Trackmen Fifth In SUNYAC

by Joe Lafalce

Continental Field House hosted the annual SUNYAC track and field championships Saturday at Siena College. The field house was jammed with supporters as the teams gathered for the pre-meet ceremonies. The talks lasted for about 15 minutes before the races began.

The weather was not kind to the event as the temperature dropped to near freezing, but the competitors did not let that deter them from competing. The air was thick with excitement and the sights and sounds of the athletes were everywhere.

In the first event of the day, the 1500-meter run, the Danes placed first, second and third. This was a great start for the team as they continued to rack up points in the following events.

The Danes were off to a good start in the 5000-meter run, but their lead was short-lived as the competitors from the other teams began to close the gap. The Danes finished second in this event, but they were not done yet. They continued to compete hard and earn points in the remaining events.

Post Routes Stickmen, 13-4

by Craig Pitts

The Post signed off on a quick 2-0 lead with three goals in the second quarter, but the Danes fought back with three more goals in the third quarter and two more in the fourth to win, 13-4.

The Danes were led by a dynamic duo of Kevin Harris and Dave Cole, who each scored twice. They proved to be a force to be reckoned with, as they took control of the game early on.

The Danes added three scores of their own in the fourth quarter, but it was too little too late. Post added one more to their lead, but it was not enough to secure the win.

The game was a high-scoring one, with both teams putting up a tough fight. The Danes were led by an impressive defense, which kept the Post offense at bay most of the game.

Volleyball Spring Home: vs. KIM, 3:30

Field Hockey Out of Province

The field hockey team did not place in the SUNYAC championships, but they continued to compete hard in the remaining events.

The Danes were not finished yet, as they continued to rack up points in the following events. They placed second in the 5000-meter run, and third in the 10,000-meter run. The Danes also placed second in the long jump, and third in the hammer.

The Danes were not the only ones to place well, as the Post placed first in five events, and second in three.

The Danes are not done yet, as they continue to compete hard in the remaining events. They have a strong team, and they are not afraid to compete against the best.

On Field: Campaigns and Elections

by David Winberg

The student government at SUNYAC has been busy with campaigns and elections this spring. The student government is divided into three main parts: the Student Senate, the Student Assembly, and the Student Association.

The Student Senate is responsible for the overall operation of the student government. They are responsible for creating and enforcing policies, and overseeing the finances of the student government.

The Student Assembly is responsible for the day-to-day operations of the student government. They are responsible for organizing events, and representing the students in the community.

The Student Association is responsible for the funding of the student government. They are responsible for raising money, and providing financial support to the student government.

The Danes are not done yet, as they continue to compete hard in the remaining events. They have a strong team, and they are not afraid to compete against the best.

Stony Brook Drops from NCAA; Questions Ethics

In David Wasinger

The Stony Brook University in New York State had its best year as a varsity basketball team under the NCAA (National Collegiate Athletics Association) rules. However, it was announced that the university would be dropped from the NCAA and placed on probation for the next 3 years. This decision was made after an investigation by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions, which found the university to be in violation of several rules.

The investigation began in 1974, after the NCAA received complaints from several players and coaches about the university's athletic program. The investigation revealed that Stony Brook had been violating several rules, including those related to academic eligibility, scholarships, and the use of athletic facilities.

The NCAA's decision to drop Stony Brook from the NCAA was a blow to the university, which had been a member of the NCAA for only 6 years. The university's athletic program had been struggling financially, and the decision to drop Stony Brook from the NCAA was a blow to its chances of finding new revenue sources.

Stony Brook's Athletic Director, Dr. James F. Murphy, said that the university was disappointed with the NCAA's decision, but that it would comply with the NCAA's ruling.

Students at Brown Strike

By Rob Boudreaux

The Brown University in Providence, Rhode Island was the site of a student strike in 1975. The strike was sparked by a conflict between the university's administration and the students over funding for the school's athletic program.

The conflict began in 1974, when the university's administration announced plans to cut the funding for the school's athletic program. The students were outraged by the decision, and they launched a campaign to raise funds to support the program. The students' efforts were successful, and they were able to raise enough money to keep the program alive.

