Required Courses To Be Proposed

by Ann Smith
New degree requirements may be set for SUNY Albany's College of Education next fall. A new academic year will start in January, 1975, and the new requirements will be in effect for the Fall 1975 semester.

The new degree requirements include four courses: English 101, English 102, Psychology 101, and Sociology 101.

The new requirements are intended to be more rigorous than the current requirements, which include only three courses: English 101, English 102, and Psychology 101.

The new requirements will be mandatory for all students majoring in the College of Education, and will be in effect for the Fall 1975 semester.

Gymnastics Cop Two Easy Wins

by Karen Cline
The women's gymnastics team was defeated by the University of Michigan 179.5-169.5 in a meet that was held on Monday night.

The meet consisted of five events: vault, uneven bars, balance beam, floor exercise, and team competition. The team scored 169.5 in the meet, while Michigan scored 179.5.

The team's best event was the floor exercise, where they scored 49.0. Their next best event was the balance beam, where they scored 48.5.

The team's worst event was the vault, where they scored 48.0. Their next worst event was the beam, where they scored 47.5.

Science Research Delays WCDB

by Thomas Maretic
The WCDB will not begin scheduled broadcasting on the first day of the semester, due to a delay in the licensing process.

The WCDB was granted a license by the Federal Communications Commission on September 20th, 1974, but the station has yet to receive the necessary equipment and permission from the FCC to begin broadcasting.

The station was expected to begin broadcasting on October 1st, but due to the delay in obtaining the necessary equipment and permission, the station will not be able to begin broadcasting until the end of October.

SA Student Allience Pickets Legislative Bill

by J.M. Boll
More than 50 SUNY students and community members picketed on the SUNY Albany campus on Wednesday afternoon to protest the proposed Legislative Bill 1A.

The Legislative Bill 1A, sponsored by [Senator/Representative's Name], would allow for the creation of a special legislative session to be held this fall, which would allow for the consideration of the SUNY Albany campus budget.

The students and community members were calling for the end of the special legislative session, which they believed was unnecessary and would only serve to delay the budget process.

The picketing was peaceful, with participants holding signs and chanting slogans. The event was organized by the SUNY Albany Student Union.

The protesters were demanding that the special legislative session be canceled, and that the budget process be handled through the normal channels.

The protest was a response to the legislative session that was called by the State Legislature in order to consider the SUNY Albany campus budget.

The protesters were concerned about the potential for the special legislative session to be used as a means of delaying the budget process, and they believed that the session was unnecessary and would only serve to delay important decisions.

SA Legal Services Program Begins to Develop

According to personnel at the Legal Services Program, 16 have been followed up and "in addition to the type of housing issues, many are dealing with family issues. It's been a good showing. We've had 16 in a year," said Laura Rottman, director of the program.

The program is a joint venture of 10 law firms and 16 legal aid organizations. The program is designed to help low-income families and individuals with legal problems.

A number of the cases have involved family law issues, such as child support and custody disputes. Others have involved housing issues, such as evictions and Section 8 housing assistance.

The program is funded through a grant from the Legal Services Corporation, a federal agency that provides grants to legal aid organizations across the country.

NYPIRG Holds Conference Here

by Susan Vannin

Saturday's approximately 4,000 NYPIRG representation from around New York State was held at SUNY Upstate in the College Union building. The conference was held to discuss issues of concern to NYPIRG members and to provide a forum for the exchange of ideas and information.

The conference featured a variety of speakers and workshops, including discussions on environmental issues, consumer protection, and public policy. The keynote speaker was NYPIRG President, who provided an overview of the organization's work and its goals for the future.

NYPIRG is a non-profit organization that works to promote environmental, consumer, and government accountability. The organization was founded in 1975 and has been active in many areas of advocacy, including clean air, clean water, clean energy, and fair trade.

Through its various campaigns and programs, NYPIRG has achieved significant victories for consumers and the environment. The organization has played a key role in the passage of major environmental and consumer protection legislation in New York State.

Fields Involved in Controversy

By Jerry Mikowski

Former SUNYA President Emmett Fields, who left in August to assume the presidency of Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., has been embroiled in a controversy over the participation of South Africa in the Davis Cup Tennis matches to be held at Vanderbilt March 15-18.

The NAACP has put pressure on Vanderbilt to halt South Africa's participation in the matches because of the country's policy of apartheid or racial segregation.

