STUDENT CONVOCATION

On Thursday last the formal opening of the College took place. Dr. A. R. Brubacher presided and Dean H. H. Horner, Miss Anna E. McClelland, and Dr. L. Richardson occupied seats of honor. After the singing of "Materna" by the student body, and the reading of the Scripture, the address of the President, Dr. Richardson, Dr. A. R. Brubacher and Dean Horner delivered addresses. The exercises were closed with the singing of "America."

"Dr. Brubacher took for his subject, "Antagonistic Ideals and Behind the War."

His aim was to set before the students who are preparing to be teachers and guides of the youth of the nation the fundamental antagonism between autocracy and democracy. He said in part:

"America entered the war because her democracy was threatened by the piratical practices which made war a non-combatant women and children and invaded the sanctity of friendly nations. We are keenly alive to the menace against integrity of free peoples and constitutional government. We recognize an inherent antagonism between a government that engages in such unethic practices and the masses that demands that the great human mass which counts for nothing save as cannon fodder in the army America or a non-combatant woman and a non-combatant child."

"The war has joined the issue between a free government and an absolutist autocracy. The autocrat with airplanes, submarine, flame projectiles, gas bullets, among peace loving democracies, is like the high-wayman with a six-shooter, among peaceful, unarmed village folks. Either the democracy must be restrained or democracies must cease. The event is a foregone conclusion. Autocracy has the weakness of an age and achievement. Democracy has the weakness of a dumbed youth."

Democracy Looks to Teachers

"To the teacher this is a very responsible moment. For behind and beneath the struggle lie antagonistic educational ideals. Autocracy uses compulsory means of a distinctive kind to secure efficiency and obedience to its units. Democracy uses its own appropriate means to secure its enthusiasm and individual initiative. Shall democracy renounce obedience? Shall autocracy win the day because it can command the shallow belief of an efficient man-power?"

"It is generally accepted that Germany is to-day reap ing the fruits of a well-defined philosophy of life, effectively taught by its schools and universities during the last fifty years, a philosophy that has dominated its training class for two centuries. The German nation exemplifies this philosophy today; while the masses exemplify it that whole-scale unconsciousness which Nietzsche comments on them; the military or efficient class exemplifies it and skillfully incorporates it as a national system, as a national educational creed. It is especially desirable, therefore, that the teachers in our great democracy should fully comprehend this educational creed of autocracy."

"Germany by its whole educational system glorifies the efficient man, to whom it subordinates the great human mass which counts for nothing save as cannon fodder in the army America. America on the other hand glorified the common man; seeks to educate him, to raise his comfort and his individual worth to himself."

"The educational system carefully provides for the maintenance of the distinctions between the cultured class and the broad winners. The high exponent of the doctrine of the superman says: 'The future of German Kultur rests on the shoulders of the Prussian officer.' Again: 'The masses were born to serve and obey; and every moment in which their limiting or crawling or broken-winded thoughts are at work shows what trade mark (nature) branded them thereon. He says the masses are fit primarily for cannon-fodder while the master caste are the hierarchy in the kingdom of the intellect.' For them is recognized the 'aristocracy of culture.'"

"The purpose of education in an autocracy is clearly defined by Nietzsche's expression: 'The symbol of the German people of to-day. They have been just as successful in its other educational purpose, the propagation of the doctrine of the superman, the philosophy of hardness and harshness; superiority to morality; conscious disdain of the common man; lack of sympathy for his lot."

"The successful attainment of Germany's educational system is impressive and even ominous. That nation can in a moment impose an autocracy from industrial obscurity to industrial preeminence by means of systematic educational effort which is a great tribute to its schools and teachers, to all schools and teachers. But Germany has been just as successful in its other educational purpose, the propagation of the doctrine of the superman, the philosophy of hardness and harshness; superiority to morality; conscious disdain of the common man; lack of sympathy for his lot."

"The Germany of Goethe and Schiller and Beethoven given way unconsciously and part of the masses, conscious of this fact and designedly on the part of the autocracy, to a nation of cruelty, unscrupulous ambitions, of almost superhuman ingenuity. The philosophy of Nietzsche has found concrete expression in the German people of to-day. They have been just as successful in its other educational purpose, the propagation of the doctrine of the superman, the philosophy of hardness and harshness; superiority to morality; conscious disdain of the common man; lack of sympathy for his lot."

To the Editors of S. C. News:

members of class '18 was managing the enterprise. Kathryn Linehan '19 and Arnold Noble were married to John Sproule '17 a few minutes of rest would be sufficient. A visiting physician remarked a short time ago that it was nothing less than cruel to make a student feel faint or sickly a half hour of resting will often improve matters. This is a much better policy than waiting for the student to faint. A rest room was considered cruel; what about no rest room at all?

