing along with Nassau Health Care Corp. CEO Art Gianelli, for their great collective work in restoring NUMC back to strong financial status. More than 100 people attended the golf outing and dinner that followed at the Carthage on the Park restaurant.

The Employee Recognition Barbecue was extremely well attended as always, and Larchiclitza, Gianelli and many members of the local and NUMC staff were behind the grill serving the employees. With a disc jockey dancing, cotton candy station and much more, it was certainly a great time for all.

Police Department’s Custodians and Laborers Go Above and Beyond

MINEOLA — The Nassau County Police Department headquarters and precincts throughout the county are often located as very clean and top-of-the-line buildings, with police department events always well equipped and organized.

These things would not be possible without the hard work of 32 employees of the Nassau County Police Department laborers and custodial staff, who are members of CSEA Local 830. Out of the 32 employees, nine work in police headquarters in Mineola and the other 23 are spread between the department’s eight precincts.

Mike Ratti and Jake Heath are the laborer supervisors at headquarters and oversee many different responsibilities that their crew must take care of daily, ranging from the normal plumbing, electrical, and landscaping duties to cleaning holding cells.

Despite all this, the county executive has proposed an idea to merge these workers into the Department of Public Works, which CSEA opposes.

The laborers also help prepare facilities for press conferences and other events involving the police commissioner and county executive. The laborers even have a hand in catering, towing the canien trailer to provide food at the events.

What most might not realize is the importance of their jobs, as these workers are subject to confidential material and different work environments not found outside the Police Department, including classified documents, confiscated guns, loaded firearms, various biological hazards and prisoners. They also work alongside police officers daily.

The crew also remains flexible while being deployed to the Emergency Ambulance Bureau, Crimes Against Property Squad in Westbury, and Safety Town at Eisenhower Park.

The proposed merger would cause some issues such as the “flex time” agreement that was instituted four years ago. These Police Department employees were also screened, drug tested, interviewed, and given security clearance for that specific position.

“This is an issue we believe would need to be negotiated,” Local 830 President Jerry Larchiclitza said. A letter from the staff to the county executive and police commissioner said, “We want our jobs that we applied for.”

Among the nine-member crew at headquarters, there is collectively nearly 200 years of experience. The workers have spent most of those years together, which speaks to the great camaraderie between themselves and the officers, said CSEA Police Unit President Debra Imperatore, who has been around this crew for 17 years.

“They are one of the most cohesive and unified group of guys I have ever been around.”

Breast Imaging Center Gets Award

When you spend most of your workday and pasting by your coworkers on your way to your next task, you may not get to know them as well as you might like.

But Nassau University Medical Center registered nurse Blanka Petrovic was determined to build some camaraderie among her colleagues at the hospital’s Breast Imaging Center.

She planned on Sept. 15 – 16 getaway for 18 women, all either current or retired CSEA Local 830 members employed in the center, including technologists, clerks and nurses.

They met during the afternoon of Sept. 15, at the quaint harbor village of Port Jefferson and enjoyed an evening of fun at Clambroth on the Sound. The group was picked up by Vintage Tours, which provided a personalized and unique glimpse of New York.

A highlight event was a picnic lunch with one final stop at a local farm stand, providing an opportunity to sample local desserts.

“I believe that when we enrich our lives, we enrich lives of people around us,” Petrovic said. “Coming back to work on Monday felt different. Instead of a stressful place, it felt more like a place where people are united and happy.”

In addition, congratulations to the staff of the Breast Health Center on being selected as the NUMC department to receive the 2007 3rd quarter Spotlight Award.

ATTENTION!
PROSTATE CANCER SCREENINGS

Effective: Aug. 2, 2007

Any county employee is entitled to a paid leave of absence for a period of four hours per year to undertake screening for prostate cancer. This law allows the employee to have the procedure done by any doctor of their choice.

- This leave is not cumulative and cannot be carried over.
- Any leave not taken by Dec. 31 is considered lost.
- The four hour per calendar year benefit may be taken in two-two-hour leaves per year.
- Travel time is included in the four-hour allotment.
- Any employee who used four hours of leave before to Aug. 2 is not entitled to have that leave considered paid leave.

Quick Hits

An agreement has been reached between CSEA and the county for increased security at Cedar Creek Sewage Plant. Nassau County Public Safety will now be in charge of security 24 hours a day, 7 days a week from the old gatehouse which monitors parkland in the rear of the facility. Previously this area was manned by Cedar Creek employees. There is now an agreement for a new gatehouse at the entrance of the facility manned by Cedar Creek employees during day hours from 6 a.m. to 5 p.m., and monitored by a swipe card system at night.

