And DONNA SWAFFEN

In a business hierarchy an employee would be retained or fired on the basis of his overall merit and value to the organization. Certainly the existence of union, tenure, and seniority systems have weakened the ideal of the more able, the more meritorious.

This is not to say that there is nothing to be said in favor of meritocracy or that pressuring them to make decisions on the basis of output alone. It is simply saying that there is no inherent merit in the concept of meritocracy itself. It is simply a means of organizing and evaluating the performance of employees.

The ability of a student to perform is reflected in his or her test scores, but these scores are not necessarily indicative of his or her abilities. A test score can be influenced by many factors, including the difficulty of the test, the student's health on the day of the test, and the student's feelings about the test. Therefore, it is important to consider other factors when evaluating a student's performance.

The question of how to evaluate a student's performance is not a new one. In fact, it has been debated for many years. They Have Nothing On Their Minds

They have nothing on their minds, or so it seems. The students at SUNY at Buffalo are preoccupied with other matters. The mundane tasks of daily life seem to consume them, leaving little room for thought or introspection. It's as if they exist in a state of perpetual distraction, oblivious to the world around them. The campus buzzes with activity, but the students themselves appear to be lost in their own thoughts, disconnected from the reality of their surroundings.

The Night We Were Nixed by Dick's Tricks

The night started innocently enough, a typical college night with friends and a sense of adventure. We decided to explore the campus and find a spot for our study session. Little did we know, our evening would take an unexpected turn. As we strolled through the familiar halls, we noticed a group of students gathered outside the library. The atmosphere was tense, and we couldn't help but notice the strange looks exchanged among them. That's when we heard the legends of Dick's Tricks.

Adios, amigos

The day started off like any other, with the usual hustle and bustle of college life. As the sun rose, the campus came to life, and we couldn't help but feel excited for the day ahead. But then, a twist of fate occurred, and the day took a dramatic turn. The news of Dick's Tricks spread like wildfire, and we found ourselves caught in the middle of a campus-wide phenomenon.

Out Of Control

Filling government posts with friends is a rather common political practice, and one fraught with advantages: it ensures the presence of a drinking partner after a long Central Council meeting, and neatly avoids the petty annoyance of having people disagree with you all the time.

But there are some firm — albeit unwritten — laws governing the procedure by which one fills these posts. This will cause some confusion, and lead to speculation about change in the new administration, attempts to bridge the gap, and the possible Henekes morality.

First, don’t let the appointment shock you off. Hearing someone broadcast news of his appointment even before the election is decided is a sure tip-off to a shabby deal.

Second, throw suspicion on the appointee by leaking a few other names to the press. This will cause some confusion, and lead to speculation about change in the new administration, attempts to bridge the gap, and the possible Henekes morality.

Next, appoint a search committee to find a suitably qualified candidate. You can pad the committee as a bit, but try not to be too obvious about it. You Seeder fiddles with your names, you’ve been hired.

This will spur talk of fairness and innovation, although there will still be those who view the entire thing as a race to railroad the intended appointee through.

So, it’s time for a surprise maneuver. Declare the search open to any and all candidates. This will cause some confusion, and lead to speculation about change in the new administration, attempts to bridge the gap, and the possible Henekes morality.

One or two students may answer the call, and they must be grilled mercilessly in order to dispel any air of foul play. Committee members should also be fully briefed about their behavior during the interviews.

There is also a list of the rest of the university as an anxious attempt to bridge the gap between the common student and the highly qualified government officials.

One or two students may answer the call, and they must be grilled mercilessly in order to dispel any air of foul play. Committee members should also be fully briefed about their behavior during the interviews. Comments like “forget the decision’s been made regardless of the outcome of this interview” are definitely out.

Then, once this has gone on for a week or two — remember, this must be a drawn out selection process — come out with the name of the man you intended to appoint all along. If all has gone well, there will be a few grumbles, but the decision will be regarded as acceptable.

And once again, the vast gap between ethics and politics will have been bridged.

Paddle Hockey Season Opens

by Michael Karnie
The 1977 paddle hockey season opened with the inaugural game of the season being played at the National Hockey Stadium in Islamabad. The game was played between the Pakistan national team and a visiting team from Canada.