However, the administration was not convinced, and it announced plans to cut the funding for the program again in 1975. This time, the students were prepared. They launched a strike, and they were able to shut down the university for several weeks.

The strike was a success, and the students were able to force the administration to reverse its decision. The administration promised to increase funding for the athletic program, and it also agreed to involve the students in the decision-making process.

The strike was a significant event in the history of the university, and it helped to establish the students' rights to be involved in the decision-making process.

PAGE SEVEN
by Paul Stubble

The past three weeks were exciting for the University, and the coming weeks will be just as exciting. The University community will have a successful finals week & summer.

They will be held this coming week. There will be refreshments, mixed drinks & munchies.

The University will have a hand in this. I think it's a great idea. Who doesn't like to have a good time? And if it helps our students, then that's even better.

Aid for Handicapped Students is Urged

The Rehabilitation Service, located in the Student Life Office, is currently recruiting volunteer and salaried help from people with sight disabilities, as well as those with other disabilities.

There are currently about 50 physically handicapped students attending SUNY. Administrators estimate that there may be another 50 students in the total number for next year. For many of these students, a University education may not have been possible before. The Rehabilitation Service provides education and training for these students, and helps them to become independent members of society.

The Service also provides training for people who wish to help other handicapped students. If you are interested in helping, please contact the Rehabilitation Service.

The past school year has seen the consolidation and expansion of programs. Unfortunately, they are starting again.

The University will have a hand in this. I think it's a great idea. Who doesn't like to have a good time? And if it helps our students, then that's even better.

United Tenured Teacher Takes Time to Reflect

Uttenurcd Teacher Takes Time to Reflect

The tenured teacher, who left Stony Brook last year to accept a position at Washington State University, has spent much of this semester preparing to adjust to his new environment. "Once you're used to living in New York, you can't go back to the same things again," he said. "You have to make a new environment for yourself." He added that he has found the new environment to be "more challenging" than the one he had at Stony Brook.

Despite the challenges, he is looking forward to the changes that come with teaching at a new university. "I'm excited about the opportunity to teach in a different environment," he said. "I think it will be good for my students too." He added that he hopes to be able to bring his own unique perspective to the classroom, and that his students will benefit from it.

The tenured teacher is also looking forward to the opportunity to work with new colleagues. "I'm excited to meet new people and to work with them," he said. "I think it will be good for me and for my students." He added that he hopes to be able to learn from his new colleagues and to share his own knowledge and experience with them.

As the semester nears its conclusion, the tenured teacher is looking forward to the new challenges that come with teaching at a new university. He is excited to be able to bring his unique perspective to the classroom and to work with new colleagues. He is also excited to be able to share his knowledge and experience with his students and to learn from them.

CAPITAL CLINQUERS
There’s the old saying, “Old soldiers never die; they just fade away.” Well, apparently old portions of Congress don’t fade away—at least not when it comes to bad legislation. A bill to be voted on by the New York Times. Passed by 193 Congress people who were not expected in last year’s elections has been passed by 71. It still needs a few small votes in Washington.

The story was that many of the men who are losing their seats by various means are so loyal to their constituents that they are unwilling to vote against the bill even though it would have helped hundreds of businesses in their various constituencies to open up successful private business ventures in the nation’s capital.

KILLER BEES
Scientists at the University of California have designed a computer program in an effort to track so-called “killer bees” moving throughout North America to the United States.

The government recently offered a new computer program to help track “killer bees” moving through North America to the United States.

Rebellion Without Cause...

A careful analysis of the SA office is in order to assess its role, depending on whom it is asked and at what time they are asked, those people give very different answers to the same question.

Another source of funding must be taken this burden off the backs of student taxpayers. We can no longer bear it. Every effort must be made by SA, the administration, SASU, and the state to have no choice but to allocate funds for sports. The idea behind this is sound; no one would be disturbed by a little increase in tuition fees, and this would be a good way to avoid an endless cycle of conflicts.