To those students who lean toward college journalism, and to the members of the class of 1917 who are endeavoring to extend the glad hand to our sister students, the gladness of heart and the smile that come with it, the State College News is a reality and successful enterprise. To the students of the class of '18, Editor-in-chief of the paper last year, whose untiring efforts and ability made the State College News a reality and successful enterprise, is a commissioned officer in the Regular Army.

In accordance with the management of the publication their articles are always welcomed. Now is the time to enter the race for the Glad hand to our sister students. To those students who feel faint or sickly a half hour of resting will often improve matters. This is a much better policy than waiting for the student to faint. A rest room was considered cruel; what about no rest room at all?

To the Editors of S. C. News:

Expressing the general opinion of young women students, I arise to protest the usurpation of the rest room. Many of us have schedules which begin at 8:15 in the morning and continue intermittently until 5:15. This makes a long, tiresome day particularly if one carries her lunch and is compelled to remain in the building from morning until night. The rest room has in the past afforded a convenient place for a student to eat and to rest at the same time relax for a few minutes between classes. Often if a student feels faint or sickly a half hour of resting will often improve matters. This is a much better policy than waiting for the student to faint. A rest room was considered cruel; what about no rest room at all?

morality, as shown in the Lusitania episode, by the insolent and wanton destruction of property, by the cruel treatment of conquered civilians.

The future teachers of our free people, are at the apex of democracy in trying to educate the masses, and it is for you to reverse this sad and discouraging picture.

In carrying out this educate and purify democracy you are in a very real sense at war with autocracy.

In carrying out this program, the responsible human sympathy and intellectual humility into the lives of the great human mass, you are combating the vicious philosophy of that autocracy whose engines of war are daily dealing death to our brave boys on the firing line. We are all enlisted in the cause of humanity in its struggle to free itself finally from the incursions of an arrogant and cruel, self-appointed master class.

Dean Horner then read the names of the young men of the College who are in military service for the students stood in honor to them.

After which he tried to impress upon the students the immensity of the cost of the war—both in money and in casualties. He emphasized the fact that we must not forget any of the hardships of war and were living our lives in much the same way as in times of peace. He urged us to start now to prepare ourselves in the practices of economy and thrift and thereby lessen future suffering.

Dean Pierce's Address

Miss Anna E. Pierce, Dean of Women, met the members of the Freshmen class in the Auditorium on Friday morning last. She reminded them that in pursing their college course they must prepare themselves for a part in the period of construction and reconstruction which is to follow the war. In speaking of the new life at college she compared their cases to transplanted. The period of wilting which is necessary to make the same glad old sun and many loving helping hands. From that time they will feel at home and very happy.

She urged them to set about adapting themselves to their new environments with a determination to make a clean sweep of all weaknesses and to establish new virtues in their new homes and at the same time to get in the game of real living and not to become intellectual grinds. She pointed out the value of using good common sense in matters under their control by sleeping, eating and dressing properly and then doing their appointed tasks courageously and conscientiously.

In closing Dean Pierce said: "For your new life take for your motto the watchword of the Camp Fire Girls, "Never, never, never fail to be on hand. Remember, and thereby lessen future suffering.

SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL ARTS

Miss Wilson met the H. E. Seniors Friday at one o'clock, and dismissed plans for living at the practice house. Marion Peterson, Carolyn Ring, Clarice Lally, Mabel Holliday, and Agnes Foster are living at the house now.

Miss Van Lieu is director of the Albany city food conservation movement. Madge Rodd, good '15 is assistant director.

The State Education Department is launching a plan to reorganize all teachers' courses in Home Economics. When completed to the satisfaction of the Department, none but four-year courses will be offered by any of the colleges in the State. The registration in the in the night school classes is particularly heavy. More than can be accepted have applied for admission. A careful selection will have to be made to eliminate enough to make the classes of manageable size.

In answer to advertising phobia put out last week, thirty men have made inquiries concerning the day courses. A meeting was held Friday night, and Professor Smith discussed the courses. Four men have already enrolled and others are considering.

Professor Smith has started a plan for work by which a man works in an industrial shop for a half day, and comes to college for classes the rest of the day. This system of working on a cooperative basis is used with great success in the engineering courses of the University of Cincinnati. Two men are now studying at this college under this plan. They are employed at the Consolidated Car Co., where they will feel at home and very happy.

Every officer of the Consolidated Car Co., from the president down, have shown great interest in this plan, which promises to make quite a change in the future registration. Mr. Smith is confident of its success.