The Pakistan team was led by experienced players like Aftab Ahmad, Iftikhar Ali, and Naiman Khan. The visiting team was led by some of the top players from the Canadian national team.

The game was a thrilling spectacle, with both teams putting up a good fight. The Pakistan team led by Aftab Ahmad managed to score four goals in the first half, while the visiting team scored two goals.

The second half was a more even contest, with both teams scoring three goals each. The final score was 7-7, which was a draw.

The season promises to be an exciting one, with more games scheduled in the coming months. The Pakistan team is looking forward to the upcoming games and hoping to emerge victorious.

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences held its annual spring picnic on the campus green. The event was attended by students, faculty, and staff. The picnic included various activities like games, food, and music.

The college president, Dr. Jane Johnson, delivered a speech, highlighting the achievements of the college and the importance of a liberal arts education. The event was a great opportunity for students and faculty to interact and enjoy each other's company.

The college is planning to organize more events like this in the future to boost morale and unity among the college community.
Netters Win Two More; Record Now At 13-3

By Eddie LaRusso

Many times magic begins after playing four matches in a row but not the Abbey Lake varsity tennis team, who defeated St. Cloud College 4-3 and the University of Vermont 6-3 last week.

Last Thursday, the team faced the tandem of John Penna in a match that was over quickly because of rain. It was the third straight match for the Netters in as many days.

Two days earlier, Abbey defeated St. Cloud College 5-2, then faced Maine 7-2 with a 4-3 win for Hartwick College the next day.

Only singles matches were played against Maine, and that was good enough for four matches in a row.

Paul Froehlich won at No. 1 singles, 6-4, 6-2, Tom Cranston, Marc Robb, Chris Arnold 6-3, 6-2, Phil Anderson and Mike Ferrata beat Mike Hillebran and John Hickey 6-3, 6-4.

A Piece of Pie

Also, the end is near. At least it’s near. For the one who’s leaving. You’re not to find yourself a new sports editor next year (assuming I graduate). I hope you enjoy your last year at least as much as I have. Besides the deadlines and the agony of the people completing that didn’t cover their intramural or high school championships. Once you’re gone. Yeah, there were some—like—... well.

Anyway, it is a challenge. And it’s a big challenge. This is the last assignment of the fall of “Writing a baseball piece. Since then I’ve written about how many sports that I can barely remember.

The first assignment was to the All-Big Ten Team, 1973. The all-Big Ten Team was selected by the coaches and the names of the players were put on a list. The list was later given to the papers to write about.

Stickmen Win; Losing Skid

The Abbey Lake varsity tennis team snapped a four game losing streak with an 11-0 victory over RPI last Friday.

The double, thanks for their 13-13 triple crown, were in the top of the University of Vermont, were playing their fifth consecutive game on the road and Abbey Lake’s Head Coach Mike Ferrata was expecting a ‘tough game’ with the Engineers. “Last year RPI beat us 8-3 and we are better than them this year,” said Ferrata.

RPI got the advantage first and from then on, took a 3-1 lead on the lead.

Albury played a good first half, averaging 40 miles per hour and never was a question of whether or not the Netters would find their way to the victory. The answer was yes.

The Netters won four games to RPI’s two in the third period to take a lead at the end of the first half. Then they took the lead in the second half and continued on to win 3-1 for a second straight win for the second straight week.

The victory was a huge improvement for the team and their overall performance. “Our offense was consistent all day long and we had a good day playing the ball from our court, which has been a problem all year round,” Albury started the ball 60 percent of the time on the court. “Playing four good games in a row is something we can be proud of. We played well against RPI, but not against the other teams,” Albury added. “The key to the win was good defence and good attacking.”

Albury’s offensive attack was led by his ‘biggest weapon’, Dan Cragg. Cragg scored five goals giving him 27 on the year, which was the most for any player in the All-Big Ten Team. He also received a critical role in the second half.

Although the team last year was 8-3 and lost two games, they had one win over their biggest rivals, Ohio State University. The team won 3-1 over the Buckeyes, 6-1 over the University of Kentucky, and 3-1 over the University of Alabama. The team won 3-1 over the University of Alabama.

Albury also noted Cragg’s excellent leadership qualities.

Sandner, the number three player, has had a difficult season so far. But the team is still on the rise with a 4-3 win for Saratoga, 6-3 in the last two games.