There is one solution to Student Association's financial problems that has been quietly discussed in recent weeks. The Student Association Advisory Board operates on the assumption that if the Student Association is to be successful, it must be able to raise funds, and it is possible to do this by selling bonds. Cornell Council would have a bond issue program.

The SUNY system is unique in that it is the state legislature that receives for financial support. In 1965, SUNY established a fund-raising organization to be supported by students, parents, and alumni, and people living near the schools in the state that would raise funds for SUNY. It is possible to sell SUNY bonds to the extent necessary for existing in the state, with the SUNY system providing the necessary funds.

State University of New York. So are we. However, it is doubtful that Student Association has acted with malice.

The other problem could also grow in which the year was 1965, as the state legislature would have been more pressing. When this country falls into a recession, two problems would appear to be more pressing.

The service is friendly and attentive, ensuring that your dining experience is enjoyable.

The South Street Seaport is a great choice for a special occasion or a pleasant dinner out. Whether you are a local or a visitor, you will be pleased with the quality of the food and the overall experience.

Pygmalion's Love Comes to Life

By Alan D. Bailey

Walking onstage, limping, he slaints and hunches over. In this scene from a musical production of Pygmalion, the character of Henry Higgins is depicted as a frustrated and bitter man.

But as the show progresses, Higgins begins to see the potential of the girl he is training, Eliza Doolittle. He realizes that she has qualities that are unique and valuable, and he starts to invest his time and energy into her development.

This scene highlights the themes of transformation and self-discovery, as Higgins learns to appreciate the intrinsic worth of others and to see beyond outward appearances.

Students Experiment With 'Godot'

By Bruce Bookbinder

As the curtain rises on the first act of Beckett's classic play, 'Krapp's Last Tape,' the audience is drawn into a world of existential contemplation.

The scene opens with a monologue by the character, Krapp, who reflects on his past and contemplates the meaning of his life. The quiet and understated nature of the performance allows the audience to focus on the character's inner struggles and the themes of memory, mortality, and the human condition.

The play explores the idea of waiting for something that may never come, and the audience is left to ponder the implications of Krapp's actions and their own lives.

"You don't have time to think whether it's disappointing or not."

I'm still a pragmatist: What works, works.

I hope that Dr. Fields will see the tradition here: Students are part of the act.

FIVE YEARS LATER

When Louis T. Benezet accepted the presidency of the SUNY University at Albany, he knew that "the answer to the question of how to make SUNY a great university must rest on the resolution of some other question."

"But," he added, "we can try to make SUNY a great university, because we're constantly working, but we've got to do it in a way that's consistent with what we're trying to do."

So, in the five years since Benezet took office, SUNY has made significant progress in several areas.

First, SUNY has expanded its educational offerings, with the addition of new campuses and programs. This has allowed SUNY to serve a wider range of students, regardless of their background or financial circumstances.

Second, SUNY has improved its fiscal management, with the implementation of new budgeting and financial planning strategies. This has allowed SUNY to better control its spending and ensure its financial stability.

Third, SUNY has strengthened its academic programs, with the development of new courses and curricula. This has allowed SUNY to better prepare its students for the demands of the modern workforce.

Fourth, SUNY has increased its focus on diversity and inclusion, with the development of new programs and initiatives designed to support students from underrepresented backgrounds. This has allowed SUNY to better serve its diverse student body and create a more inclusive campus community.

Fifth, SUNY has enhanced its partnerships with other institutions and organizations, with the development of new collaborations and joint ventures. This has allowed SUNY to better leverage its resources and expertise and create a more interconnected and interconnected university.

"But," Benezet added, "we can't be satisfied with what we've accomplished so far. We must continue to work hard and innovate to ensure that SUNY remains a world-class university."

Enhance 'Imaginary Invalid'

by David Urner

The last time I saw Betsy (my father's car), she was driving down the street in a 1975 chocolate brown Lincoln Continental Town Car. I often amuse myself with such folly. You know, catharsis and what-not. Betsy's still in the town car, but she's probably been turned blue (which would be an improvement from her faded daily green complexion), a most disagreeable shade of green.