Fields' office, also repeated phone calls, said he was unavailable for comment, but Vanderbilt Director of Public Information Jan Blesch said "there is no question" that South Africa will not be excluded from the matches.

Fields and Vanderbilt Chancellor Alexander Ross said the nation was not able to attend the NAACP's annual "Negro Business" meeting for "its own state's policy of apartheid," according to the NAACP.

Negotiations Meeting

A New York spokesman for the NAACP, Dennis Vanish, said yesterday that NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks has met with Fields repeatedly to negotiate the issue.

"The reports from Hooks are that it was an easy and it was an easy and it was an easy meeting," he said.

Earlier this week, the NAACP called for a demonstration at the matches and it was later canceled.

"The matches should be cancelled," said Vanish, adding that it was a "very strong position."

You Smoke, Stupid?

Sam Godfrey, the "K" in M-G-M had been putting on an all-out campaign for the health of his employees. He decided to approach each of them and offer them a choice: quit smoking or lose their job. Naturally, most employees refused. His secretary commented wryly that Godfrey "thought he could blackmail them at gunpoint! If you're stupid, that's your business."

The comment was interpreted and interpreted as a way of making the employees quit smoking without the threat of losing their jobs. The result was a marked decrease in smoking among the employees.

Adapted from David Klas's Hollywood

During last Sunday's David Strobel show, one of the truly remarkable phenomena of our time was brought to light: stupid people. Settling in for their usual dose of inanity, many of the audience members were taken aback by the realization that they were actually enjoying their time.

Of course, we all know that stupid people are a common occurrence in today's society. However, what was truly remarkable about this particular show was the way in which the host managed to make even the most intellectually challenged members of the audience laugh.

The host, David Strobel, is a master of sarcasm and absurdity. His ability to turn even the most mundane topics into something funny and entertaining is nothing short of remarkable. Despite the fact that many of the audience members were not used to this type of humor, they soon found themselves laughing along with the rest of the audience.

In conclusion, the David Strobel show was a testament to the power of humor and the importance of taking the time to laugh at ourselves and the world around us. It is a reminder that even in the most unexpected situations, there is always something funny to be found.

New Life For SF Anthologies

By MARK J. MCGARRY

Although the study of SF anthologies is a small subset of the entire field of SF scholarship, it is by no means a new phenomenon. Many of the early anthologies were written by prominent figures in the field, such as John W. Campbell and Isaac Asimov. In recent years, however, the focus has shifted to the more popular and accessible works, such as the annual volumes of The Year's Greatest Science Fiction, which are designed to appeal to a wider audience.

The first major anthology was A Trip to the Moon, edited by Hugo Gernsback in 1929. This was followed by The Living Sun, edited by Edward Hilscher, in 1932. Other notable anthologies include The Best of the Year, edited by Samuel Moskowitz, which began publication in 1951, and The Science Fiction Hall of Fame, edited by Isaac Asimov and Robert Silverberg, which was first published in 1967.

In recent years, the field of SF anthologies has become increasingly diverse, with a range of topics and styles represented. Some of the most popular anthologies include The Year's Greatest Science Fiction, edited by Samuel Moskowitz, and The Best Science Fiction of the Year, edited by John Ford.

Overall, the study of SF anthologies is a fascinating field, offering insights into the evolution of the genre and the changing tastes of readers over time.

The following are excerpts from an AIP interview with Bob Welch prior to his performance last Thursday at Samford College.

Bob Welch: I just remember a lot of hard work, mostly. I joined them in '71 at the time that I joined, Priest had been a couple of years, 1971, 1972, Priest was a really hot band in England. They were going through something similar to what has been going on the last couple of years, but not in the States, just Europe, mainly because the leader of the band at the time was Peter Green. Peter Green left, and when he joined them, the second guitarist, Jeremy Spencer, had just left. The whole thing was sort of in a beat tradition. I remember the first gig we did was totally chaotic. It was too big an audience in Oxford, we just were on stage and halfway through the show we were all drunk and we forgot all the numbers. We just jumped for 25 minutes. We wound up by Mick kicking over the drums, and we were just hanging on the rail. We were gorging with beer. In those days we went as far as 25 minutes and you were out of color. If you were anything less, it was the usual kind of the hippie days, the Fillmore East and West, there were eight bands on the bill and everybody was out of their minds. It was a lot more fun today things are more professional. We used to get paid $500 a night and now they pay you $2,500.