The Nassau court officers union, named the Court Benevolent Association of Nassau County, won a restraining order Sept. 19 blocking the implementation of 10,000-square-foot modules on a parking lot south of 400 County Seat Drive, which would be for probation officers. This was done as a safety precaution with the court officers union saying parking in the area is already at a premium. However, the week of October 8, the case went back to court and a settlement was reached. The process of putting in the modules began the week of October 15.

Veterans Corner

By the CSEA Veterans Committee

With Veterans Day coming up on Nov. 11 and the holidays just around the corner, there are plenty of events and activities for local veterans going on in Nassau County. Nassau County will host a Homeless Veterans Stand Down for its residents Nov. 19 at the New York State Armory on Babylon Tumpilke in Freeport from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. There will be free haircuts, HIV screening and other medical service, showers and clean underwear and socks. A food pantry and clothes closet is provided, and veterans will have a chance to talk to service providers from federal, state, county and private agencies.

CSEA members from the Nassau County Parks, Recreation, and Museums Department are planning a holiday party for children of Nassau County families serving on active duty. Anyone who would like to help out can call Cindy Gilen at 572-0396.

Edward G. Aulman, the director of Veterans Services in Nassau County, also announced the county would be the first in the state to receive the names and addresses of all veterans discharged since Sept. 11, 2001. With proper safeguards in place, Nassau County will be able to do direct outreach to the estimated 4,500 veterans who have served since Sept. 11, 2001.

Any veteran in need of a job may be in luck, as the New York Institute of Technology Old Westbury and the MTA New York City Transit are looking to hire veterans. The jobs at NYIT include tuition, and starting salary at the MTA is $18 per hour and increases to up to $27 per hour after 36 months.

For military retirees who have been reluctant to file for disability, a program called Combat Related Special Compensation has been created, so retirees with a 10 percent or more Veterans Affairs rated disability can apply for it by calling (866) 281-3254. Remember, we are still collecting DVD and VHS movies for those deployed abroad, as well as non-perishable food and personal care items for homeless veterans. They can be dropped off to Debbie O’Connell at the CSEA Local 830 office at 400 County Seat Drive in Mineola.

This Month From

“Talkin’ Labor with Local 830”

CSEA Local 830, as always, welcomed many great guests into the local’s studios this month. First, Village of Massapequa Park Mayor James Altadonna Jr. came in to discuss his job and the way he works with the 30 CSEA members employed by the village.

Also, Rich Nicoletto from the county’s 9th Legislative District became the 17th of the 19 Nassau County legislators to make an appearance on the show.

State Sen. Kemp Hannon offered a very informational show about health care as a whole, as well as CSEA members employed at Nassau University Medical Center and A. Holly Patterson. Hannon, an 18-year senator, is the chair of the senate Health Committee.

You can listen to all of these shows, and many others by logging onto www.csea830.org/pages/talkinlabor.htm.

A Message From Long Island Region President Nick LaMorte

Election Day is Right Around the Corner – Don’t forget to Vote!

Time sure flies, doesn’t it? The November elections are already upon us and even though there are no national races to be concerned with, there are a variety of local elections that are very important to us here on Long Island. There are town supervisor and council races to be decided, county legislative contests are up for grabs in both Nassau and Suffolk, and assorted judgeships are on the line as well.

The local elections traditionally take place in an “off-year,” that being the odd numbered year between each presidential or congressional election, but they are no less important than their more notable counterparts precisely because of the fact that the officials who will be elected this year are closer to the people than those on the national level.

For instance, it’s quite possible that the candidate for town council will ring your doorbell and speak to you personally in an effort to get your vote. Likewise, county legislative candidates commonly pound the pavement in advance of Election Day just to meet the people they wish to represent. Thinking back to last year, I don’t recall Chuck Schumer or Peter King knocking on my door to ask for my vote.

So you see where I’m going with this: It’s important that you cast an informed ballot on Election Day for pro-labor candidates. To that end, CSEA recently conducted interviews with all the candidates to determine which of them hold positions most friendly to labor. We have endorsed candidates in almost every race based on the information gathered through this process and urge you take this into consideration before you go to the polls.

We have the unique opportunity as public employees to retain or terminate our boss during this local election cycle. You can protect your jobs and benefits by voting for the CSEA endorsed candidates. It’s not the party; it’s the person. Both sides have wronged us at times; that’s why we vote pro-labor.

Voting is both a right and a privilege, one that should be exercised at every opportunity. Election Day is Nov. 6 and the polls are close to your homes and open from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. If things go our way on Election Day, the legislative process that follows is more likely to favor our pro-labor positions.

So don’t be fooled by the term “off-year.” This year’s elections are as important as any other. Do your civic duty: get out and vote!

Yours in solidarity,

Nick LaMorte, president