The play opens with a scene where Angelica (Margaret Scibilia) tells Argan (James Hartinc) that his daughter has been found. Argan is told that his daughter has been found, but it is not clear who has found her or where she is. The scene is set in the house of the Angelica, and the character of Argan is listed as the father of the main character, Betsy.

The play is about the imaginary invalid, a concept that was popular in the 18th century. The term refers to a character who is pretended to be ill in order to gain sympathy or attention from others. The play is a satirical commentary on the behavior of doctors and patients in the 18th century.

The play closes with a dance and the confirmation of Doctorate upon Orosman as Thomas Diafoirus.

Irene McComsky, as Argan, played her part as one of the most important stage business. McComsky, as Argan, was a great success and was praised for her performance. The play was well received by the audience and was considered a success.

Hang in There, Betsy

by Andy Bauman

Betsy's behaving well now. She seems quiet and subdued. She is talking more in the dormitory now, and I have to watch her carefully to make sure she is not feeling too much. I often think about her past and wonder if she was really such a good daughter.

I wish I could have known her better. I wonder what she could have been like if she had been raised differently. I hope she finds happiness in her new life and that she is able to overcome her past. Betsy is a special girl, and I hope she finds a good place to live where she can be happy.
Enacting the Job Market

by Gary Allen

The telephone rang in the office of Rent-A-Vict Inc., a strictly-for-profit organization that deals in placing Vietnam refugees in jobs and homes in the States.

"What's that?" asked the secretary in a crisp voice. "You need 200 refugees to serve as service meals and the balance will be paid then. They will be placed in jobs in the States."

"That's all part of the plan. With so many Americans out of work and low on money, the Government took good care of that. You see, by evacuating only Vietnamese who did manage to escape, they thought they were doing us a favor."

"How do you know the refugees will perform up to par at the jobs they are placed in?" demanded the caller.

"No kidding?" said the secretary in a matter-of-fact tone. "The ball started rolling as soon as the first refugees hit Camp Pendleton. So far, Rent-A-Vict has been a tremendous success."

"What's that?"

"Rent-A-Vict has entered into contracts that provide most of the big American corporations with large numbers of workers who are paid coolie wages. General Motors, for instance, has an option on 3000 Viets to be slated for work in automobile factories."

"That's how we can whip inflation!" boasted the caller.

"You seem awfully sure of yourself."

"We can't lose. The Government took good care of that. You see, by evacuating only Vietnamese who did manage to escape, they thought they were doing us a favor."

"But it seems the goal of the refugees is supposed to have been the bringing of peace and love nowfind the bulk of their group on the "other side offense.""

"The sphere of influence of these United Nations workers is vast. They are central to a substantial part of the Red's inner circle. It is a pity that the present administration won't do more to encourage the refugees to stay in the area."

"The refugees themselves are of little consequence, but the people who are to work are here. So the ball was hit in Vietnam. Along with the rest of the refugees, they had to be treated as conscientious refugees."

"No. We are not going to placate the refugees. The Government is not going to placate the refugees."

"How about the genuine Vietnamese peasants who did manage to escape? How do you believe they are going to perform up to par at the jobs they are placed in?"

"No kidding?" said the secretary in a matter-of-fact tone. "The ball started rolling as soon as the first refugees hit Camp Pendleton. So far, Rent-A-Vict has been a tremendous success."

"That's all part of the plan. With so many Americans out of work and low on money, the Government took good care of that. You see, by evacuating only Vietnamese who did manage to escape, they thought they were doing us a favor."

Three Women Trackers Beaten

By Bruce Miggin

The Danes were the only undefeated team in SUNYAC in the Spring Season. The Podium Lighthouse will be turned on tonight before their four-game homestand closes out the campaign for their unending help and cooperation, and for bringing us a great deal of pleasure. We would like to thank all of them for their understanding and support.

They were the stars of this team, and they are the Danes, with a 10-1 record.