What do you do in the off season between Fleetwood Mac and "French Texan"?

Bob Welch: Really, the only thing I did was practice. They started out about six months before I left Fleetwood Mac, and I joined in May or June. I think it was in the first six months I really wasn't doing much. I really had no idea who they were, but I knew who Jimmy Robinson was, and I had a lot of hard rock fans, and Jimmy and I just sort of went to the studio and started making demos, at home mainly. He said, "Let's do a rock and hand" and I said, "Okay." But then I said, "No, I think I want to do it in Germany. I was sitting there playing with some kind of German band. I asked Jim if I could go to do some sessions and he said you're just sort of started up for a year and then you had the chance. I did play for two weeks, so went about three managers and a whole lot of headaches. It was insane. There was some good stuff on a couple of those shows, but Paris just never really fired."

ASP: Paris broke up before your inspiration to do "French Texan." Welch: Well, Paris went out.

Chick Wilkern: I think Welch and the Schmatas have a lot of talent. They are a lot of young people who go to school and just give up their talent. The thing that makes me feel a little more than that is that there's not much of a struggle. Welch: I think you have your highs and your lows and your bad days. But by the same token I don't think you have a lot of talent. Does Chuck say "I'm a human being with a dream?"

Whose the bus is crowded or jammed and packed with people, Chuck doesn't say "To the rear," like most buses drivers. Instead Chuck's voice rings out in an upbeat drone, "I'm going, you're late in the sing song. "I'm going, you're late in the sing song."

Bob Welch: I think the worst thing to happen to this generation. I have friends who smoke dope... It makes them so they don't care... the why-shoule-I-worry attitude."

Chick Wilkern also says, "There's great work with the music that people are doing..." and he adds that he is not conservative on all subjects.

A mixed part of any team season is the team's coaching, the athletes themselves, the fans and the media. Many teams run some sort of a press media, athletes answer questions and make speeches for various reasons. The press media is a great way to spread information and keep the fans informed of what is going on in the world of sports.

A recent article in the New York Times, written by Jane Capito, discusses the influence of the press media on athletes. The article states that the press media is a key component in the success of an athlete. The press media provides information to the fans, and it also helps to keep the athletes focused on their goals.

Tenure Case Handling Criticized

By M.J. Moosman

A 1975 tenure case in the Spanish Phonetics Department was recently settled in a "rapid" manner, according to the SUNYA Press Association (SPA). The case involved a professor who was alleged to have violated the tenure agreement.

The professor was alleged to have violated the tenure agreement by engaging in sexual harassment, according to the SPA. The case was settled by mutual agreement, and the professor was granted tenure.

On Dec. 15, 1975, CAFE rejected the professor's case. After the case was presented to the professor's department, the professor was granted tenure. The professor then appealed to the SPA, which rejected the appeal.

In the letter to the professor, CAFE stated that the professor had not shown evidence of sexual harassment. The SPA, however, stated that the professor had shown evidence of sexual harassment.

The SPA then appealed to the CAFE, which rejected the appeal. The professor then appealed to the SUNYA Board of Trustees, which granted tenure.

Former Spanish Phonetics Chairperson, Dr. Robert Grossman, was charged with "diligent and thorough investigation of the department's activities and the administration's handling of the tenure case." Dr. Grossman has been under fire for his handling of the case, and some members of the department have called for his resignation.

Stony Brook SA Owes Phone Bill

By Mike Pavlos

The Stony Brook Student Association has failed to pay its phone bill for the past six months. The bill is now $1,200, and the association has been notified that it will be cut off if the bill is not paid soon.

The students are looking for ways to raise the money to pay the bill. They are considering a variety of options, including a benefit concert and a community fundraiser.

The Jacksons’ son has been lost for two days, and his family is worried. The son is a student at SUNYA, and they fear he may have run away or been kidnapped.

The Jacksons are looking for any information that could help them find their son. They have filed a missing persons report with the SUNYA Police Department and are asking anyone with information to contact them.

The Grappers had a successful season, winning 25 of their 30 games. The team was led by three standout players: Mark Cooper, Mike Johnson, and Pat Huxtable.

The Grappers will be back next year, looking to build on their success and make a run at the NCAA Division III championship. They have a strong core of returning players, and the team is looking forward to the upcoming season.