The women's track team was led by Coach Bob Bullington, who is in his third season at the helm. The team had a strong showing in the Spring Season, finishing second in the SUNYAC Championship.

The Danes were led by sophomore Stephanie Johnson, who won the 100-meter dash, 200-meter dash, and 400-meter dash. She also set a new school record in the 4x100-meter relay.

DeBlois, McCormick, Ford Win ASP Awards

by Bruce Wiegig

Albany have earned their Terminal Division was voted ASP Men’s Most Val­uable of the Year and Master’s Pro­gram, New McCormick won voted ASP Athlete of the Year in a pool of ASP athletes. Football coach Bob Ford was named Coach of the Year.

DeBlois’ team had a perfect season and the loss dropped the Danes ll-K. The loss dropped the Danes Tournament bid.

The defense held and Tommie needed the last shot. This time he made it and the Danes were not able to bring him down. He made the putter and the Danes took the lead, winning the game of the season.

Nene McCormick was voted Female Athlete of the Year and Woman shot putter. She is rated as one of the top three throwers in the nation.

Sixty-Seven Positions Cut; Notices Going Out Shortly

By Betty Noda

Two days after the report of the Academic Priorities Program was approved and transmitted to President and Provost Benjamin, SUNYA announced that one of its most sought after administrative offices would be eliminated. SUNYA's Academic Priorities Committee, in its report recommended that 67 positions be eliminated from the SUNYA administration, including the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and one of the three associate deans of the college of Arts and Sciences.

The Academic Priorities Committee is a five-member committee appointed by President Benjamin to review SUNYA's academic programs and recommend changes. The committee was formed in the wake of a budget crisis that forced the university to cut back on its academic programs.

The committee recommended the elimination of 67 positions, including the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, one of the three associate deans of the college, and several other administrative positions. The cuts were made to address the university's budget crisis and to make the college more efficient.

The cuts were met with mixed reactions from SUNYA faculty and students. Some faculty members were concerned about the impact of the cuts on the quality of education at SUNYA, while others were happy to see the elimination of some administrative positions.

The cuts were effective immediately, and the SUNYA administration began notifying employees of their impending layoff. The employees were given a period of 30 days to find new jobs before their employment was terminated.

The SUNYA administration was careful to explain the reasons for the cuts to the employees, and to offer them assistance in finding new jobs. The administration also promised to do everything possible to minimize the impact of the cuts on the university's academic programs.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a fair and equitable manner. The cuts were based on a rigorous review of the university's academic programs, and were made in consultation with the SUNYA faculty.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to communicate with the SUNYA faculty and students throughout the process. The administration held meetings with the SUNYA faculty to discuss the cuts, and to explain the reasons for the cuts.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's academic programs. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to continue to provide high-quality education to its students.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's financial stability. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to maintain its financial stability, and to continue to provide high-quality education to its students.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's reputation. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to maintain its reputation, and to continue to be recognized as a leader in the field of education.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's future. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to continue to grow and expand, and to continue to provide high-quality education to its students.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's current students. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to continue to provide high-quality education to its current students.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's employees. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to continue to provide high-quality education to its employees.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's alumni. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to continue to provide high-quality education to its alumni.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's community. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to continue to provide high-quality education to its community.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's state. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to continue to provide high-quality education to its state.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's country. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to continue to provide high-quality education to its country.

The SUNYA administration was also careful to ensure that the cuts were made in a way that would not negatively impact the university's world. The cuts were made in a way that would allow the university to continue to provide high-quality education to its world.
Visiting the Campus:

Do Not Go Picking Up Freshman Girls

Orientation 1 had to meet the Student Orientation Program. My thoughts went to when students and presented to us how to find the best classes and advice on what courses to take. At one point, Jim was presenting an overview of the university's offerings. He covered topics such as academic programs, student life, and campus resources. There were questions from the audience, and I remember Jim emphasizing the importance of getting involved in campus activities. He encouraged us to explore different clubs and organizations to find what we enjoyed.

The university is a large and diverse community, and I believe that the orientation helps new students adjust quickly and feel welcomed. It was an informative session, and I think it set a good foundation for our academic journey.
Students to Get New Viewpoint

The Franksville Specialty Company announced today that its Franksville Specialty Company has been awarded a contract by the Student Government Association to produce and distribute a new handbook for incoming students.

The handbook, which will be distributed to all incoming students, will contain information on various aspects of campus life, including academic programs, extracurricular activities, and campus resources.

The handbook will be available for free at the Student Government Association office, located in the Student Union.

"We are excited to provide this resource to our incoming students," said Student Government Association President John Smith. "This handbook will be a valuable tool for new students as they navigate their way through college."

A Part of the System

by Andy Ruzene

I haven't thought much about how far we've come as a society. I've been thinking about how we came to be where we are now and what our future holds. It's fascinating to see how far we've come in terms of technology and education, but it's also disheartening to see how much we still have to do.

The school system is a reflection of our society. It is designed to produce citizens who will serve the country and support our way of life. However, there are many problems with the current system that need to be addressed.

Firstly, there is the issue of funding. Public schools are underfunded, and this leads to overcrowded classrooms and outdated facilities. This is a problem that needs to be addressed immediately.

Secondly, there is the issue of curriculum. The current curriculum is outdated and does not prepare students for the workforce. There is a need for more practical and relevant education.

Finally, there is the issue of teachers. Many teachers are underpaid and overworked, and this leads to a high turnover rate. This is a problem that needs to be addressed in order to attract and retain high-quality teachers.

In conclusion, the school system is a reflection of our society, and there are many problems with the current system that need to be addressed. We must work towards creating a better system that prepares students for the workforce and gives them the tools they need to succeed in life.

Chem Prof Condemns Patent Policy Revision

by Betty Statu

Freedom to discuss research may be jeopardized by a new SUNY Research Foundation patent waiver agreement now being distributed. SUNY Chemistry Professor J.J. Zuckerman calls it a "gag rule" and has spearheaded an effort to rescind it.

SUNY Research Foundation attorney Joseph Cairo, however, says the new form merely simplifies the process by which professors agree to protect the patent rights of their research sponsors.

Zuckerman plans to present a resolution condemning the agreement form at the afternoon's faculty meeting. The form was drafted by the Foundation and includes a memo which states that agencies of the federal government require that all researchers sign such an agreement.

Zuckerman, who has extensive experience in both industrial and academic research, claims that a professor should be able to distinguish between "novel and significant" and "merely novel" inventions. According to Cairo, a professor should be able to decide whether a disclosure is "significant." He went on to say that most inventions are not patented, anyway. Only three or four patents have actually been applied for in the past year, says Cairo.

Cairo asserts that the patent waiver agreement aims at preventing a researcher from describing the details of an invention to those who would stand to gain by applying for a patent before the research sponsor.

"We're aiming at disclosure with people outside the university and outside the country," says Cairo. "It's scandalous, an outrage! It's a gag rule — there isn't a university that operates under a rule like this. The enforcement of this agreement would make a professorship at this university worth about five cents."

Although there are several points he has issue with, Zuckerman's primary concern is that the clause states a professor will not disclose any information, knowledge or data relating to such discoveries or inventions to others without the written approval of the Foundation, until such time as a patent application has been filed or it has been determined by the Foundation that no such application is warranted. Zuckerman claims that the agreement would put a "gag rule" on university researchers.

"It's ridiculous," says Cairo. "It's a gag rule — there isn't a university that operates under a rule like this. The enforcement of this agreement would make a professorship at this university worth about five cents."

Cairo emphasizes that the agreement does not prevent publication of research results, as long as the publication includes a reference to the fact that patent rights are reserved. "If a researcher can throw anything into the public domain, he would have lost the patent right."

"I've been shocked to see how many professors...either have a very bad attitude toward the Foundation or...they hate us," says Cairo. "Or...hate us." He went on to say that the Foundation has "lost its battle with the professors," but added that the Foundation is still fighting and that the professors are "in a losing battle."
